Refuting the Watchtower: Applied Apologetics

in a Third World Environment

This ministry project provides an educational program suitable for use in a developing world environment. The material explores the Watchtower Society, exposing its history and theology. The intent is to prevent individuals from being drawn into the Watchtower Society and to provide material refuting and challenging the teachings of the Watchtower Society. The project is composed of three sections: an academic paper, lesson plans with PowerPoints and a teaching segment.

The material is largely drawn from original Watchtower sources. This is necessary because the members of the Watchtower Society (Jehovah's Witnesses) view all non-Witness material with suspicion and will not consider their content in an argument except when necessary to make a point or expose an argument was apostate (non-JW) literature cited. The paper is footnoted heavily so an aspiring apologist will know where to look for materials to make a point or challenge an argument.

Chapter one, "Recruiting Techniques of the Watchtower Society," explores the nature of a cult and looks at the recruiting techniques of the Jehovah's Witnesses. Chapter two, "The Watchtower Society and its Leaders," provides an overview of the Watchtower Society and a history of its leaders. Chapter three, "Three Factors Central to Watchtower Theology," explores three factors that enhanced and shaped the development of the Watchtower Society. Chapter four, "Important Theology Unique to the Jehovah's Witnesses, discusses theology important to the Watchtower Society. Chapter five, "Dates and Issues within The Jehovah's Witness Community," explores erroneous prophecy and difficult social issues within the Watchtower Society. Chapter six is a summary and conclusion. Chapter seven discusses data collection and conclusions.

The teaching portion collected data utilizing pretesting and posttesting, a change survey and a class evaluation. The pretesting showed a lack of knowledge about the Watchtower Society. The posttest showed a markedly improved level of knowledge. This change in knowledge was confirmed through additional oral questioning, confirming the accuracy of the testing. A survey exploring openness to the Watchtower Society showed a marked decline in openness to following their teaching.

Introduction

Belize is a country with an extensive exposure to Christianity. In 2010, a religious survey of Belize found 70.2% of the population self-identified as Christian. However, this statistic may be misleading. In conversations with a significant number of people, it became apparent that although many claimed to be Christian, their knowledge of Christianity was minimal, and their faith made little difference in their practical life choices. When asked, many admitted to not actively practicing their faith. Deeper investigation often revealed that there was a paucity of actual scriptural knowledge. Many of those who can recall Scripture lack an understanding of the Scriptures meaning or context. This level of spiritual malaise is unhealthy, and many Belizeans are not equipped to understand or deal with the frequent proselytizing by cults. In Belize, both Jehovah's Witnesses (JW) and Mormons are quite active. In fact, Belize is a designated hub for Jehovah's Witness missionaries going to Central America.

Unfortunately, many churches in the Cayo District of Western Belize are not concerned about countering the aggressive proselytization. Religious malaise, poor religious education and a lack of interest precludes teaching church members and non-Jehovah's Witnesses about the many deceptions and errors of the Watchtower Society. However, there is a potential avenue for someone to teach apologetics. Many of the schools in Belize have denominational support. These schools also have mandatory religious instruction. This could provide an opportunity to teach youth about the errors of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

The goal of this ministry project is to provide pastors and teachers with a resource for refuting the errors of the Watchtower Society. Since Jehovah's Witnesses will not use or discuss "apostate literature," it is essential to refute their arguments using material authored by the Watchtower Society. Because it is difficult to access this material in Belize, the paper will provide a well-documented examination of the Jehovah's Witnesses, using primary sources whenever possible. The abundant footnoting of primary sources is crucial for supplying pastors and teachers with otherwise unavailable resources. These primary resources will be useful during dialogue with Jehovah's Witnesses and for the training of church members and youth.

The material in the body of the paper is too complex to be taught to most people in Belize without modification. Most Belizeans lack a quality education. Most drop out of school before graduating (66% of all students fail to graduate from High School, with 33% of all students leaving school after the sixth grade).

The ministry project consists of three parts. The first is an academic paper containing the educational material found in the body of this ministry project. The second includes class outlines and PowerPoints located in appendices two and four. The third is the educationally appropriate teaching portion. The teaching portion of the ministry project extracts basic information and presents the information verbally, in a form satisfactory for use with a fifth or sixth grade reading level. The body of the paper contains detailed research that provides a foundation for the PowerPoints and oral teaching. However, even the PowerPoints are complicated for the students. Therefore, the transition to a usable teaching tool comes during the oral presentation. The presentation contains teaching tailored to the student's learning level. The teaching utilizes a conversational format. Verbal clues, feedback, and the degree of student involvement guide the conversation. The content of the paper is presented in an understandable manner by utilizing frequent examples and stories based on common experiences.

There is a separate PowerPoint for each of the five classes. The PowerPoint slides act as a guide for discussion and are a springboard for student involvement. They invite participation and questions.

The content of the academic paper is designed to prepare the instructor. The content provides crucial information that allows the instructor to understand the Watchtower Society and its doctrines. A key component of the project, the use of a conversational format, cannot be successful if the instructor does not understand the material. In another setting, the instructor could use this materials to train individuals to engage in apologetics directly with Jehovah's Witnesses.

For the purpose of the classes, important information from each section of the paper is selected and grouped in a logical manner. All of the topics included in the academic portion are addressed. The slides provide a framework for the instructor to begin a conversation. No effort was made to present the material in a scholarly fashion. Instead, the presentations are culturally appropriate and designed to address real life concerns.

The paper consists of five chapters followed by a conclusion and an evaluation of the classroom portion. Chapter 1, "Recruiting Techniques of the Watchtower Society," describes Watchtower recruiting techniques. It has four sections. The first section is a summary of recent Watchtower recruitment in Belize, the second section describes efforts to make Christians uncomfortable with their own churches, and the third section describes efforts made to have the Christian bond with the Watchtower Society. The fourth section provides techniques a Christian can use to help avoid being caught in the Watchtower's web of deception. Chapter 2, "The Watchtower Society and its Leaders," looks at the history and structure of the Watchtower Society. It is composed of six sections. The first three sections,

Who Are the Jehovah's Witnesses, The History of the Watchtower Society, and the Influence of the Watchtower Society, outline the history and the fundamental ethos of the Watchtower Society. The fourth section, The History of the Leaders, gives the history of the leaders of the Watchtower Society. The fifth and sixth sections, The Organizational Structure of the Jehovah's Witnesses and Outreach briefly describe both the organizational structure and how outreach is done. Chapter 3, "Three Factors Central to Watchtower Theology," describes three factors that helped to create the Watchtower Society. The first section, The Development of Charles Taze Russell's Theology, describes Russell's theological naiveté and discusses the sources of his developing theology. The second section, The Centrality of the Watchtower Society, demonstrates the canny insight that Rutherford possessed as he made the organization central to the Jehovah's Witnesses faith. The third section, Theology in Flux, "New Light," discusses the means by which the Watchtower has separated itself from Christendom and how it controls and manipulates its members. Chapter 4, "Important Theology Unique to the Jehovah's Witnesses," discusses areas of theology that show significant differences between the Watchtower and traditional Christianity. Seven brief sections discuss the Gospel, the 144,000 and the great multitude, the ransom doctrine, who is Jesus, salvation, the Kingdom and the nature of man. Chapter 5, "Dates and Issues within The Jehovah's Witness Community," is divided into two main sections. The first, Major Dates and Prophecies discusses the dates that have been set for the so-called "invisible" return of Jesus and the many dates identified for the end of the world and Armageddon. The second section, Issues within the Witnesses Community, addresses problems within the JW community. The first portion of section two deals with medical issues such as vaccines, organ transplants and blood transfusions, the second portion deals with the issue of disfellowshipping, the third portion addresses the current child sexual abuse problem and the fourth portion addresses the issue of dishonest scholarship. Chapter 6 is a brief conclusion exploring the negative effects of Watchtower theology and the damage that has been borne by its membership because of its bad policies. Chapter 7 is an evaluation of the teaching section of the project. It describes the setting of the project, the results of the pretesting and posttesting, the results of the change survey and the student evaluation of the course. It concludes with the author's evaluation of the project. There are five appendices. The first consist of the statistics that were collected during the project. The second is a transcript of the PowerPoints used for the project. The third consists of the five pretest and posttests that were administered. The fourth includes the five class outlines. The fifth appendix consists of the evaluation forms that were used.

To evaluate the effectiveness of the material, each individual class had a multiple-choice pretest and posttest. In addition, prior to the first class and following the final class the students were asked to determine their degree of openness, expressed as a percentage, to changing their views if they were approached by a pleasant, well-spoken and knowledgeable Jehovah's Witness. Finally, at the end of the class, each student was asked to complete an evaluation form evaluating the effectiveness of the instruction.

The project established some basic objectives for the students to meet. Because these goals were intertwined with the pretesting and posttesting, it was possible to motivate the students to accomplish the objectives.

Class One Objectives were to select the correct answer on the quiz.

1. The student will be able to identify a key component of a theological cult.
2. The student will be able to identify a key component of a sociological cult.
3. The student will be able to identify a key factor that attracts people to the Watchtower.

4. The student will recognize that the Watchtower keeps its people dependent upon itself for Bible knowledge.
5. The student will recognize that the Watchtower frequently challenges the Trinity while recruiting.

Class Two Objectives were to select the correct answer on the quiz.

1. The student will recognize the number of Jehovah's Witnesses globally and in Belize.
2. The student will recognize the two primary magazines printed by the Watchtower.
3. The student will recognize the founder of the Watchtower Society.
4. The student will recognize the second president of the Watchtower Society.
5. The student will recognize the Watchtower's type of government.

Class Three Objectives were to select the correct answer on the quiz.

1. The student will recognize that the Watchtower teaches that individuals cannot accurately interpret the Bible.
2. The student will recognize that the Watchtower Society requires absolute obedience to its teachings.
3. The student will recognize how the Watchtower Society maintains an authoritarian or totalitarian control over Jehovah's Witnesses.
4. The student will be able to recognize the concept of "new light".
5. The student will recognize that Russell's Theology was a collection of beliefs others had made popular.

Class Four Objectives were to select the correct answer on the quiz.

1. The student will recognize what a Jehovah's Witness means when they talk about the Good News.
2. The student will recognize what the Watchtower teaches about the non-anointed members who die.
3. The student will recognize the great multitude and its destiny.
4. The student will be recognize that the benefits of the New Testament apply only to the little flock.
5. The student will recognize the biblical problems associated with the Watchtower teaching of the 144,000.

Class Five Objectives were to select the correct answer on the quiz.

1. Students will recognize the significance of 1874.
2. The students will recognize why 1914 is so important.
3. The student will recognize the number of deaths that have resulted from refusing to allow blood transfusions.
4. The student will recognize the reason the Watchtower adopted the policy of disfellowshipping.
5. The student will recognize the damage done by the two-witness rule.

The goal of the ministry project was to educate the students so that they would not be open to the Jehovah's Witnesses proselytizing them. At the beginning of the seminar, seven out of twelve would have considered doing a Bible Study with the Jehovah's Witnesses. By the end of the seminar, none of the students were open to studying with the Jehovah's Witnesses. This result indicated that the project had met its goal. In each of the five classes, the class objective was to have the student select the correct answer from a list of choices. The overall pretest average was 43. The overall posttest average was 100. A design flaw, that was not corrected, enabled them to do very well on the posttest. The quizzes were projected on a screen. The class was interactive, and there was excellent participation during the presentation. During the posttest there was a high level of enthusiasm, and students would call out their answers. Because of the excellent participation and the evident excitement of getting the right answers, it did not seem productive to change the format. Based on the degree of comprehension and the excellent participation, in future testing I would present more material and make the testing more complex.

Chapter 1

Recruiting Techniques of the Watchtower Society

The Watchtower Society is an aggressive cult. The individual members of the Watchtower Society are known as Jehovah's Witnesses. They believe it is their responsibility to proclaim the good news of the Kingdom. In Belize, Jehovah's Witnesses staff carts in public places and go door to door in their communities. Their goal is to make contact with individuals that might be open to hearing about the Watchtower Society. Generally, they follow a predictable pattern. When they make contact, they attempt to establish a dialogue and provide written material for the person to read. During return visits, they encourage the person to enter into a Bible Study. The Bible Study often lasts 3 to 6 months and uses Watchtower Society materials rather than just the Bible. They tell the potential recruit that the use of the Watchtower Society materials is very helpful because it is much more understandable than the Bible and the material has Bible verses throughout. The recruit is also asked not to tell anyone about the studies. They will explain that Christians who are doing the will of God are often persecuted. Therefore, it is best not to share about the Bible Study. Finally, when ready, the recruit is invited to the Kingdom Hall. There they are shown great attention and made to feel wanted and important. Over time they are assimilated and learn to think and act like a Jehovah's Witness.

Initially this does not seem very threatening. In fact, aside from using Watchtower Society materials and being secretive, it does not seem so different from how evangelical Christians might share their own faith with others. There is outreach, teaching, and ultimately, incorporation into a church. The difference is that the Watchtower Society is a cult. It teaches an entirely different Gospel, creates dependency upon an organization, and exerts control over every aspect of Jehovah's Witnesses lives. Rather than leading followers to freedom and salvation, the message of the Watchtower Society leads to entrapment in a human made, human directed organization. Even worse, the message leads to serious theological error and ultimate destruction.

What Is a Cult?

Jehovah's Witnesses vehemently deny they are a cult. Instead, they claim to be the only true Christians and believe that the Watchtower Society is God's organization on earth. Are they correct? The answer is, no; they are not the only true Christians. Instead, the Jehovah's Witnesses are a cult. This means that they differ significantly from orthodox or traditional Christian theology. Alan Gomes, associate professor of historical theology and chairperson of the department of theology at Talbot School of Theology, Biola University, defines a theological cult in the following way:

A cult of Christianity is a group of people, which claiming to be Christian, embraces a particular doctrinal system taught by an individual leader, group of leaders, or organization, which (system) denies (either explicitly or implicitly) one or more of the central doctrines of the Christian faith as taught in the sixty-six books of the Bible.<sup>1</sup>

Since Jehovah's Witnesses freely deny the trinity, the deity of Christ, the efficacy of Jesus sacrifice, the bodily resurrection of Christ, salvation through grace alone, and the personality of the Holy Spirit, they clearly deny doctrines that are central to the Christian faith.

Therefore, by definition, the Jehovah's Witnesses are a theological cult. In addition to being a theological cult, one should ask if they are a cult sociologically as well. Sociologically, cults are known for behaviors that are ultimately harmful to the psychological or physical well-being of the cultist. Typically, cults have an authoritarian leadership that stifles independent thought and action. They are exclusive, identifying their particular group as the only true group. They often isolate the new recruits and minimize contact with the outside world, creating an echo chamber where the claims of the cult can be uncritically accepted without being confronted with error or incoherence. They also employ an element of fear to maintain control of their believers. The fear can be a fear of being made socially unacceptable. This happens when there is a possibility of being dissociated, disfellowshipped or shunned. It can also be fear of satanic attack or loss of salvation if they fail to follow the leader of the group.<sup>2</sup> All of the above are true of the Watchtower Society. Therefore, the Watchtower Society is a cult theologically and sociologically. As a side note, the Watchtower Society was not always a sociological cult. It is true that the original founding group, the International Bible Students,<sup>3</sup> has always been a theological cult, but they were not a cult sociologically. Charles Taze Russell valued free and independent study. All of the individual groups that comprised the Watchtower organization were independent. Russell initially had a tolerance of diversity, so initially there was little central control. He saw the groups as voluntary associations of believers gathered to do the work of God.<sup>4</sup> As the groups grew, it was necessary for there to be some structure to connect the groups, arrange for conventions and take care of the business of publishing the materials, but there was no control of the individual. People could come and go without repercussion, and people could think independently. It was not a totalitarian environment. Russell was revered and had been identified by many as the faithful servant of Matthew 24. People voluntarily followed his teaching. Therefore, even though a large following developed around his charismatic personality and his teaching, there was no controlling organization. The people's faithfulness and devotion to Russell held the group together. While Russell espoused tolerance and seemed to value it in terms of church structure, he had little patience with people who disagreed with his personal theology. Many times he would establish relationships with other leaders only to break those relationships when the other parties did not support his particular theological positions.

All of us must be ready to obey any instructions we may receive, whether these appear sound from a strategic or human standpoint or not.”

Most people that become involved in a cult will eventually become defenders of its theology. However, most initially have little interest in the group's theology. They join because the cult meets a need for love, acceptance or security. Those same reasons make it difficult for a cult member to leave. Leaving may cause feelings of rejection and fear of the future. Leaving may also result in the cult members' being separated from their family, friends, and social network. Therefore, to think of a cult solely in terms of theology is to misunderstand cults.

When it comes to exiting a cult, bad theology may not be enough of a motivator for someone to leave a cult. It is unlikely that a cultist will easily change his or her theological views. Even if someone shows them Bible verses that refute their theology, there may be no outward sign of doubt or uncertainty. This is because leaving has many negative ramifications, including the possible loss of family and friends. Leaving a cult usually occurs slowly and with much soul searching. In fact, many people opt for comfort and security rather than truth.

Recent Recruiting Efforts in Belize

The last year that statistics are available from the Watchtower Society is 2017. Government statistics for 2018 claim a population of 6,593 Jehovah's Witnesses in Belize. This would be equal 1.7% of the total population. However, the Watchtower Society claims a far smaller number. In Belize, they claim 2,555 average monthly publishers or 0.66% of the population. This, according the Watchtower, is an annual increase of 2 percent over the last year. Therefore, the number of publishing Jehovah's Witnesses grew by about fifty members. However, approximately 2 percent of the total membership leaves or is disfellowshipped annually. Therefore, to maintain growth, the actual number of individuals recruited was approximately 100. In the past, the recruitment rate was quite high. In the 1940s and 50s, 20 percent or more of the people approached would respond to an invitation to a Bible study. That figure has now dropped to about 3 percent worldwide. This means it is likely that recruiting those 100 people required 3,334 individual contacts.

While it is impossible to determine who will be successfully recruited, it is most likely that the people who will be recruited have no strong family or church attachments. The cultist's offer of friendship and support tend to draw the lonely, insecure, or guilty. The individual recruits may come to believe that their situation can be resolved and peace found if they will embrace the group's beliefs. It is also true that people undergoing a significant life crisis are at greater risk of being recruited.

A surprising number of people recruited into the Watchtower Society come from a Christian background. Often those who are drawn to the Watchtower Society come from a church that has failed to provide a sense of community and a place of involvement. To the church's embarrassment, many of those who are successfully recruited to the Watchtower Society lack an understanding of both the Bible and their church's doctrine. However, not all who are drawn to cults are theologically ignorant. A few are religious seekers or idealists who are hoping to find truth and change their lives.

The First Goal Is Disrupting Old Bonds

Whether the Jehovah's Witness is at their cart, or at a person's door, the goal is to place a piece of literature and begin a relationship. Prior to that initial contact, the Jehovah's Witness has trained and rehearsed for just about every conceivable situation.<sup>5</sup> They have opening statements and replies for people who are in a hurry, who are not interested in religion, and who do not like Jehovah's Witnesses. If someone mentions a deceased relative, the Watchtower representative is prepared to ask if that person would like to see the person again. They have contemplated virtually every possible situation. As the conversation opens, the Witness is looking for an opportunity that will open a door for future contact.

Once they make the initial contact, there will be more friendly contacts. Eventually, a suggestion will be made that the recruits request a free home Bible study. Those studies are generally held weekly for a period of three to six months.

As the Bible study progresses, the Jehovah's Witness will encourage the recruits to evaluate their own religious beliefs. This is a necessary step in undermining the recruits' prior religious understanding. It also creates an opportunity to build up the Watchtower Society in the eyes of the recruits.

The literature from the Watchtower Society will suggest that many of the things that the recruit believes are wrong. Through a process of positive and negative reinforcement, the recruit will learn what they need to know in order to fit in with their new friend and mentor. Their confidence in their own church will be undermined. The JWs teach them that their church has lied and deceived them.

As the study progresses they absorb what is taught and learn not to ask too many questions. During this time, the Jehovah's Witness will begin to prepare them to fit into the organization by encouraging changes in behavior and dress. All through this time, the organization will be presented in an idealistic light.

When it is time to visit the Kingdom Hall, the recruit will be overwhelmed with people who are glad that the recruit is there. It is designed to be a great experience. Everyone will pay attention to the recruit, and everyone will seem to be the recruit's friend. Slowly bonds will develop, and the recruit will be absorbed into the organization.

As mentioned earlier, the recruits were not likely seeking theological enlightenment when the JW first approached them. It is more likely that the positive attention they received and the opportunity to feel appreciated and loved were the main factors that brought the recruits to the point that they wanted to adopt the views and behaviors of the Witnesses.

The Witness will use the recruit's lack of familiarity with the Bible and Christian doctrine to undermine any loyalty the recruit may have had to their church. The literature being studied will claim that the church has lied and misled them. During the Bible study, it is almost certain that the trinity and the deity of Christ will be questioned. The issue of the trinity is an excellent topic for the Witnesses because it is a difficult doctrine to explain and few people have taken the time to become familiar with it. This makes it is easy for the Witnesses to discredit teaching about the trinity in the eyes of the new recruit. During discussion, the Witness will raise a number of arguments against the trinity. A source of typical arguments can be found in the book Should You Believe in the Trinity<sup>6</sup> where on page 3 the Watchtower quotes a supposed scholar as saying,

Supporters of the Trinity say that it is founded not only on religious tradition but also on the Bible. Critics of the doctrine say that it is not a Bible teaching, one history source even declaring: “The origin of the [Trinity] is entirely pagan.”<sup>7</sup>

This is a forceful argument, but what is not mentioned is that the author of the quote, Arthur Weigall, is a non-believer with very liberal views. Weigall finds most biblical history and doctrine to be based in pagan beliefs that have been culturally appropriated by the early church. Among those beliefs he has identified are the virgin birth, the birth narrative of Jesus, the miracles of Jesus, the wilderness temptation, the crucifixion, the piercing of Jesus side, the ascension, Jesus as an atoning sacrifice, Jesus as the slain Lamb of God, baptism, and communion. Therefore, for the Watchtower to be consistent, if they accept Weigall’s theology, they must also reject each of those beliefs. However, they will not. Weigall’s views are presented so that a naïve reader will assume those views are an unbiased and scholarly view of the trinity. Nothing could be further from the truth. The approach is intellectually dishonest. In essence, the Watchtower Society quotes an author known to be disreputable because the author makes a point that they wish to make. However, Jehovah's Witnesses would discount almost everything else he says. This example of Watchtower scholarship demonstrates the necessity of checking sources and quotes whenever the Watchtower references something.

The Watchtower also attempts to link the trinity to ancient pagan religions.<sup>8</sup> They note that three seemed to be a popular number among the ancients and that a number of pagan gods were presented as trinities. However, the trinity is not said to be three separate Gods, but one God in three persons. The trinity has no pagan counterpart. Additionally, these groupings of three gods in pagan religions were often the head of a pantheon of gods. They were also all mythological. In reality, the Watchtower understanding of Jesus as a separate lesser god or a demigod puts the Watchtower theology in a position where it has more similarity to the pagan gods mentioned than the trinity of Christianity. No credible contemporary theologian or New Testament scholar links the trinity with pagan gods.

JWs claim that the trinity cannot be biblical because the term trinity is not found in the New Testament.<sup>9</sup> This is not a logical claim. The trinity is a descriptive term describing something in the Bible. The argument does not seem to reflect clear thinking. If that were to become our criteria, the Watchtower Society would find itself with a problem. Not only would the word trinity need to be rejected, but also key Watchtower terms such as organization, theocratic, Watchtower study, circuit overseer, district overseer, governing body, publisher, pioneer, auxiliary pioneer, pioneer, Kingdom Hall, and presiding overseer would also need to be stricken.

A further objection is that the trinity is incomprehensible.<sup>10</sup> Since the Watchtower Society has a rational approach to Scripture and rejects mystery, the trinity could appear to be troubling since it is beyond our ability to understand. However, it seems foolish to suggest that we must be able to understand the divine nature for it to be real. The book of Job in the Old Testament seems to make this exact point. God is beyond our comprehension. Most Christians and most thinking people recognize that the divine nature is beyond our ability to comprehend. However, because we cannot fully understand the workings of the Trinity, nothing prevents our being able to understand that this is how God has presented Himself in the Bible.

Finally, the Watchtower attempts to undermine the trinity by quoting a number of scholarly references. This is very troubling because many of the references quoted in Should You Believe in the Trinity fail to quote the sources selected accurately. This is typical of much of Watchtower research and documentation. The either leave out portions of the article quoted or insert an ellipse to hide a portion of the article that contradicts the point the Watchtower is trying to make. As a result, the reader should check Watchtower materials, footnoting and other references to see if the material actually supports the position the Watchtower is advancing. An example of this problem can be found in a quote from the New Bible Dictionary.<sup>11</sup> The quote, located on page 3 of Should You Believe the Trinity, reads, “The word Trinity is not found in the Bible. . . . It did not find a place formally in the theology of the church till the 4th century.” This strongly implies that the first four centuries of the church passed by before the trinity became an issue. However, the whole passage actually says,

The word Trinity is not found in the Bible, and, though used by Tertullian in the last decade of the 2nd century, it did not find a place formally in the theology of the Church till the 4th century. It is, however, the distinctive and all-comprehensive doctrine of the Christian faith and 'gathers up into the seam of a single grand generalization with respect to the being and activity of God all the major aspects of Christian truth' (Lowry). Theology seeks to define the subsistence of God by stating that God is one in His essential being, but that the divine essence exists in three modes or forms, each constituting a Person, yet in such a way that the divine essence is wholly in each Person. (emphasis added)<sup>12</sup>

The article, having pointed to the centrality of the doctrine to the Christian faith, states later in the very same article,

As already indicated, Scripture does not give us a fully formulated doctrine of the Trinity, but it contains all the elements out of which theology has constructed the doctrine. The teaching of Christ bears testimony to the true personality of each of the distinctions within the Godhead and also sheds light upon the relations existing between the three Persons. It was left to theology to formulate from this a doctrine of the Trinity. The necessity to formulate the doctrine was thrust upon the Church by forces from without, and it was, in particular, its faith in the deity of Christ and the necessity to defend it, that first compelled the Church to face the duty of formulating a full doctrine of the Trinity for its rule of faith. Irenaeus and Origen share with Tertullian the responsibility for the formulation of the doctrine which is still, in the main, that of the Church catholic.<sup>13</sup>

So for the Watchtower to quote from this article and suggest that it supports the view that the trinity was not seen or considered until the fourth century is misleading and dishonest.

There is an important lesson to be learned when considering the arguments the Watchtower advanced against the trinity. In every case, whether dealing with the trinity or another topic, it is necessary to check all footnotes and references as well as to examine the books quoted and the theology of the authors. Raymond Franz, an ex-Jehovah's Witness, commented about his mindset when he was writing for the Watchtower Society in his book

Crisis of Conscience.<sup>14</sup> He revealed that research was not done so much to search for truth but to support and defend what was already believed to be the truth. If they could not find support for a position, then information undermining the opposing position needed to be marshaled.<sup>15</sup> The goal was not to search for and discover the truth, wherever that might lead. Instead, research became similar to a team sport: their team against the other team. The goal was to help their team win at all costs. When that approach is taken, the results are exactly what are found in Should You Believe the Trinity.

The second critical topic that will surface in the Bible studies is Jesus Christ. Who is he, and what is his nature? The Watchtower claims that Jesus is a created being. They state, “One’s being in the image of God and according to his likeness would never mean that one was the equal of Jehovah God. An ‘image’ is not the real thing.”<sup>16</sup> They also claim that in his pre-incarnation state he was Michael the archangel. They state, “There is Scriptural evidence for concluding that Michael was the name of Jesus Christ before he left heaven and after his return.”<sup>17</sup> In his incarnation, he was a perfect human.<sup>18</sup> Following his crucifixion, his spirit returned to heaven, but his body was forever destroyed. Therefore, Jesus now exists as a spirit creature.<sup>19</sup> The Watchtower notes that in Gospels, Jesus never claims to be God, and he is always subordinate to the Father. They also attempt to repudiate the translation of John 1:1, noting that Jesus is a lesser god. This effort can be observed in one of Russell's earliest Watchtowers where he states,

“In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with the God, and the Logos was a God. The same was in the beginning with the God. All things mere made by him [the Logos], and without him was not anything made that was made.”-John 1:1-3. . . . We adopt the word Logos as one of our Lord's many names. . . . Another difference between the above translation and the common version, is the addition of the italicized words a and the. These are supplied in order to give the reader the true sense of the Greek text. In which the presence or absence of the Greek article is very important. In the above translation the represents the article, while a shows that the article is lacking. With this translation verified and appreciated (as can be done by consulting any Greek Testament or any Greek scholar). . . .<sup>20</sup>

The fact that this leaves us with two gods is apparently not an issue for most Witnesses, but it should raise concern. God affirms in Isa. 43:10, “‘You are my witnesses,’ declares the Lord, ‘And my servant whom I have chosen, so that you may know and believe me, and understand that I am He. Before me there was no God formed, and there will be none after me.’” So there is the question of how this impacts John 1:1. If Jesus is a false god, then there is no problem as both Satan and men in positions of power are referred to as gods. They are indisputably false gods. However, if Jesus is not a false God and is instead a true God, then Isa. 43:10 would seem to indicate that there is but one God and the addition of “a” is unwarranted.<sup>21</sup> Additionally there are numerous Greek scholars who believe that grammatical rules prohibit the use of “a” in the translation.<sup>22</sup> It is for this reason that the vast majority of Bible translations utilize the traditional understanding of John 1:1. Those that differ tend to be translated by individual translators or groups with an identifiable bias against the deity of Christ.

A secondary approach in denying the deity of Christ is to claim that Jesus is a created being. However, a serious Bible student will quickly realize that no place in the Scriptures presents Jesus as a created being. The passage to which the Watchtower Society refers when claiming Jesus is a created being is Col. 1:15. The New World Translation, the Bible produced by the Watchtower Society, states, “He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of all creation.” However, the Greek term for firstborn, πρωτότοκος,<sup>23</sup> has more than one possible meaning. Louw and Nida in sections 13.79 and 87.47 explain that the first meaning is “existing prior to something else—‘existing first, existing before’. πάσης κτίσεως ‘existing before all creation’ or ‘existing before anything was created’ Col 1:15.”<sup>24</sup> However, an equally valid meaning is “existing superior to all else of the same or related class— ‘superior to, above all’. πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως ‘existing superior to all creation’ Col.

1:15.”<sup>25</sup> So πρωτότοκος can legitimately be understood in two different senses. One sense is chronological, as in the first-born child in a family, and the second sense is that of preeminence. Some examples of the second sense are found in Exod. 4:22 and Jer. 31:9 where Israel is spoken of as God’s firstborn people. Likewise, in Ps. 89:27 David is called God’s firstborn king. This same concept is found in the early church fathers. Jerome writes about Polycarp, “(Polycarp) went to Rome in the time of the emperor Antoninus Pius while Anicetus ruled the church in that city. There he led back to the faith many of the believers who had been deceived through the persuasion of Marcion and Valentinus, and when Marcion met him by chance and said ‘Do you know us?’ he replied, ‘I know the firstborn of the devil.’”<sup>26</sup> So understanding firstborn as a term of preeminence is well-attested in the Old Testament and in the New Testament period. The context and other scripture will guide the choice of meaning.

The Watchtower uses a number of verses attempting to show the subordination of Jesus or his lack of total knowledge about the future. But this neglects two important considerations. First, the incarnation described in Phil. 2:5-8 demonstrates that Jesus laid aside his God nature to live as a human.

Let the same mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus, who, though he was in the form of God, did not regard equality with God as something to be exploited, but emptied himself, taking the form of a slave, being born in human likeness. And being found in human form, he humbled himself and became obedient to the point of death—even death on a cross.

Second, in the act of laying aside his God nature and living as a human, he was functionally subordinate to God, the Father. He was dependent upon the Father for all things. Therefore, he prayed to the Father and directed attention towards him.

Even while in his incarnate state, Jesus demonstrated the attributes of God. He forgave sin, and accepted worship. He controlled nature, cast out demons, healed the sick, gave sight to the blind and raised the dead. In addition, he accurately predicted his own death and resurrection. All of these are strong indications of his deity. He also fulfilled multiple Old Testament prophecies describing the coming Messiah. Additionally, the New Testament authors, writing about him, used titles previously reserved for God,<sup>27</sup> and acknowledged him as God directly.<sup>28</sup> The early church fathers also proclaimed his deity.<sup>29</sup>

The third area of disagreement is over the nature of the Holy Spirit. The Watchtower Society rejects the idea that the Holy Spirit is an individual or a person in any sense of the word. They reveal their position in an article in the “Bible Questions Answered” section of www.jw.org. The article is titled “What Is the Holy Spirit?”<sup>30</sup> They teach that the Holy Spirit is the active force of God. They deny the personality and personhood of the Holy Spirit and reject the idea that the Holy Spirit is part of the trinity.

People claim five basic arguments against the personhood and deity of the Holy Spirit. The first argument is that the Holy Spirit does not have a name.<sup>31</sup> They argue that since people are given names in the Bible, the lack of a distinct personal name means that the Holy Spirit is an impersonal force. This argument falters when their own literature concludes that demons are referred to as spirits.<sup>32</sup> Demons are not believed to be an impersonal force by the Watchtower Society. Instead, they are understood to be rational agents of the Devil. Since the vast majority of demons are not given names in the Scripture, the argument that a lack of a name negates the possibility of personality or independent existence is shown to be false.

The second argument is grammatically based. Since the word spirit has a neuter gender in Greek it must be an impersonal object, an “it.”<sup>33</sup> This betrays a misunderstanding of the use of gender in the language. Both child and demon are neuter nouns. Neither a child nor a demon are an “it.” Additionally, in the book of John a masculine adjective is utilized with the Holy Spirit suggesting that John understood that the Holy Spirit was a person.

The third argument is that the Scriptures present the Holy Spirit acting like a force but not a person.<sup>34</sup> Acts 2:1-4 speaks of a noise similar to a violent wind, followed by tongues of fire resting on people. It is also notes that people are filled with the Spirit. The argument states that a person could not cause a great wind and then fill the room. Likewise, a person could not be divided up and rest on people as fire, nor could a person fill another person. However, these issues are resolved when by looking at Scripture. In 2 Sam. 22:11, God thunders from heaven. That would seem to be very similar as creating a rushing wind. Scripture also speaks of God filling the heavens. Jer. 23:24 makes the point that God is omnipresent. If that is true of God, then what prevents the Holy Spirit from filling those he desires to? Eph. 4:10 indicates that Jesus ascended so he could fill the whole universe. Therefore, the filling of believers with the Spirit is not an impossible concept.

The fourth argument is that all the places where the Scriptures speak of the Holy Spirit as if he has personality and volition are personifications. God is actually at work and that is just a way of describing his work.<sup>35</sup> However, it is equally possible to understand those verses as being an accurate description of who the Holy Spirit actually is. The category of personification is generally reserved for situations where a literal fulfillment is not possible. For instance, in Isa. 55:12 the trees are spoken of as clapping their hands. That cannot be literal; it must be a personification. However, if someone read about a human clapping, he would not say it was a personification.

The fifth argument states that the doctrine of the Holy Spirit was not established as a formal doctrine until the fourth century. That is true. However, the Watchtower Society also claims that the early church fathers did not teach that the Holy Spirit had personality or was divine.<sup>36</sup> That is not accurate. Beginning with Ignatius, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian and the Martyrdom of Polycarp there are abundant references that demonstrate that the early church fathers believed the Holy Spirit was a divine personality.<sup>37</sup>

The Watchtower Society uses their literature to present both Jesus and the Holy Spirit through the lens of Watchtower theology. Therefore, the Witnesses are going to lead a person who is studying with them to the conclusion that Jesus is a created being and the Holy Spirit is the operative force of God. However, if one were to study just the Bible and avoid Watchtower literature, one would never find the truths the Jehovah's Witnesses proclaim. This can be illustrated by looking at a quote from Russell's writings. In 1910, Russell claimed that reading his material was like reading the Scriptures. In fact, in reading his material, a person would learn Bible truths that could not be learned by just reading the Scripture. However, he cautioned, if a person stopped reading his material and read only the Bible, he would soon fall back into his old, erroneous beliefs.<sup>38</sup> From this it appears clear that the teaching of Pastor Russell and the teaching found in the Bible must be quite different since they lead to two different ends.

Once pre-existing beliefs have been swept away and replaced with Watchtower truths, it is time for the next step. In place of their old beliefs, the recruit has a new and exciting understanding of the Bible that the world does not have. In addition, the recruit has experienced acceptance and encouragement from the Witnesses. Bonds are developing. Now the recruit will be encouraged to attend the Kingdom Hall.

Building New Attachments

After they tear down the old framework of beliefs, it is only necessary to build a dependence upon the Watchtower organization. Once that is done, everything else will fall into place. The Jehovah's Witnesses will speak of the Watchtower Society in glowing terms, describing life as a JW as positive and rewarding. Negative parts of life as a witness are glossed over. Any failures or problems the recruit may have heard about, such as failed prophecies or changes in doctrine, are explained away. God is constantly providing new light where he takes away the imperfect and moves the organization closer to perfection. Past problems are airily dismissed. Any mistakes are the result of fallible men. New light continues to move the organization forward. They teach and envision the recruit an idealized Watchtower Society.

One goal is to destroy an independent spirit and replace it with a dependence of the Watchtower Society. By the time the Bible Study is complete, the new recruits will ideally have lost confidence in their ability to interpret Scripture. In part this occurs because of the recruits' inability to defend their beliefs. Without outside assistance or resources, they will have come to believe that their previous beliefs were in error. After that, it is up to the Witnesses to complete the process and teach the recruit to be dependent on the Watchtower Society.

Obedience to Jehovah is one of the first things that the new recruit must learned. The Watchtower Society insists that its members avoid independent thinking.<sup>39</sup> The member's "Avoid Independent Thinking- From the very outset of his rebellion Satan called into question God's way of doing things. He promoted independent thinking. 'You can decide for yourself what is good and bad', Satan told Eve. 'You don't have to listen to God. He is not really telling you the truth'. (Genesis 3:1-5) To this day, it has been Satan's subtle design to infect God's people with this type of thinking.—2 Timothy 3:1,13. 21 How is such independent study should be limited to reading and accepting the teaching found in Watchtower literature. This is the only information that members are supposed to consult.<sup>40</sup> Independent reading is discouraged, even to combat worldly ideas.<sup>41</sup>

If the recruit is inclined to resist the control of the Watchtower Society, as they may have resisted their church or school in the past, they will be reminded how important the Watchtower Society really is. The recruit will soon realize that the Watchtower Society is God's organization on earth; no other group speaks authoritatively for God.

The recruit will learn that the Watchtower Society was assigned this privilege in 1918. In 1914, both Jesus and Jehovah had come to earth to inspect all the churches of the world. After the inspection it was determined that, only the Watchtower Society was faithful to God. Therefore, Jehovah appointed the Watchtower Society to be God's sole representative, God's mouthpiece on earth.<sup>42</sup> Whatever the Watchtower Society presents or Otherwise, they are engaging in independent thinking, and that is a mark of pride.<sup>47</sup> Independent thinking will lead to discipline.<sup>48</sup> Raymond Franz recounts how Edward Dunlap, a dedicated Jehovah's Witness for many years, was dismissed from his positions within the Watchtower organization and disfellowshipped because he privately expressed a difference of opinion regarding certain Watchtower teachings. Dunlap expressed these differing viewpoints to close friends in private conversation. They were not widely shared or taught to others. However, having doubts or reaching an alternative understanding is independent thinking, and it led to his disfellowshipping.<sup>49</sup> Franz also produced a photocopy of a 1981 letter sent to the overseers of the organization that warns them to be on the lookout for people with apostate views. One key section states,

Keep in mind that to be disfellowshipped, an apostate does not have to be a promoter of apostate views. . . . Therefore, if a baptized Christian abandons the teachings of Jehovah, as presented by the faithful and discreet slave, and persists in believing other doctrine despite Scriptural reproof, then he is apostatizing. . . . he continues to believe the apostate ideas and rejects what has been provided through the 'slave class' then appropriate judicial action should be taken.<sup>50</sup>

The recruits will eventually be taught that, even if what is being taught does not seem to make sense, it is their task to accept it, and if it requires action, to act immediately.<sup>51</sup> The individual Jehovah's Witness should not be presumptuous. God speaks through the Watchtower Society. Unquestioning obedience is expected.

Every aspect of their lives is subject to the control of the society. They are to be excellent examples that reflect the best of the Watchtower organization.

How to Avoid Entrapment

How can people avoid entrapment by a cult? The most important thing a person can do is to maintain the relationships that are important for wholeness and happiness. Keep close to family and friends. Seek deepening community. Discuss new friends and new ideas with family and friends and listen closely to their replies. Get to know the Bible well and become familiar with basic doctrine. If theological issues come up, have a network of close trusted friends that can provide guidance. Develop a good relationship with a Bible believing church and participate in or create opportunities for fellowship. If these things are done, it is much less likely that anyone would become involved in the Watchtower Society or with any other cult.

Chapter 2

The Watchtower Society and Its Leaders

Who Are the Jehovah's Witnesses?

The Jehovah's Witnesses are a cult known for frequently doing door-to-door witnessing and more recently, operating bookstands in public places. In spite of their high visibility, many people do not know much about them. Who are they? Are they Christian or are they a cult? What do they teach and what are their goals? This introductory chapter will provide a description of the Witnesses and the Watchtower Society, utilizing their own documents. The chapter endeavors to present an accurate view of what the Jehovah's Witnesses say about themselves and what they teach.

The Jehovah's Witnesses are a comparatively small religious group comprising about 1 percent of the number of people believing in God in any nation. The total number of Jehovah's Witnesses worldwide is approximately 8,457,107. These are spread across 120,053 congregations in 240 lands.<sup>1</sup>

Looking at United States, the Pew Research statistics indicate that the Jehovah's Witnesses are more racially diverse than any other religious group, are primarily female and are less educated than most other religious groups.<sup>2</sup> They also have the lowest retention rate of any religious group. Two thirds of those born into the religion leave.<sup>3</sup>

"36% are white, 32% are Hispanic, 27% are black and 6% are another race or mixed race. Most Jehovah's Witnesses—roughly two-thirds (65%)—are women, while only 35% are men. . . . Jehovah's Witnesses tend to be less educated. A solid majority of adult Jehovah's Witnesses (63%) have no more than a high school diploma."

Jehovah's Witnesses meet in relatively simple buildings known as Kingdom Halls. A circuit consists of twenty Kingdom Halls linked together under the care of a circuit overseer. There are no paid ministers in the congregation. The congregation is guided by spiritually mature elders who oversee each Kingdom Hall. Jehovah's Witnesses claim to minimize the use of titles and ranks but in reality, utilize titles rather freely. Both men and women minister outside the Kingdom Hall, but only men can speak and pray in the Kingdom Hall and only men can be elders. No collections are taken but donations can be placed in a box located at the Kingdom Hall.<sup>4</sup>

Jehovah's Witnesses are perhaps best known for their vigorous door-to-door outreach. Each active Jehovah's Witness is expected to publish or share God's good news. This is done by distributing the two primary magazines, Awake and the Watchtower. People are invited to join the Witnesses in Bible Study and to begin attending the Kingdom Hall. Jehovah's Witnesses are taught to be respectful and to state that they do not want to pressure people into changing their religion.

Jehovah's Witnesses are part of the Watchtower Society. The Watchtower Society is the organization that Charles Taze Russell incorporated to guide his Bible Students. The Watchtower became a source of prophetic and doctrinal truth for the students. Today it is taught that it is not possible to understand God's Word<sup>5</sup> or find salvation apart from the Jehovah's Witnesses have noted that the translation has a number of errors and insertions that are designed to support the Witnesses theological positions but that cannot be justified by reading the original texts.<sup>11</sup>

Jehovah's Witnesses take some pride in the claim that when they have discovered errors or found areas where their beliefs that were out of line with their understanding of the Bible, they have changed their beliefs. This is related to the concept of new light, the idea that God has been consistently enlightening the Watchtower governing board so that they have an increasingly better understanding of God's Kingdom. This "new light" has led to a number of doctrinal changes.<sup>12</sup> This is troublesome since, if the truth they have proclaimed in the past is now error, it means that it was false when it was first proclaimed.<sup>13</sup> Since the Jehovah's Witnesses have a very long list of adjusted understandings, it appears they are an unreliable source of information. What is proclaimed as true today stands a good chance of being error tomorrow. That is a problem since God's true prophets do not lead his people into falsehoods.

The History of the Watchtower Society

The current Watchtower Society can trace its origin to Charles Taze Russell, though they prefer to claim an alliance with the small remnant of true Christians that have lived across dark centuries of apostasy. According to the Watchtower, soon after the last apostle had died the church fell into apostasy.<sup>14</sup> The spiritual decline continued until, by 1870, it was difficult to find any spiritual truth.<sup>15</sup> It was only with the restoration of the Watchtower Society that true Christianity began to be proclaimed again.<sup>16</sup> In spite of the claims of near apostolic succession, it is clear that the spiritual DNA of the Watchtower Society originated directly from the efforts of Charles Taze Russell.

Russell's spiritual revival began at a meeting of the Second Adventists in 1869. Previously estranged from his faith, he came to believe he had finally discovered the truth. In 1870 he began meeting in Allegheny, Pennsylvania with friends and family.<sup>17</sup> Russell demonstrated himself to be an effective Bible study leader and organizer. By 1880, Russell determined that he should meet with other groups and gather them together for mutual

"Following the death of the first-century Christian apostles, apostate church leaders increasingly deviated from Christ's teachings, just as God's Word had foretold. (Acts 20:29, 30) A corrupted church eventually became more and more entangled with the secular state."

"Clearly, when the time of the end began in 1914, none of the churches of Christendom were measuring up to these Bible standards for the one true Christian congregation. What, though, about the Bible Students, as Jehovah's Witnesses were then known?"

<sup>16</sup> Ibid., 707. "A biography of Russell, published shortly after his death, explained: 'He was not the founder of a new religion, and never made such claim. He revived the great truths taught by Jesus and the Apostles, and turned the light of the twentieth century upon these.'" support and encouragement.<sup>18</sup> Soon the Bible study groups grew in number and size. Russell was elected pastor in Pittsburg in 1882.<sup>19</sup> As his Bible Students increased in number, the Allegheny Bible Study began to be responsible for the activities of what would become the Watchtower Society. Russell chartered the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society in Pennsylvania on December 15, 1884.<sup>20</sup> In a short time, as the group expanded, the Watchtower Society had two offices. However, it was soon evident that a larger facility needed to be built. In 1889, a four-story building was erected that became the headquarters of the Watchtower Society for 19 years. By April of 1900, Russell had opened an overseas branch in London.<sup>21</sup> The new and growing Watchtower Society recognized its need for a formal office and an area where it could do its own printing. A key ingredient to the success of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society has been its publishing facilities. Those who are introduced to the Witnesses quickly learn that the literature is indispensable. No one can understand the Bible<sup>27</sup> or gain eternal life<sup>28</sup> apart from the Watchtower Society and the literature is their link to the Society. This has resulted in vast amounts of printed material being circulated wherever Jehovah's Witnesses are located. The voice of the Watchtower Society is its published material. The same message is read Sunday in every Kingdom Hall around the world. People gain their knowledge of the Jehovah's Witnesses, not primarily through sermons or talks but through reading aloud the scheduled study guides and asking the assigned questions. Awake and The Watchtower speak with the authority of the Watchtower Society. It is mandatory to both believe and obey everything proclaimed in those magazines. Jehovah's Witnesses and their proselytes must be faithful in reading the literature the Watchtower Society provides. The magazines have been the glue that holds the Watchtower Society together.

The Watchtower Society has printed numerous books, magazines, studies and tracts. The two best know are The Watchtower and Awake magazines. The Watch Tower began as Zion's Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence in July 1879.<sup>29</sup> The name has changed twice times in its history. In 1909, the publication became The Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence celebrating Christ's invisible presence.<sup>30</sup> In 1939, Judge Rutherford removed the reference to Christ and in its place substituted Jehovah, celebrating their message vindicating Jehovah. The new title became, The Watchtower Announcing Jehovah's Kingdom.<sup>31</sup>

The Watchtower is a theological and biblical publication. The goal of The Watchtower is to explain the Bible and related doctrinal issues. The primary focus is what the Bible teaches about God's Kingdom.<sup>32</sup> The magazine, Awake!, focuses on general topics

By any standard, the Watchtower Society has been very successful. While there is no current information available about the worth of the Watchtower, an article from 2003 indicates that they have substantial resources. In addition, they have recently sold a billion dollars worth of property as they consolidated for the move to Warwick.<sup>35</sup>

In 2017, the Watchtower Society's "Fast Facts" page shows the Jehovah's Witnesses to be active in 240 nations. ## The Influence of the Watchtower Society

Unless the reader is familiar with the absolute control that the Watchtower Society wields over the membership of the Society, it is impossible to understand the commitment of the average Jehovah's Witness to the theological positions espoused in the Watchtower magazine and in Awake. It is also impossible to understand the reluctance of the Jehovah's Witness to develop friendships with those who are not Jehovah's Witnesses and their unwillingness to listen to, read, or consider material from any source other than the Watchtower Society. The members live in a world where their failure to conform to the standards set by the Watchtower can result in their being disciplined, expelled, and shunned by the Watchtower Society.

It is difficult for a non-witness to understand the impact that being disfellowshipped has. A disfellowshipped witness has been taught that being disfellowshipped separates them from God's Watchtower Society on earth and therefore places them outside the kingdom. There is no longer any hope for salvation. In addition, they will be shunned. Even their family will break ties with them. Because the witnesses are a closed system, this means that, as they exit the Witnesses, they will have no social support system, and everyone they have known, everyone they thought loved them, will turn their back on them. In addition, once free of the cult, the lack of education common among Witnesses will make finding gainful employment difficult.

This kind of totalitarian control does not appear to be what Charles Taze Russell had in mind when he began his Bible studies. He was a precocious youth and an intelligent and talented adult. He was successful in business and continued to be a good businessperson even while pursuing his ministry. While Russell is faulted for being egotistical and stubborn, he was able to speak to people's hearts and encourage them. Many people were drawn to his personality and style. Russell was deeply loved. He could hold people spellbound for hours preaching and lecturing, and he could encourage and support people in person. He also had boundless energy and enthusiasm. His writings and his actions showed that he was not interested in developing a personal kingdom. He appeared to believe that the end was coming soon. It does not appear that he wanted to develop a regimented army of clones. Russell legitimately seemed to have valued personal autonomy and freedom.

Ironically, Russell encouraged people to avoid organizations. He had looked at the existing churches and their structures and believed that the churches of Christendom were holding Christians down and keeping them from being what they could be. He wrote that organizations were unnecessary.<sup>37</sup> He believed that it was a better testimony that an unorganized people should accomplish the work of God.<sup>38</sup> This was good insight. Even today, people become confused and are drawn into denominations where they learn to support the denomination and the denomination's beliefs but are not given the freedom to develop a relationship with Jesus and develop their own ministry gifts. As a result, some churches have become barriers to an authentic relationship with Christ. So his advice was good. He encouraged believers to develop their own system of belief and not to allow themselves to be coerced by the beliefs of others without good scriptural support.<sup>39</sup> Russell's ecclesiae or little churches were independent, loosely structured groups that sought to follow Russell's teachings. If individuals had a disagreement with their group, they were welcome to go and start another group as long as they did not interfere with the group they left. There was no governing body to exert control over the groups. Russell believed that such control would be out of harmony with God's will.<sup>40</sup> He rejected systems that replaced relationships with rules and policies.<sup>41</sup> Russell recognized that history is full of movements that started well, but eventually lost their compass and became self-sustaining organizations primarily intent on perpetuating their own group. Those groups, having lost their mooring, became harmful and were a detriment to the cause of Christ. He referred to this as a fatal mistake.<sup>42</sup>

"In view of these facts and also of the nature of the harvest work, and the addition. In fact, that each one so gathered is expected to enter into the harvest work as a reaper, and will do so to the extent of his ability and opportunity, it is plain that the forming of a visible organization of such gathered out ones would be out of harmony with the spirit of the divine plan; and, it done, would seem to indicate on the part of the Church a desire to conform to the now popular idea of organization or confederacy. . . . While, therefore, we do not esteem a visible organization of the gathered ones to be a part of the Lord's plan in the harvest work, as though we expected as an organization to abide here for another age, we do esteem it to be his will that those that love the Lord should speak often one to another of their common hopes and joys, or trials and perplexities, communing together concerning the precious things of his Word, and so help one another, and not forget the assembling of themselves together as the manner of some is; and so much the more as they see the day approaching."

Raymond Franz, once a member of the governing body, made a similar point when trying to explain why the Jehovah's Witnesses followed the same tragic pathway into error. The lengthy footnote below is profoundly helpful in understanding the development of the Watchtower Society.<sup>43</sup>

Following Russell's death there was a power struggle for control of the Watchtower Society. The struggle was won by Judge Joseph Rutherford. Rutherford, a ruthless individual, was used to getting his own way. He wielded power in an authoritarian manner and was able to stamp his personality and will on the Watchtower Society.

wb/English/Magazines/The%20Watchtower/1893%20The%20Watchtower.pdf. "There is no organization today clothed with such divine authority to imperiously command mankind. There is no organization doing this today; though we are well aware that many of them in theory claim that they ought to be permitted to do so; and many more would like to do so. This was the fatal mistake into which the Church began to fall in the second century; and the effort to realize this false conception culminated in the boastful, imperious counterfeiting of the coming Kingdom in Papacy, which for centuries sought to dominate the world, by claimed 'divine authority'. This idea more or less pervaded and poisoned the ideas of all the Protestant 'clergy' as well; who copying Papacy's false ideas of the Church, claim also that the Church of Christ is now organized, though they now make less boastful claims to 'divine authority' to teach and rule mankind in general, that the Papacy does."

<sup>43</sup> Fred Franz, In Search Of Christian Freedom, 36-37, accessed August 4, 2018, <https://www.scribd.com/doc/281913142/In-Search-of-Christian-Freedom-by-Ray-Franz>. "But above and beyond the rather unpredictable, even unstable, nature of the attitudes and expressions proceeding from such a source, I believe that there is a more basic cause for the very strong authoritarian approach manifested. It all illustrates a pattern of human behavior, one that has been repeated down through the centuries with almost depressing regularity. It is the pattern of a group of people who leave an established religion or religions, who start out with the avowed determination that the Bible is and will be their sole definitive guide, their only true source of authoritative information; who then grow in numbers and in historical age as an entity, and who gradually produce a set of teachings that they now establish as the norm, the 'Truth,' the definitive test for measuring any person's Christianity. This is complemented by the parallel development of an authority structure to assure that all members hold to that set of teachings. In extreme cases, it may eventually come to prescribe what shall be read, studied, talked about, taught and practiced by all those adhering to that structure, which now assumes as its rightful authority the disciplining of any not holding to its humanly established norms. Such groups thus become very much like the established religions they originally left. This has been the pattern of development of many of the now-existing religions. That perennial pattern is preceded by, and underpinned by, a still more basic factor, one that contributed to the subversion of the original Christian congregation, changing it from a brotherhood, united only by the bonds of love and a common agreement on essential beliefs, into a hierarchical system of religion, thoroughly institutionalized. That fundamental factor is simply the tendency of men to seek to impose their own will on others, a tendency against which Christ Jesus found it necessary to admonish his disciples repeatedly. That conclusion is, I believe, supported by both Scripture and history."

Though he may not have been personable, Rutherford was intelligent and perceptive. He realized that the Bible Students were not going to be loyal to him personally, so he began masterfully to switch allegiance from the “faithful servant” Russell to the Watchtower Society.<sup>44</sup> Since, the governing board would not exist in any meaningful way until after the death of President Frederick Franz, the Watchtower Society was actually synonymous with the president. Therefore, people not inclined to follow Rutherford followed the Watchtower Society, not understanding they were following Rutherford. Then, the governing board was a useful fiction. The Watchtower Society and more specifically the governing body would ultimately be transformed into the faithful and discrete slave of Matthew 24.

In a move likely intended to quell dissent, Rutherford began teaching that since Jesus returned invisibly in 1914, the Holy Spirit was no longer needed. After Jesus was enthroned in 1919, he began using angels to deliver his instructions to the Watchtower Society.<sup>45</sup> This teaching effectively neutered those who would claim to be Spirit guided when they were attempting to argue against the Rutherford or the Watchtower Society. Rutherford also tried to keep those who had been loyal to Russell from leaving by teaching that Russell had gone to heaven at the time of his death and was still providing guidance from heaven. Rutherford continued nurturing Russell's memory until 1929. Once firmly established, he began diminishing Russell's influence and discarding his teachings.<sup>46</sup>

Rutherford recruited Bible Students to be loyal to the Watchtower Society. The Bible Students were taught that the Watchtower Society was God's organization on earth. Slowly, building on the trust that the Bible Students had that Russell had been God's 'faithful servant'; the Watchtower Society redefined the faithful servant as a corporate entity. The 'faithful servant' became a composite of the anointed 144,000. This corporate, anointed, faithful servant was expressed through the anointed leaders at Watchtower headquarters. In doing this, the Watchtower Society effectively placed itself in the role of speaking for God. It placed itself between its followers and Jesus.

The Watchtower Society does not show great tenderness towards those who have joined its ranks. The Society is central; the members are more or less expendable. Raymond Franz commented on his experiences while on the governing board. He noted that during disciplinary hearings the board never sought input from the parties being discussed nor considered their individual situations. Those in the governing body were detached from the plight of the average Jehovah's Witness.

In practice, the governing body has become to the Jehovah's Witnesses what the Pope is to the Catholic Church, however, with much more control over the lives of individual followers. The governing body seeks compliance to the will of the Watchtower, even when the Watchtower is knowingly wrong.<sup>47</sup> An important demonstration of this occurred in a 1954 trial that took place in Scotland. The trial concerned the conscription of Douglas Walsh into the Scottish Military. The Jehovah's Witnesses were then opposed to military service or any type of alternative service. The lawyer for the Watchtower, Hayden Covington, was being questioned. Covington was a high-profile lawyer and had won a number of cases before the Supreme Court of the United States on behalf of the Jehovah's Witnesses. The transcript reveals a number of important details, but two in particular stand out. The first was that even though the Watchtower knew that a particular prophecy was an error, they still demanded that the individual Jehovah's Witness believe it to be true or be disfellowshipped.<sup>48</sup> The second was the admission that anything published in their <sup>47</sup> The term governing body is frequently used by the Watchtower Society, and it has been a concept for some time. However, there was no functioning governing body until 1971. Even then, the strong personality of Frederick Franz kept the governing body from functioning as freely as it should have. As a result, it was 1992 before the concept finally became a reality. Until that point the first three presidents had ruled with absolute and unquestionable authority, and any board decision was a sort of rubber stamp. With the fourth president, even though the structure formally changed, he continued to exert tremendous influence until his death.

"HAYDEN C COVINGTON - Former Lawyer for the Watchtower Society (Answering =A.) Q. Is it not vital to speak the truth on religious matters? A. It certainly is. Q. You have promulgated - forgive the word - false prophecy? A. We have. I do not think we have promulgated false prophecy, there have been statements that were erroneous, that is the way I put it, and mistaken. Q. It was promulgated as a matter which must be believed by all members of Jehovah's witnesses that the Lord's Second Coming took place in 1874? (A short discussion of evidence given by Fred W Franz about 1874 takes place here.) Q. That was the publication of false prophecy? A. That was the publication of a false prophecy, it was a false statement or an erroneous statement in fulfillment of a prophecy that was false or erroneous. Q. And that had to be believed by the whole of Jehovah's Witnesses? A. Yes, because you must understand, we must have unity, we cannot have disunity with a lot of people going every way, an army is supposed to march in step. Q. Back to the point now, a false prophecy was promulgated? A. I agree to that. Q. It had to be accepted by Jehovah's witnesses? A. That is correct. Q. If a member of Jehovah's witnesses took the view himself that that prophecy was wrong, and said so, would he be disfellowshipped? A. Yes, if he said so, and kept on persisting in creating trouble, because if the whole organization believes one thing, even though it be erroneous, and somebody else starts on his own trying to put his ideas across, then there is a disunity and trouble, there cannot be harmony, there cannot be marching. . . . Our purpose is to have unity. Q. Unity at all costs? A. Unity at all costs, because we believe and are sure that Jehovah God is using our organization, the governing body of our organization, to direct it, even though mistakes are made from time to time. Q. A unity based on an enforced acceptance of false prophecy? A. That is conceded to be true. Q. And the person who expresses his view, as you say, that it was wrong, and was disfellowshipped, would be in breach of the covenant, if he was baptized? A. That is correct. Q. And as you said yesterday expressly, would be worthy of death? A. I think. . . . Q. Would you say yes or no? A. I will answer magazines was to be adopted as truth and followed without question.<sup>49</sup> That degree of control is incredible. The Watchtower Society has essentially denied other human beings the right to function as truly autonomous individuals. If persons shows any independent thought, they can be disfellowshipped. This, their lawyer acknowledges, is a theological death sentence according to Watchtower theology.

The History of the Leaders

Charles Taze Russell

Russell was born February 16, 1852 to Joseph L. Russell and Anna Eliza Russell.<sup>50</sup> He was the second child in a family of five children. His older brother died at age 5 and two of his younger brothers both died at age 1. His sister, Margarete was born in 1854 and was an ardent lifelong supporter of his ministry. After Russell's death she rejected the changes made by Rutherford.<sup>51</sup> Russell's family was Presbyterian, and there is some indication that they wanted Charles to enter the ministry.<sup>52</sup> Charles Russell attended the Presbyterian Church with his parents as a child and for a while became very evangelical. However, as he developed some understanding of theology, he found he disagreed with the idea of eternal torment in hell.<sup>53</sup> This caused him to begin attending a Congregationalist Church.<sup>54</sup>

Unfortunately, this shift did not assuage his doubts, and he continued to have theological concerns. As a result, at sixteen, he left the formal church. He researched a number of religions but was not satisfied with any of them. After a year of drifting theologically, Russell attended a meeting led by Second Adventist Jonas Wendell.<sup>55</sup> By 1870, Russell was captivated by their theology. He began a detailed study of prophecy on his own.<sup>56</sup> This is quite fascinating. Russell must have been incredibly precocious. He would have been sixteen years old when he doubted, seventeen when he was openly agnostic, and eighteen when he began to study with the Second Adventist. Few teenagers have that level of theological interest. In 1876, Russell met Nelson H. Barbour and John H. Paton who were publishers of the Herald of the Morning, an Adventist paper. They explained to Russell that the prophecies of Christ's return were not in error. Christ had returned as prophesied. He came in 1874, not visibly, but invisibly. Russell was convinced and at the age of twenty-two became a financial supporter of their paper and a co-editor.<sup>57</sup>

During this time, Russell began studying the Bible intensely with a small group of family and friends. The group began meeting in 1870 and would eventually be the nucleus of the International Bible Students Association.<sup>58</sup> His initial outreach efforts were successful, and he soon had a large local congregation. Next, he began gathering likeminded people, starting congregations across seven states.<sup>59</sup> In 1881 he laid the groundwork for Zion's Watch Tower Tract Society, which was incorporated in 1884.<sup>60</sup> A tireless leader, by 1916, Russell could boast of a large community of Bible Students.<sup>61</sup>

His relationship with the Adventist became shaky as he developed his own personal theology. In spite of his essentially permissive approach to Bible study and his "little churches," Russell could be dogmatic with his personal theology. He had theological

This pattern of developing relationships and then having them dissolve acrimoniously was repeated several times. Russell did have limits to his tolerance.

In 1879, he married Maria Francis Ackley who was apparently taken by his Bible knowledge and believed Russell to be the "faithful and wise servant" of Matt. 24:45.<sup>63</sup> The marriage was reportedly celibate.<sup>64</sup> They appeared to have married to collaborate on the Watchtower and develop the ministry.<sup>65</sup> The fact that they chose to marry and then to maintain a celibate relationship raises questions that are not addressed in the written history available. Maria was the director of the Watchtower Society and served as treasurer and secretary on occasion.<sup>66</sup>

This may be why some of the later scandals involving sexual impropriety arose, as well as the hostility in their marriage.

She also was a regular contributor to the columns of Zion's Watch Tower and for a time was an associate editor of the journal. Eventually, she sought a stronger voice in what should be published in the Watch Tower."

Russell was not only a charismatic leader and excellent preacher, but he was also a shrewd businessperson. He recognized the potential profit that could be made through publishing books and tracts. He set about developing a publishing empire built around his theological positions. He recruited book and tract sales persons, called colporteurs, and sent them out to distribute his book series, pamphlets and Watchtowers.<sup>67</sup> These colporteurs went door to door and waited outside churches to share the Good News that Pastor Russell had for them. Through their efforts, the coffers of the Watchtower were filled and more people were drawn into the Watchtower web. He also pursued other successful business ventures.

Russell understood the need to be in the public eye. He attacked orthodox theology and the churches that held those views. He was boisterous and convinced of his positions. He drew attention to his writings and encouraged people to follow his teachings. He identified those in disagreement with him as being motivated by Satan.<sup>68</sup>

As preposterous as it seems, Russell believed that God had chosen to reveal His plans to Russell alone.<sup>69</sup> As a result, he taught and apparently believed that since the actual Apostles, only he, Charles Taze Russell, could understand what God was teaching and share it with the world. That amazing claim by someone with no formal education or training and who dismissed nearly 1800 years of church history and teaching is breathtaking. Russell had tremendous confidence in his hermeneutical prowess.

Those who studied with Charles Taze Russell believed that he was bringing them new truths. Many believed he was restoring the church to what it had been in the Book of Acts. However, this was not true. He had taken much of the Advent Christian doctrine he had been studying and repackaged it.<sup>70</sup> To that mix, he added some ancient heresies<sup>71</sup> and perhaps a few original beliefs.<sup>72</sup>

Russell's ministry was tumultuous. He was involved in several situations that had the appearance of impropriety. His followers avidly supported him, denying that there was any evidence of wrongdoing. His detractors embellished every account of wrongdoing, hoping to derail his ministry. The truth is likely found between the two extremes.

Two areas where Russell's detractors claimed wrongdoing involved his relationship with his wife and his supposed involvement with the Masons. There does not appear to be enough conclusive evidence to support either of the claims.

Russell's marital relationship ended in disaster as Maria pressed for more autonomy in her writing for the Watchtower and Russell resisted.<sup>73</sup> It also appears that Maria may have resented the lack of marital affection.<sup>74</sup> In 1897 she separated from Russell and ultimately accused Russell of cruelty.<sup>75</sup> In her 1903 court case seeking separation, she also inferred that Russell had engaged in some sexual impropriety with an adopted daughter and with one of the maids.<sup>76</sup> Under cross-examination, Maria denied that Russell had been sexually intimate with anyone or that he had committed adultery.<sup>77</sup> However, the court hearings were public information. Several newspapers and individuals who opposed his ministry made charges of immorality against Russell.<sup>78</sup> Many of his enemies sought to discredit him through twisting justified, and since we believe that a person is innocent until proven guilty, there does not appear to be enough information to make a case of immorality against Russell.

It was also claimed by some that Russell's father was heavily involved in Freemasonry and that there is ample evidence that Charles Taze Russell absorbed much of his father's knowledge.<sup>83</sup> Barbara Anderson, who had been a Watchtower researcher, researched the issue and wrote to the Masonic Temple, Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and received a reply that neither Charles Taze Russell nor his father had ever belonged to the Masons.<sup>84</sup> It also appears that the use of Masonic imagery was common in the era and was not as important an indicator as some have claimed.<sup>85</sup> In addition, statements made by Russell claiming to be a Mason, were taken out of context<sup>86</sup> as Russell plainly denied being a Mason.<sup>87</sup> There is no evidence showing Russell to have been a Mason, and the claims to the contrary appear to be speculation.

While it may not be appropriate to accuse Charles Taze Russell of being a Mason or of having committed adultery, the same is not true regarding his fraudulent business practices. During the course of his ministry, Russell received much publicity due to his questionable business practices.

At the beginning of the second decade of the 1900s, the Brooklyn Daily Eagle began to take an interest in Pastor Russell's ministry. In 1911, Russell marketed "miracle wheat."<sup>88</sup> The price for the wheat was much higher than the regular price of wheat.<sup>89</sup> It was claimed that the miracle wheat would produce much more than regular wheat, but government testing did not support that claim.<sup>90</sup> Russell states he offered a refund to anyone who was concerned, but no one requested a refund. He also claimed that he did not make any profit from the wheat but that it went directly into the ministry. What was not mentioned was that he owned 990 shares out of 1000 in the ministry, so in reality whatever came to the ministry actually came to him.<sup>91</sup> Russell did not appreciate the newspaper bringing the "miracle wheat" to the

In 1910-11, Pastor Russell embarked on a tour of the world.<sup>93</sup> During the time of the tour, many press releases were sent to the ports he would be visiting. After his visits, reports of his visit and sermons were sent to the American press. However, when the Brooklyn Daily Eagle began to examine his itinerary and his reports, they discovered that he did not actually deliver the sermons he had reported, and the crowds were not what he had reported.<sup>94</sup>

Later he lost another libel suit against a Canadian pastor. Russell's practice was to threaten to sue individuals who wrote articles against him. This was designed to silence them. Many times this was successful, and the party apologized and retracted their article. However, Pastor Ross of Ontario, Canada was an exception. He wanted to show that the "Pastor" was a fraud. Rutherford elevated him to the rank of apostleship saying that he was the greatest preacher and teacher since Paul.<sup>100</sup>

Whatever one may think of Charles Taze Russell, it is evident that he was an ambitious and talented individual with great communication skills. He founded both the International Bible Students Association and the Watchtower Society. Russell's influence continued to be felt in the decade following his death. With the ascension of Judge Rutherford to the presidency of the Watchtower Society, the International Bible Students Association would ultimately splinter. Many of the alienated International Bible Study students would claim that Rutherford's changes made the Watchtower Society unrecognizable. They would go on to form other groups that sought to preserve Russell's theology and teachings. The Watchtower Society itself would grow and become an authoritarian cult. Russell's influence, initially important for holding together the Watchtower Society, was on display for a decade after his death. That influence provided the stability Rutherford needed. By 1929, Judge Rutherford, was firmly established. From 1929 onward, as part of consolidating his own power, Rutherford would seek to diminish Russell's influence.

personal example was perhaps even more inspiring than his teachings. He never worried, was never impatient. His peace of mind was wonderful. Our beloved Pastor took a genuine, personal, interest in all of the Lord's people. He rejoiced in their progress, and treasured their interesting experiences in his wonderful memory."

"The greatest man that has lived since the Apostle Paul has passed from the earth. We have come aside this evening from the busy rush of this great city to pay tribute to the memory of Pastor Russell. Let us in calmness and sobriety seek to know why this man was great, why we say with such assurance that he had the approval of God."

Joseph Franklin Rutherford

When Charles Taze Russell died, the Bible Students were devastated. His death had not been anticipated, and he was deeply loved by his followers. No matter who was chosen to follow him, they were going to find it impossible to fill his position. That is why it seems particularly unfortunate that Joseph F. Rutherford maneuvered himself into the position of leadership. He seemed like the least likely to succeed. He had little charisma or personal appeal. It was rumored that he had recently been sent to the West Coast to get him out of Bethel.<sup>101</sup> When he heard of Russell's death, Rutherford returned immediately and quickly took over.<sup>102</sup> To be fair to Rutherford, the situation was a difficult one, and because of the continuing loyalty to Russell, forward movement was going to be difficult. However, Rutherford's autocratic style did not help things.<sup>103</sup> However, in his favor, as a lawyer, he had knowledge of the intricate workings of the Watchtower Society as well as the means and disposition to control and manipulate people.

"Before Pastor Russell's death, the Pastor had dismissed Rutherford from Bethel and provided him funds for a new start in California. When Pastor Russell died, Rutherford was working as a floorwalker in a department store. Upon hearing of the Pastor's death, he telegraphed Bethel and told them to hold everything until he arrived. At the time of his death, Pastor Russell was in process of making several changes in the Bethel family, and evidently had not yet updated the members of the board of directors. Since he no longer wanted Rutherford at Bethel, it is doubtful that he wanted him on the board of directors in event of his death."

<sup>102</sup> Ibid. "Rutherford was an extremely forceful, self-seeking character. By legal tricks and maneuvers, he was able to avoid the will's intent and directives to establish himself as President of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, contrary to the wishes of the majority of the Board of Directors. 'Judge' Joseph Franklin Rutherford usurped total control of the Society and became an absolute dictator."

"Rutherford appears as a difficult man with poor social skills who bullied people to get his way. ... Rutherford may have been sincere but he was ruthless against those who would not support him exactly the way he wanted. Rutherford had a black and white worldview, was a nasty bully, and a deluded eccentric. However, his lack of likeability and positive character qualities do not mean that he was insincere. He had a sense of righteous indignation, and for those who opposed what he believed to be Jehovah's intent, he would treat with no mercy."

There is a great deal information about the transition period. This is because a number of factions developed shortly after the transition. Those who were loyal to the existing Watchtower Society and Judge Rutherford had one perception of reality, and those that felt they had been forced to leave had as very different perspective.<sup>104</sup> Both wrote about their experiences. According to those who would eventually split off from the International Bible Students Association, the choice of the new president was the result of political maneuvering. However, according to the Rutherford faction, the transition was smooth and Rutherford, who had been asked to return, was selected unanimously.

Joseph Franklin Rutherford was born to James Calvin Rutherford and Lenora Strickland Rutherford November 8, 1869. He was one of eight siblings. Their home was located in a small farm about three and a half miles north of Versailles, Missouri. His parents had a good reputation in the community and the family attended a small Baptist church where his parents remained until their deaths.<sup>105</sup> Jehovah's Witnesses report Rutherford went to college at the age of 16.<sup>106</sup> Unfortunately, no local college records document his attendance. In 1889, at the age of 20, Rutherford obtained a job as a court stenographer and <sup>104</sup> Without going into detail here, there is a long history of the Watchtower Society being less than truthful in order to preserve their image. This has been adequately demonstrated with the cover up of thousands of cases of sexual child abuse that are now documented in court cases in Australia and in the US.

<sup>105</sup> "The Mystery Years of 'The Judge' Joseph Franklin Rutherford in Missouri," Free Minds, Inc., accessed July 9, 2018, http://www.freeminds.org/history/mystery\_years.htm. "His parents, according to the Catholic priest Rev Richard Felix who lived in the same Missouri county and wrote the booklet Rutherford Exposed (Our Faith Press, Pilot Grove, MO) were "honest, hardworked, respected" people. They were James Calvin Rutherford and Lenora Strickland Rutherford who lived nearly fifty years on a small farm 3 ½ miles north of Versailles."

"When Joseph was 16, his father consented to his attending college, provided that he pay his own way and that he pay for a hired laborer to take his place on the farm. A determined young man, Joseph secured a loan from a friend and managed to go to college while also studying law."

studied law, apparently informally, under the tutelage of Judge E. L. Edwards, who was a state Supreme Court Justice. In 1891, Rutherford applied for and received his license to practice law.<sup>107</sup> As was common of most attorneys in Missouri, they could be asked to stand in for the local judge if he was called away. Rutherford stood in four times. He tried minor cases on two of those occasions. After that, he preferred to be known as Judge Rutherford.<sup>108</sup>

After being elected unanimously as the president of the Watchtower Society, Judge Rutherford initially attempted to avoid controversy. He increased the evangelism Russell had been doing but refrained from any change in direction.<sup>109</sup> In the end, the safe course he charted was not enough to avoid conflict, and resentment developed. Some board members had wanted to have either the presidency or more control in the organization. Ultimately, a rebellion was incited by four board members. What they did not know, and Rutherford did, was that even though Russell had appointed them, they had never been formally approved in a board meeting. As a result, Rutherford simply replaced them and then had them forcibly evicted from Bethel. This caused great turmoil.<sup>110</sup>

L. Edwards whom Missouri handbooks indicate had been a state supreme court justice. Consulting the history and other works shows that in 1889 when twenty years old he was made an official court reporter, and he obtained a license to practice law on May 5, 1892.”

<sup>108</sup> “The Mystery Years of ‘The Judge’ Joseph Franklin Rutherford in Missouri,” Free Minds, Inc. “In the state when a Presiding Judge was absent the bar picked a local attorney to fill in as a substitute judge. This occurred four times in his own case. Each time it was for only a day. Twice there were no trials that he presided over and on the other two occasions he presided over only minor trials. Therefore his sometimes being called ‘Judge’ Rutherford is rather misleading.”

<sup>109</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Jehovah's Witnesses-Proclaimers of God's Kingdom, 67. “‘The year 1917 opened with rather a discouraging outlook,’ stated The Watch Tower of December 15, 1917. Yes, following the death of C. T. Russell, there were some misgivings, some doubts and some fears. Yet the year-end report was encouraging; field activity had increased. Clearly, the work was moving ahead.”

<sup>110</sup> Ibid. “However, when it became evident that they would not discontinue their opposition, Rutherford acted within his authority and responsibility as to replace them with four others whose appointments were to be confirmed at the next annual meeting, to be held in January 1918.”

This was just the beginning. Rutherford was a tyrant, autocratic, and forceful. He began by reorganizing the society and purging all dissenters.<sup>111</sup> This autocratic style is still imbedded in the Society. Rutherford also took steps that led to greater control over the individual congregations. He began the process by appointing Watchtower representatives to each ecclesia (church) to oversee the efforts of each congregation.<sup>112</sup>

Many of the Bible Students lamented the changes that were occurring. They noticed a change in the attitude of the Watchtower Society. Their churches were beginning to change.<sup>113</sup> Rutherford also began to make significant changes and pitted member against member. He recognized that there were factions not loyal to him, and he wanted to purge the group of all dissenters.<sup>114</sup>

At the end of this controversy, a schism resulted in the formation of three independent Bible Student groups: 1) Layman’s Home Missionary under PSL Johnson; 2) Pastoral Bible Institute (PBI) formed by R. E. Streeter; 3) and the Pacific Northwest Movement called Standfasters. While many hundreds of Bible Students left Watchtower to join these new organizations, others like my maternal great-grandparents had become so disenchanted with the leadership of the movement they dropped out altogether. These events occurred early on between 1917 and 1919.”

<sup>112</sup> Ibid. “Rutherford knew that he could never achieve his goals without the full support of the movement. He needed tighter control. Watchtower representatives began to be assigned to each ecclesia to track the Witness effort. This was one of the first steps made by Watchtower to gain control over Bible Student classes.”

It was no longer the organization they had known under Pastor Russell. They recognized the noble, holy, spirit of Christ in Pastor Russell, but the new head was an entirely different type of leader: a scheming, cunning man with a dictatorial spirit. The first book Rutherford published after Pastor Russell’s death, ‘The Finished Mystery’, was a very different kind of book than Pastor Russell’s ‘Studies in the Scriptures’. One doesn’t find the spirit of Pastor Russell in the ‘The Finished Mystery’, nor does one find the spirit of the ‘Finished Mystery’ in Pastor Russell’s writings.”

<sup>114</sup> “Charles Taze Russell’s Modern Day Bible Students: A History of the Watchtower from the Perspective of a Former Bible Student,” What’s Up Watchtower, accessed July 6, 2018, <http://www.whatsupwatchtower.com/articles/2017/2/11/charles-taze-russells-modern-day-Bible-students-a-history-of-the-watchtower-from-the-perspective-of-a-former-Bible-student-part-2>. “During the 1920s the very

Rutherford continued making significant doctrinal changes. These changes resulted in serious friction developing in the Bible Student groups around the country. Those who remained loyal to Russell began to argue with those who agreed with Rutherford. Churches that had been together for years split, and members shunned one another.<sup>115</sup>

Those loyal to Pastor Russell were upset. They believed that the changes were so extreme that the group under the control of Rutherford no longer reflected Russell's understanding of the Bible. In 1931, Rutherford changed the group's name from the International Bible Students to Jehovah's Witnesses. The splinter groups that had formed since Rutherford became president denied that the Jehovah's Witnesses were founded by Charles Taze Russell. Instead, they saw Rutherford as the founder of a new and different group.<sup>116</sup>

At some point, it became clear to Rutherford that he would never command the full loyalty of those who had loved Russell nor was it likely that those loyal to the Watchtower Society would ever be personally loyal to him. In a move of genius, Rutherford began to teach about the channel. The Watchtower was God's channel of revelation. The channel was

At the beginning of his tenure, at the same time he was ousting the four rebellious board members, Rutherford released the Finished Mystery. This was reputed to be a collection of final works by Charles Taze Russell. After reading the Finished Ministry, many of the Bible Students did not recognize the tone of the volume and did not think it sounded like Russell's previous work. In it there was a strong anti-war, anti-American tone. Rutherford knew that it was beneficial for group cohesion to have a group feel marginalized and persecuted. It increased loyalty. Many things that Rutherford did seemed to seek that sort of re-enforcement of group loyalty. This time, however, it backfired. There was a strong reaction against the Jehovah's Witnesses. Rutherford and his board were accused of treason. They went to trial, and they were sentenced to twenty years in the Federal Penitentiary.<sup>118</sup>

<sup>117</sup> "A Brief History of the Watchtower after Pastor Russell's Death," Friends of Jehovah's Witness. "My grandfather talked about his own personal mistrust in Rutherford during this time. I well remember my grandfather very passionately recounting the concept of the Channel. Rutherford knew that he could never gain the hearts and loyalty of the Bible Students like Russell had, so he directed as much attention to the organization as being God's one true organization through the channel concept. In this view, Watchtower was Jehovah God's single instrument in bringing the truth to the human race. By focusing the devotion of the movement to God's channel of truth, Rutherford could institute changes in doctrine designed to sift out those whose minds and loyalty couldn't be directed to the channel model."

However, after serving nine months, they were released. Their lawyers had filled complaints about trial errors, and the verdict was thrown out. Since the war was over, the government declined to prosecute them a second time.<sup>119</sup>

When Rutherford was released, he realized that the movement needed to be re-invigorated. Conventions were scheduled, and it was proclaimed that it was time to be faithful to Jehovah. The Bible Students needed to reach out and advertise, advertise, and advertise. Rutherford set about creating a sense of urgency.<sup>120</sup>

This was a timely move, and people were drawn to the end-time message the Bible Students proclaimed. Rutherford also shifted the movement's focus from inward personal holiness to evangelism. This was a major factor in the Watchtower Society's success. Rutherford motivated the Bible Students to do "door to door" ministry.<sup>121</sup> Soon radio broadcasts, phonographs, and vehicles with loudspeakers were part of the outreach effort.

based charges of treason by using the strong anti-government statements made within the pages of the 7th Volume. The Society's Board was convicted to serve some 20 years each in Federal Prison. This experience had a profound effect on Rutherford, both in his health (he lost the use of a lung) and in his outlook on the 'world'. For the rest of Rutherford's life, he used the Watchtower as a weapon to rail against government and the nominal church system."

<sup>119</sup> Jim Whitney, "Did J. F. Rutherford Lie about Being Exonerated?", Free Minds, Inc., accessed July 9, 2018, <http://www.freeminds.org/history/exonerated.htm>. "What then did the Government do? The Government issued what is called a Writ Of Error. This merely means that the Government agrees and recognizes that 'errors' were made in trial, and that it is not saying the defendants are innocent, but rather, that the defendants will have to be retried to correct the errors. The Government decided that since the war was over, it was not worth it to try the case again, though they could have."

<sup>120</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Jehovah's Witnesses-Proclaimers of God's Kingdom, 78. "The Bible Students came away from that convention with a burning zeal for the preaching work. Yes, with more zeal and love in our hearts than ever before.'"

<sup>121</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Jehovah's Witnesses-Proclaimers of God's Kingdom, 78. "As the spiritual light of understanding grew brighter, the Bible Students began to perceive some thrilling Bible truths. (Prov. 4: 18) The understanding of these precious truths gave a powerful impetus to their work of proclaiming God's Kingdom."

During this time, Rutherford emphasized that the Watchtower Society was the only channel of God's truth, and he was God's mouthpiece.<sup>122</sup>

During his tenure as president, Rutherford made many changes in Watchtower theology. He also wrote approximately a book a year. Some of these books were prophetic in nature. For example, in 1920 Rutherford published Millions Now Living Will Never Die! This booklet predicted 1925 as the end of the world, 'the completion of all things.'<sup>123</sup> Many believed him and this created an urgency to carry out God's work before the end. Many more became followers to escape the coming judgment. In 1925, when nothing materialized, many left the movement.

Rutherford was feared. Within the Jehovah's Witnesses, no one would oppose him. As he continued to establish his base of support, he decided Russell's influence needed to be minimized. Therefore, in 1927, Rutherford began a plan to diminish Russell's influence among the Jehovah's Witnesses. Rutherford began to teach that Russell was not the faithful and wise servant; instead, he claimed it was the Watchtower Society itself. The "servant class," known as the anointed 144,000, was declared God's channel of communication.<sup>124</sup> Following this, in 1928, Rutherford rejected the Great Pyramid of Gizeh as a method of

Then in 1929, Rutherford taught that Romans 13 meant that all governments were satanically controlled. The government was to be resisted when it made unreasonable demands. This of course created division between followers and their friends and family.<sup>126</sup> In 1930, he revisited Russell's teaching and changed the date of Christ's Second Presence from 1874 to 1914.<sup>127</sup> He also taught that Christ has been present invisibly at Watchtower since 1919.<sup>128</sup> Because Christ has been present in his temple, the Holy Spirit is no longer necessary and is no longer present with us.<sup>129</sup> Instead, Christ utilized His angels to bring revelation to the

At the convention on July 26, 1931, Rutherford renamed the International Bible Students Association the Jehovah's Witnesses.<sup>131</sup> He based this on Isa. 43:10. "“You are my witnesses,” declares the LORD, ‘and my servant whom I have chosen, so that you may know and believe me and understand that I am he.’”

According to A. H. MacMillan this decision was made on a whim when preparing to preach the next day.<sup>132</sup> This change in both the name and the focus of the group was in response to the many who had left the Watchtower Society and formed independent Bible Student groups. Rutherford had needed a way to distinguish his group from the multiple groups that had splintered away and he determined that this was how to do it. The name

He got up at two o'clock in the morning and wrote in shorthand, at his own desk, an outline of the discourse he was going to give about the Kingdom, the hope of the world, and about the new name. change was designed to separate his followers from the "evil slave class" that had arisen. It was an effort to consolidate and rebranded the Jehovah's Witnesses.

In 1934 Rutherford wrote the book Jehovah. In that book, he charted a new way forward. His message called for the vindication of Jehovah.<sup>133</sup> This was to be done by living such righteous lives that the world would see that Jehovah really is sovereign.<sup>134</sup> The vindication of Jehovah's name became a central focus. The early Christocentric focus was reoriented toward Jehovah of the Old Testament. Jesus was diminished.

Rutherford continued to make changes that would create friction between Jehovah's Witnesses and the public. This was likely deliberate and designed to minimize influence from the world while isolating his followers into a strong community. In 1935, saluting the flag became idolatry.<sup>135</sup> In 1936, the cross, commonly displayed by Christians and their churches was declared a pagan symbol.<sup>136</sup> In 1939, the name of the magazine "Watchtower and Herald

Earlier in this chapter, it was noted that due to a lack of evidence, judgment had to be withheld concerning Charles Taze Russell regarding both his involvement with the masons and his behavior towards two women in his household. With Joseph F. Rutherford, that is not the case. There is adequate evidence to paint a disappointing picture of Rutherford. There are personal reports, legal records and third party stories that indicate that Rutherford was prideful, vengeful, lustful and full of avarice.

Judge Rutherford enjoyed a lavish lifestyle. He had a huge mansion, multiple expensive cars and luxury. He travelled extensively. He justified his lavish 5000+ foot residence on the 1925 return of the ancients that he had predicted.<sup>138</sup> He was also known for his excessive consumption of alcohol.

The disparity between the lifestyle he lived as a leader and that of the common Jehovah's Witnesses, who worked under harsh conditions, raised serious questions. One

"The chief thing to be restored is the human race to life; and since other Scriptures definitely fix the fact that there will be a resurrection of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and other faithful ones of old, and that these will have the first favor, we may expect 1925 to witness the return of these faithful men of Israel from the condition of death, being resurrected and fully restored to perfect humanity and made the visible, legal representatives of the new order of things on earth." Theoretically, it was to prepare for these faithful ones that Beth Sarim was built. In reality this dwelling became a mansion at which Rutherford would spend much of the year.

source believed Beth Sarim was a “time out place” for Rutherford. It kept him out of Bethel.<sup>139</sup>

One of the Watchtower’s attorneys, Olin Moyle had observed the poor treatment of the Bethel staff by Rutherford and noted that his lifestyle was ostentatious while the average worker lived in poverty. He brought this to Rutherford’s attention hoping to effect a change. Instead, it ignited a bitter fight that culminated in a libel suit against the Watchtower Society. In court, Olin Moyle prevailed and the Watchtower Society was found guilty of libel.<sup>140</sup>

There were also some questions raised about his moral behavior. In addition to his drinking, there were questions about sexual impropriety. On one occasion Rutherford, who travelled extensively overseas, was criticized for attending a burlesque show.<sup>141</sup> But even that charge pales against the circumstantial evidence that he kept a mistress.

H. Macmillan, you will recall, was a famous JW-apologist and major supporter of Rutherford. He also wrote the thoroughly whitewashed and WTS-sanctioned book “Faith on the March.” I bring this up because Macmillan was not an ‘opposer’ or an ‘apostate’, but a very loyal dub even ‘til his death. Macmillan told Edward Ford’s father the real reason for building Beth-Sarim was ‘for no purpose other than to get the drunken and declining Rutherford out of Brooklyn.’ Even Haydn Covington, a high-ranking WTS official and famous defender of the legal rights of Jehovah’s Witnesses in this country said that Fred Franz stated, ‘They built the judge a house out in California just to get him out of Bethel.’”

Rutherford’s lame answer to Fisher’s charge was that he was too busy in the Lord’s work to be bothered with replying to such criticism, and anyway, had never seen Al Jolson in his life and did not know what he looked like.”

Berta Peale, his alleged mistress, divorced her husband and came to Bethel. She promptly began working as Judge Rutherford's dietician, although he already had one. She traveled extensively with him. Her family relates that there was sufficient evidence for them to believe she was living as his mistress.<sup>142</sup> Though Rutherford had a wife and a child, he neither visited nor spent time with them after he assumed control of the Watchtower Society.

Joseph Rutherford died of colon cancer in 1942. When he died, his death was announced at Bethel. From the report, it did not appear that those who heard were devastated. It notes only that no one took off the day to mourn. Instead, they went back to work and worked harder.<sup>143</sup> For a man whose decisions had affected millions, his funeral was small. Only four attended, noticeably missing were his wife and son.<sup>144</sup>

Nor did Fred Franz, his oft-ghostwriter and the one who concocted all the doctrinal lies about Beth-Sarim so Rutherford could indulge himself in his rants and booze far, far away from the Brooklyn Bethel."

Nathan Homer Knorr

Nathan Knorr was born in 1905 in the town of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania and raised in the Dutch Reformed Church. At the age of sixteen he encountered the Jehovah's Witnesses and soon became part of the Watchtower Society. He was industrious and in 1923 became a full time colporteur (a door-to-door salesperson who sold JW literature). He was invited to come to the Brooklyn Bethel and once there became actively involved in the work at Bethel. He rose through the ranks and in 1932 became the general manager of the publishing department. In 1935, he was named director of the New York Corporation, and vice president of that society. In 1940, he became vice president of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Pennsylvania. While some saw him as a yes man, seeking to advance, he found full acceptance with Rutherford who ultimately chose him as his successor. Following Rutherford's death he was unanimously elected president on January 13, 1942. Unlike the transition following Russell's death, this transition was smooth and many within the Watchtower Society believed Knorr would be a good president.<sup>145</sup>

Knorr was a hard, business-like person. When relaxed and with friends he could be friendly but in public or when involved in business he was not to be trifled with. He was harsh with those that he thought were not dedicated enough and he was aloof with others. He could also be mean and vindictive when he felt he had been crossed.<sup>146</sup> However, he had a

F. Rutherford when he was enjoying himself or the kindness so often manifested by C. T. Russell to his loyal followers. But he could be stern and severe like Rutherford to any and all who, in his eyes, were disloyal or failed in their duties. Furthermore, he could sometimes be petulant, unkind, and thoroughly mean to those for whom he developed a dislike."

gift for organization that Rutherford lacked and a good sense of what needed to be done to advance the Watchtower Society.

Knorr did not share in the vices of the previous presidents, though at Bethel he lived a more lavish lifestyle than the other Witnesses did. He neither engaged in sexual immorality nor drank to excess. He encouraged singleness until his own marriage in the 1950s.

Knorr was overly concerned that Jehovah's Witnesses not engage in sexual immorality. He became known for his obsessive teaching against masturbation, homosexuality and fornication at the Bethel house.<sup>147</sup> Some of that zeal was unleashed within the local Kingdom Halls in the 1970s when Jehovah's Witnesses were counselled about sexual sins in the marriage bed.<sup>148</sup> Many, out of a perceived obligation to God, confessed their particular sins to the elders and as a result were interrogated.<sup>149</sup> This led to a number of disfellowshippings and some divorces.<sup>150</sup> Within five years these interrogations were

"It is certainly not the responsibility of elders or any others in a Christian congregation to search into the private lives of married couples. Nevertheless, if future cases of gross unnatural conduct, such as the practice of oral or anal copulation, are brought to their attention, the elders should act to try to correct the situation before further harm results, as they would do with any other serious wrong. Their concern is, of course, to try to help those who go astray and are "caught in the snare of the Devil." (2 Tim. 2:26) But if persons willfully show disrespect for Jehovah God "s marital arrangements, then it becomes necessary to remove them from the congregation as dangerous "leaven " that could contaminate others.—1 Cor. 5:6,11-13."

Women experienced painful embarrassment in such hearings as they responded to the elders' questions about the intimacies of their marital relations. Many marriages, where one of the mates was not a Witness, underwent a turbulent period, with the non-Witness mate objecting strenuously to what he or she considered an unwarranted invasion of bedroom privacy. Some marriages broke up with resulting divorce."

determined to be overstepping the bounds of privacy and were discontinued under a don't ask don't tell policy.<sup>151</sup> However, the policy stands and a Jehovah's Witness can be disfellowshipped for engaging in certain types of sexual behavior while married.<sup>152</sup>

Knorr was not as proficient a writer as his predecessors had been. Nor did he possess their charisma. However, he was an excellent executive, which is what the Watchtower Society needed at that point in history. He was hardworking, highly organized, and focused. In addition, he was a good speaker. In 1942, compensating for his lack of writing and charisma, and to cement loyalty to the Watchtower Society, he deemphasized individual personalities. He made all correspondence and all publications anonymous. While Russell and Rutherford were talented and able, Knorr possessed a greater ability to manage and advance the interests of the Watchtower Society.<sup>153</sup> In his thirty-four year tenure, he would grow the Watchtower Society from approximately 115,000 members to 2 million members.<sup>154</sup>

Such practice and advocacy could even lead to expulsion from the congregation."

"There were 2,021,432 who turned in reports to the congregations with which they are associated, indicating that, not only had they shared in preaching the Kingdom message, but they plan to keep on doing so."

When he became president, Knorr recognized that the Jehovah's Witnesses needed to change their structure and approach to ministry. He began the process of restructuring. In doing so, he also hoped to shed some of the negative history associated with the Jehovah's Witnesses. He understood that the Jehovah's Witnesses needed more education and training. He also recognized there were weaknesses in their understanding of doctrine and apologetics. In 1943, the Theocratic Ministry School was established in order to train men to speak in public and use Bible aids.<sup>155</sup> In the same year, the Watch Tower Bible School of Gilead was founded to meet the need for overseas missionaries. This school received the best candidates available.<sup>156</sup> Knorr insisted "the Bible could not be understood apart from direction from the Watchtower" and he was committed to developing the best educational system possible for the training of Jehovah's Witnesses. He desired that the Witnesses have a professional demeanor and be able to relate well to those they approached. In 1958, the Kingdom Ministry School for circuit overseers was developed.

Knorr also revamped the Watchtower publications. The older publication for general readers, Consolation, which had replaced the Golden Age, was itself replaced by Awake! The earlier magazines had articles about miracle cures and health products that sometimes made Jehovah's Witnesses appear gullible. The new publication, Awake, was designed to appeal to the reading public without being a source of ridicule.<sup>157</sup> Knorr was instrumental in producing and printing the first New World Translation of the Bible. The project started in 1950 and it was completed in 1961. While beloved by the Jehovah's Witnesses, it has changes in the text and insertions that supported JW doctrines.<sup>158</sup>

Knorr was not only active in developing the religious aspect of the Watchtower Society. He also oversaw considerable development of physical plant of the Watchtower Society. In 1957, he oversaw the development of a thirteen-story printing plant, and in 1960, the eleven story Headquarters.<sup>159</sup>

Of his decisions, the one that had the greatest impact had to do with the chain of command that he established. Knorr wanted to consolidate all of the power in the Watchtower Society. Rutherford had begun the process by placing a representative in each local congregation but Knorr further limited the autonomy of the individual congregations by implementing circuit and district overseers over the congregations.<sup>160</sup> Within each congregation, elders and a judicial committee were appointed to carry out the wishes of the Watchtower Society.

Knorr made some theological changes as well. In 1961, he made one of his most controversial decisions. The Watchtower Society took the position that receiving a blood transfusion was a violation of God's law.<sup>161</sup> Receiving a blood transfusion became a "disfellowshipping" offense.<sup>162</sup> This poorly thought out doctrine has led to a needless loss of life while damaging the image of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Knorr continued to be the sole authority figure in the Watchtower Society. His authority was felt at all levels and increased as time went by. He provided detailed instructions for congregations and individuals. The Watchtower Society managed the lifestyle and conduct of their members closely. The local congregations became an extension of the authority for the Watchtower Society and the local elders held trials enforcing lifestyle and moral guidelines.<sup>163</sup>

Even though the Watchtower Society began to discuss the Governing Board as if it was a functioning body in the mid-fifties, the production of the New World Testament in

Since this is wrong in the case of animal blood, it is even more reprehensible in the case of human blood."

"If, however, he refuses to acknowledge his nonconformity to the required Christian standard and makes the matter an issue in the Christian congregation and endeavors to influence others therein to his support; or, if in the future he persists in accepting blood transfusions or in donating blood toward the carrying out of this medical practice upon others, he shows that he has really not repented, but is deliberately opposed to God's requirements. As a rebellious opposer and unfaithful example to fellow members of the Christian congregation he must be cut off therefrom by disfellowshipping."

<sup>163</sup> James M. Penton, Apocalypse Delayed: The Story of Jehovah's Witnesses, 118. "Knorr changed that, however, and replaced such nominations with 'congregation committees' of three men. These committees plus the circuit servant were to nominate prospective congregational servants to the Watch Tower Society for appointment. More significant was that such committees were now to act as church courts called 'disfellowshipping committees' and later 'judicial committees.'"

1950 gives a better picture the actual situation. The board met periodically at the request of the president to perform requested work. They would discuss disfellowshipping issues or property issues. They were essentially a sounding board and a stamp of approval. The governing board had no authority and never had. At the 1950 board meeting, the board met and Knorr informed them of the Bible project. It was the first the board had heard of it and the Bible was ready to go to print. It was one of the largest projects of the time and it was only at publishing that the board found out about it. It was 1976 before the governing board began to function independently and it did not fully function as an autonomous body until 1992.

It was Knorr who determined what projects to consider and whether to pursue them. He had total control of everything that transpired.<sup>164</sup> He pragmatically yielded to the vice President, Frederick Franz, on biblical matters. Franz was much more a Bible scholar and Knorr was not. However, if the biblical issue affected the business of the Society, Knorr would ultimately make the final decision.

In 1971, President Knorr gave his famous, tail wagging the dog, speech.<sup>165</sup> In that speech, he described a situation where the Watchtower board controlled the Governing Body. In the speech, he explained that the board could not control the Governing Body. The Governing Body was the real ruling body. The concept was good but it was not anchored in reality. In reality, the Watchtower Society was a monarchy. The President held all authority and made all decisions. Following that speech, the issue remained dormant for four years.

In 1975, there were problems at Bethel. Poor working conditions had led to poor morale among the staff.<sup>166</sup> The low morale was felt by the governing body. They were frustrated that nothing had changed in structuring of the leadership. There was discontentment. The Governing Body began to resent that they were not allowed to govern.<sup>167</sup> Discussion following the board meeting of May 1, 1975 led to a tense and sometimes heated discussion. Both Knorr and Franz felt that the current system worked well and were resistant to change. However, the board eventually prevailed and on January 1, 1976, a structure was put in place that gave committees control over specific areas of the Watchtower Society. Nathan Knorr died from a brain tumor in 1977. The Proclaimers history states that the transition from a president to a governing board structure was the result of his illness. The transition is presented as occurring smoothly.<sup>168</sup> In reality, the process was rocky

"In 1975, two Bethel Elders (Malcolm Allen, a senior member of the Service Department and Robert Lang, the Assistant Bethel Home Overseer) wrote letters to the Governing Body expressing concern over certain conditions prevalent within the headquarters staff, specifically referring to an atmosphere of fear generated by those having oversight and a growing feeling of discouragement and resultant discontent."

<sup>167</sup> Ibid., 87. "Discussion went back and forth. A turning point seemed to come with remarks made by Grant Suiter, the crisp-speaking secretary/treasurer of the Society's principal corporations. Different from the comments made till then by those favoring a change, his expressions were quite personal, seemingly the release of a long pent-up feeling about the president, whom he directly named. While discussing the authority structure he made no specific charges, except as regards the right to make a certain change in his personal room that he had requested and had been denied, but as he went on his face became flushed, his jaw muscles flexed and his words became more intense. He closed with the remark: 'I say if we are going to be a Governing Body, then let's get to governing! I haven't been doing any governing till now.'"

He had traveled the globe many times over, visiting and encouraging missionaries, teaching and instructing branch office personnel. He was privileged to see the number of active Witnesses increase from 117,209 in 1942 to 2,248,390 in 1976. But by the summer of 1976, 71-year-old N. H. Knorr had noticed that he had a tendency to bump into things. Subsequent tests indicated that he was suffering from an inoperable brain and President Knorr opposed the changes. He did not encounter significant disability until after the governing structure had changed.

Frederick Franz

President Knorr died June 8, 1977. Two weeks later on June 22, 1977 Frederick Franz was elected to the Presidency. The transition was smooth. Franz had been Vice President since 1945 and had shared closely in the decision making process with the president.<sup>169</sup>

Frederick W. Franz was born in Covington, Kentucky a small city of approximately 40,000. His parents were Edward Frederick Franz and Ida Louise Nee Krueger. His father was a German Lutheran, and Franz was baptized into the Lutheran Church. As a child, he attended a nearby parochial school for a year and went to the Catholic Church. His parents then moved across the river to Cincinnati. From that point, Franz attended public school and began attending the Presbyterian Church. In school he initially fared poorly and failed third grade.<sup>170</sup> To prevent him from staying behind a year, his father transferred him to another school. An attitude adjustment took place at home, and Franz became a diligent scholar. He tumor. He struggled to continue to carry a workload for some months, but his physical prognosis was poor. Would his failing health impede the forward movement of the work? Enlargement of the Governing Body had already begun in 1971. During 1975, there were 17 members. Throughout much of that year, the Governing Body had given serious and prayerful consideration to how they could best care for all that is involved in the global preaching and teaching work outlined in God's Word for our day. (Matt. 28:19,20) On December 4, 1975, the Governing Body had unanimously approved one of the most significant organizational readjustments in the modern-day history of Jehovah's Witnesses."

began to excel academically and at the end of his high school years, he was the Valedictorian.<sup>171</sup>

He went on to attend the University of Cincinnati. There he studied liberal arts, giving attention to classical languages. He demonstrated himself to be an excellent scholar. Franz applied to the University of Ohio and was in competition for the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship when his brother, Alfred, introduced him to the Watchtower Society. He quickly determined that it was the truth and decided to join the movement. Franz left the Presbyterian Church, left college, and contacted the scholarship committee to remove his name. He was baptized as a witness April 5, 1914, in Chicago.<sup>172</sup>

In May of 1914, Franz became a colporteur, selling literature for the Society. Franz fondly relates meeting Russell on two occasions during his early years with the Watchtower Society, once in 1914 and once in 1916. In 1920, while Rutherford was speaking at Cincinnati, Franz had opportunity to speak to him. Rutherford invited him to come to Bethel, so in 1920 Franz arrived at Bethel. For a few months, he worked at the printing press. Then he was transferred to the Colporteur desk where he remained until 1926. After that he served with the radio station and began traveling with Judge Rutherford, Nathan Knorr, and Hayden Covington. Ultimately, he became part of Rutherford's inner circle. After Rutherford's death, he began to travel with and for President Knorr.<sup>173</sup>

Franz was one of the few people with an education in biblical languages, and he soon developed a reputation for being a scholar.<sup>174</sup> In his later years, he believed he was one of few people who could teach the Bible correctly.<sup>175</sup> Even prior to being president, his opinion carried a lot of weight, and his articles were not challenged.<sup>176</sup> President Knorr relied heavily on Franz's abilities.<sup>177</sup>

During the last part of his vice presidency, there was a movement within the board to limit the power of the presidency and to distribute the power throughout the board. Franz did not believe this was God's will and resisted the change.<sup>178</sup> The board however demanded and obtained the concessions that they sought. The power of the presidency was sharply curtailed, and six committees were established to do the work of the society. These changes

"The Society's vice president, Fred Franz, was acknowledged as the organization's principal Bible scholar. On a number of occasions I went to his office to inquire about points. To my surprise he frequently directed me to Bible commentaries, saying, 'Why don't you see what Adam Clarke says, or what Cooke says,' or, if the subject primarily related to the Hebrew Scriptures, 'what the Soncino commentaries say.'"

<sup>175</sup> Ibid., 102. "He stated that he believed it meant that it was God's will that there be just a few men in the entire Christian congregation who could rightly be called "teachers." I inquired who such would be in our time. Speaking very calmly his reply was: Well, I believe that I am. I have been here at headquarters for over fifty years and have been involved in the field of writing and research during most of that time, so I believe that I am. And—there are some other brothers throughout the earth who are."

<sup>176</sup> Franz, Crisis of Conscience, 72. "He pointed out the one exception, namely, any material written by the vice president, stating that "what comes from Brother Franz is viewed as 'ready for publication,' with no adjustments to be made."

<sup>177</sup> Ibid. "Not a writer nor particularly a student of Scripture, Knorr relied on Fred Franz (the vice president) as more or less the final arbiter on Scriptural matters and the principal writer of the organization. Questions such as those discussed at Governing Body sessions (related earlier in this chapter) were, for decades, submitted to Fred Franz for decision. If President Knorr felt that the decision might have some critical effect on the Society's operation in certain countries of the world, he would usually discuss it personally with Fred Franz and would not hesitate to make known what he felt the circumstances made advisable in a pragmatic way, overruling the vice president if necessary."

<sup>178</sup> Ibid., 106. "Four years later, in 1979, in a Governing Body session, Fred Franz, now president, stated that his vote for the change back then was made "under duress." I would agree. When Nathan Knorr conceded, Fred Franz felt compelled to join him. He went on to say that he had not been in favor of the change then and that from that point forward he had "just been watching" to see what would result."

theoretically took place January 1, 1976.<sup>179</sup> However, Franz was able to continue to exert great control through the force of his personality and the deference that was shown to a man who had known both Russell and Rutherford.<sup>180</sup>

During the Franz' presidency there was some paranoia about apostasy. This resulted in a purge of many independent thinking witnesses, some of whom had served the society for forty years or more. It was an ugly expression of totalitarian control. Some were disfellowshipped for the content of private conversations, others for eating a meal with someone who was disfellowshipped. The Watchtower Society and its president demanded complete submission of mind and body to its will.<sup>181</sup>

During his leadership at the Watchtower Society, Fredrick Franz researched and wrote about many topics. In his writing, there was little interaction with others, and even when the articles were reviewed, there was little time for others to look at the background and form a solid opinion. As a result, articles generally simply passed through.<sup>182</sup> This led to some at the headquarters feeling less than settled about the truthfulness of articles.<sup>183</sup>

<sup>179</sup> Ibid., 90. "The president's last-mentioned words ("over my dead body") nearly proved prophetic. At the time of saying them he evidently had already developed a malignant tumor on his brain, though this did not become known until after the reorganization was definitely a fait accompli, its completion taking place officially on January 1, 1976, and Knorr's death occurring a year and a half later, on June 8, 1977. The president's quite vocal opposition was matched, perhaps even surpassed, by that of the vice president."

<sup>182</sup> Franz, Crisis of Conscience, 108-109, accessed July 19, 2018, <https://www.scribd.com/doc/281913142/In-Search-of-Christian-Freedom-by-Ray-Franz>. "But these brothers were by no means alone, for the discussions themselves clearly demonstrated that by far the majority of the Body had done little else than

Frederick Franz enjoyed good health, and even with failing eyesight, he continued to work faithfully for the Watchtower until his death in 1992 at the age of 99. He had served for 6 years as a colporteur, for 25 years as a member of the Bethel staff, for 32 years as the vice president and for another 13 as the president. He was a skilled leader, and his life was without personal scandal

The Remaining Presidents

After the death of Frederick Franz in 1992, the era of the monarch-like president was over. Following Franz, Milton Henschel was elected president. At that time, the Governing Body began to function as a group of equals. Henschel was a long-time member of the Witnesses and had served as secretary to President Knorr before becoming vice president under Franz. During those years he traveled internationally doing business for the Governing Body. In his activities, he was noted to be very conservative by nature. The only notice of his read the material written. The subject was often one that had originated and developed in the mind of the writer without consultation with the Body, even though it represented some “new” understanding of Scripture, and often the writer had then worked up all his arguments and put the material in final form without having talked things over, tested his thinking, with even one other person. (Even during Nathan Knorr’s lifetime this was the normal procedure followed by the Society’s principal writer, Fred Franz. Only when put in completed form did anyone else—and usually only the president—have opportunity to consider and discuss the ideas or interpretations developed.) The argumentation was frequently complex, involved, of a kind that no superficial reading could ever allow for sufficient analysis to test its validity and determine if it was scripturally solid or just a case of ‘acrobatical logic,’ a skillful juggling of texts that made them say something other than what they really said. Those who had only read the material usually voted in favor; those who had done extra study and research were those most likely to raise serious questions.”

ascendancy to the presidency was a brief note in the Watchtower<sup>184</sup> and a change in the copyright acknowledging him as president.<sup>185</sup> He functioned as an administrator serving on a board. The time of larger than life personalities was over. The Watchtower Society would only infrequently mention the presidents from that time forward.

Milton Henschel served as president for 8 years. At the end of that time, in the year 2000, the Governing Body resigned from the Pennsylvania Corporation and assumed the role of supervising all the corporations. Milton Henschel, age 79, stepped down, and Don Adams was appointed president. When Milton Henschel died in 2003 at the age of 82, there was little notice compared to the previous four presidents. In fact, while his time on the governing board was mentioned, his time serving as president was not mentioned in the press release.<sup>186</sup> The role of the presidency was being downplayed.

The appointment of Don Adams was shrouded in mystery, and it came as part of a large reorganization of the Watchtower structure. The Governing Body was stripped of all of its legal authority and re-established as a non-profit. Three corporations were established to oversee the affairs of the U.S. congregations. One would oversee church construction, another would oversee personnel, and the third would oversee publications. The Governing Body would be restricted to religious affairs such as Bible doctrine, evangelization, and pastoral care. The role of the current president was again minimized.<sup>187</sup> Adams was 75 when he was elected president. He had worked at the headquarters for 54 years. Previously he was Nathan Knorr's secretary too and had overseen worldwide mission activities.

Don Adams was president of the Governing Body until 2014, when without announcement or fanfare, Adams, then 89 years old, was replaced by Robert Ciranko. This became evident when literature began showing Robert Ciranko as president. At the time, the Watchtower Headquarters would not comment on whether a change had occurred, or if it had occurred, why the change occurred. There is little biographical information about Ciranko in the current JW literature.

The Organizational Structure of the Jehovah's Witnesses

The organizational structure of the Jehovah's Witnesses is Episcopalian and is very similar to the Catholic Church. It is an entirely top down structure. Initially the president was like the pope, but now the Governing Body occupies that place. The Governing Body directs the branch offices, who direct the District Overseers, who direct the Local Overseers, who direct the Elders, who direct the Publishers. Like the Catholic Church, the organization is concerned for its own well-being. And like the Catholic Church it has covered up sexual abuses rather than exposing them and helping the victims.<sup>188</sup>

"The president resigned, the ruling Governing Body was stripped of its legal power, and three new corporations were set up to run the society's U.S. operations. For many of the 980,000 or so Witnesses in the U.S., news of the changes hit like a bolt of lightning. They were made last weekend at an annual business meeting, in Jersey City, but without any public notice or discussion. Milton Henschel, 80, the fifth president, stepped down after eight years, along with six other directors of the Watchtower Society. He remains a member of the Governing Body, which had run the 5.9-million member society with an absolutist hand. The Governing Body was not abolished, but under the new setup, it will oversee only religious affairs, among them Bible doctrine, evangelization and pastoral care."

Outreach

The Watchtower Society has always relied on the volunteer efforts of its members to do outreach and assist with the ministry. All active Jehovah's Witnesses are required to spend time preaching (publishing). The most basic way to do this is to go door to door. According to their own literature and anecdotal accounts from ex-witnesses, the return is low, and many people who go out do not like the feeling of rejection that occurs when people refuse to talk to them. In the past few years, there has been an emphasis on setting up book carts in public places. There is no attempt to stop or engage people unless they are approached. A significant number tracts and books are given out free. These mandatory "volunteer" activities have made the organization successful.

Chapter 3

Three Factors Central to Watchtower Theology

The Development of Charles Taze Russell's Theology

When discussing the beliefs of the Watchtower Society, one should examine the sources from which Charles Taze Russell fashioned the framework of Watchtower theology. The beliefs he adopted developed during a period of widespread theological flux and uncertainty. Following the Second Great Awakening, many people were searching for a faith that would carry them through difficult times.

During the 1800s, there had been a great deal of theological anxiety and uncertainty. The majority of American cults developed during that period. The first of these was the Campbellite movement of the 1820s. The Campbellites claimed they were leaving apostate Christianity behind and returning to the original form of worship found in the New Testament. Groups that followed the Campbellites, chronologically if not to some degree theologically, are Mormonism from 1830, Christadelphianism from 1848, Seventh-day Adventism from 1861, Jehovah's Witnesses from 1879, Christian Science from 1879, and the Unity School of Christianity from 1895. The development and growth of these aberrant groups demonstrate that theology during the 1800s was unstable and many different theological beliefs were available to develop or incorporate into a belief system. It was from this theological muddle that Russell formed his belief system.

Russell, reflecting on his theology, explained how he believed his beliefs had formed. In a supplement to the normal 1894 Watchtower, Russell discussed the development of his doctrinal positions. He claimed that rather than getting flashes of insight, his theological positions developed slowly over two decades.<sup>1</sup> While his perception of how his theology developed may be partially correct, there was more to it than that. The period was inundated with theories regarding the return of Christ. Russell, whether consciously or subconsciously, adopted the theology of those that he had read or known. Little of his theology was original.

While it is impossible to say where he obtained all of his ideas, Russell credits a few preachers that influenced his theology. In addition, he is known to have read journals that presented the theology he later adopted. He also directly quotes other authors from whom he borrowed.

The period Russell lived in was ripe for change. The Second Great Awakening (1790-1840) had occurred, and many people who had initially been impacted were searching for a deeper experience. People were hungry for God and for certainty. The theology that Russell encountered in the United States was the result of three religious traditions coming together. They fueled the development of a unique but not entirely new system of theology. The first influence encountered was that of William Miller who had drunk deeply from the well of prophetic teachings. He believed that the return of Christ would occur in 1844. His predictions were wrong, but even so, he was responsible for further developing the prophetic movement within the Evangelical churches in America and England. The Adventist movement developed out of his failures. Another stream of theology came from the earlier

"No, the truths we present, as God's mouthpieces, were not revealed in visions or dreams, nor by God's audible voice, nor all at once, but gradually, especially since 1870, and particularly since 1880, a period of about twenty years. And this present clear unfolding of truth is not due to any human ingenuity or acuteness of perception, but to the simple fact that God's due time has come; and if we did not speak, and no other agent could be found, the very stones would cry out."

millenarian movements found in the Anglicanism of the 1600s, and a third stream of theology was found in English Protestant nonconformity.<sup>2</sup>

Russell's interest in Christianity was re-ignited by the preaching and teaching of the Adventist preacher Jonas Wendell sometimes during 1869. He worshipped with Wendell for some time but never became a Second Adventist.<sup>3</sup> Instead, he began to study the Scriptures diligently. While doing this, he gathered people together and began a Bible study class. During this time, he developed close ties with Adventists George Stetson and George Storrs.

George Stetson mentored Russell from 1870 to 1873. During this time, he taught Russell a form of Neo-Arianism that he had learned from Henry Grew, an English pastor.<sup>4</sup> He also taught Russell a non-Trinitarian ransom theory that he published the same year that Russell stated that he had developed his ransom theory.<sup>5</sup> In addition, Russell copied the pattern of assembly that Stetson utilized in his church.<sup>6</sup>

George Storrs also met with Russell, and Russell, as a result, adopted many of his views. Storrs was a leading proponent of Conditional Immortality.<sup>7</sup> Storrs also taught that the Russell stumbled onto the meeting and stayed and listened. As a result, his faith in the Bible was restored. Yet he did not become a 'Second Adventist' at that time, or from his own standpoint, ever after."

dead are asleep until the resurrection.<sup>8</sup> While Storrs initially supported William Miller's and Samuel S. Snow's prophetic chronologies, after the failure of 1844, he refused to engage in date setting.<sup>9</sup> Russell, however, did not follow his example.

In 1871 Storrs, then a member of the Life and Advent Union, changed his views regarding the eschatological resurrection of the lost. As a result, he left the denomination. He initially had believed that after a man died, there was judgment. This view changed. He came to believe that those who had no chance to receive Christ in this lifetime would be resurrected and experience a second chance to follow Christ. If they were faithful, they would live forever on a restored paradise on earth.<sup>10</sup> In the meantime, those who had formed the true church would be in heaven. Russell incorporated Storrs's new view into his own theology. Additionally, Russell adopted Storrs's practice of taking communion once a year on the 14th of Nissan.<sup>11</sup>

Russell also absorbed much of the current theology involving the millennium. The early church believed in the pre-millennial reign of Christ, and some expected there would be a six thousand year period followed by the return of Christ and a thousand years of <sup>9</sup> Ibid., 17. But when Snow's prognostication failed as well, Storrs abandoned Millerite time calculations and refused thereafter to set a date for Christ's return.

<sup>10</sup> Ibid. “. . . teaching instead that those who had died without knowledge of Christ would be given an opportunity to lean of his sacrifice for them after an earthly resurrection; if faithful, they would receive the gift of everlasting life on a restored paradise earth.

<sup>11</sup> Ibid. “It is evident too, that the practice of celebrating the Memorial of the Lord's Supper once a year on the supposed date of Christ's death, 14 Nisan, as Jehovah's Witnesses and various independent Bible Student movements do today was learned by Russell from the editor of the Bible Examiner.

paradise.<sup>12</sup> During the middle ages, the millennial theories were largely pushed aside and amillennialism, the belief that the millennium was the time period between Christ's coming and his return, became more prominent. It was championed by Augustine and was a dominant view at the time of the Reformation. Later, under the influence of Daniel Whitby, postmillennialism became prominent in America from the 1700s until the early 1800s. Postmillennialism taught that Jesus would return at the end of the millennium after the church had perfected the world.

In England there had been a resurgence of millennial speculation during the 1600s, but its influence waned and postmillennialism became the prominent position in the 1700s. The French Revolution during the last decade of the 1700s brought uncertainty to the faithful in Europe and undercut the popularity of the current rationalism. Because of the uncertainty of the times, millenarian beliefs became much more popular.

There was a consensus among the millennial thinkers that the events of 1790s were those prophesied in Daniel 7 and Revelation 13. This "set point" allowed the year day theory to be utilized to determine the end of the age.<sup>13</sup> Prophetic conferences were held at Asbury Park in England between 1826 and 1830. Henry Drummond was a prime financial supporter and religious leader at the conferences. Although Russell would not be directly affected by the events taking place during these conferences, the ideas circulated through the religious world and were developed, discussed, and put into print. When Russell encountered the conclusions of the conferences in his reading, he adopted them as part of his theology with little change.<sup>14</sup>

Two of the ideas that the conference supported, the idea of a two-stage return of Christ and the pre-tribulation rapture, came from the writings of Manuel Lacunza y Diaz, a Jesuit priest from Chile.<sup>15</sup> His book was translated by Edward Irving, a prominent religious leader of the time. The translation was made available for the Albury Park conferences and was well received. Interestingly, Henry Drummond had already developed an identical pre-millenarian scheme with one twist; the return of Christ was to be invisible.<sup>16</sup> The invisible return of Christ was a doctrine that Russell adopted, and it is still upheld by his followers. He did not get it directly from Drummond though, but instead, through the writings of Rev. Robert Govett.<sup>17</sup> Govett had begun his career as an Anglican Priest but had severed his <sup>14</sup> Penton, Apocalypse Delayed, 20. The points of the conference follow: “1. This dispensation or age will not end insensibly but cataclysmically in judgment and destruction of the church in the same manner the Jewish dispensation ended. 2. The Jews will be restored to Palestine during the time of judgment. 3. The judgment to come will fall principally upon Christendom. 4. When the judgment is past, the millennium will begin. 5. The second advent of Christ will occur before the millennium. 6. The 1260 years of Daniel 7 and Revelation 13 ought to be measured from the reign of Justinian to the French Revolution. The vials of wrath (Revelation 16 are now being poured out and the Second Advent is imminent. Besides the above, the Albury Park conferences popularized three additional concepts that came to be central to Russell’s teachings. These were that Christ’s second advent would be marked by two stages, that there would be a pre-tribulation rapture before the destruction of the government of the world, and Christ’s coming would be invisible.”

<sup>15</sup> Ibid., 21. “. . . Furthermore, he was the first to develop what is commonly called the two-stage doctrine of Christ’s second coming or advent.”

<sup>16</sup> Ibid., 23. “. . . Henry Drummond had already come up with an identical millenarian, pre-tribulation rapture schedule for the second advent. It was Drummond, not Lacunza, who was to add another seemingly peculiar second advent doctrine that was taken up by many nineteenth-century millenarians and was eventually passed on to Charles Russell. That was the teaching that Christ’s coming in glory and majesty would be invisible to all but the resurrected and changed living saints.”

<sup>17</sup> Ibid., 24. “He also argued that the Greek word Parousia, usually translated ‘coming’ in English translations of the Bible should be understood to mean ‘presence’. Thus, he held that after Christ came to resurrect his sleeping saints and meet them in the air, he would be present invisibly in the last days of the relationship with them over the issue of believer's baptism and became the pastor of an independent church. He understood the term "parousia" to mean not a coming, but presence. This made a significant impact in Russell's eschatology.

Russell read extensively. One journal that he read was The Rainbow in which there is a great deal of discussion regarding the secret rapture and other millennial topics. Most of Russell's mentors subscribed to The Rainbow. The Rainbow was founded in 1864 by William Leask, a congregational minister. Leask served as editor for several years. The Rainbow originally provided a forum for discussion of premillennial dispensationalism but eventually became equally supportive of Conditional Immortality.<sup>18</sup> It is assumed that Russell also read the journal though there is no record of his subscribing. However, the topics covered in The Rainbow appear in his writings.<sup>19</sup> Another author that had a direct impact on Russell was Joseph A. Seiss. He is mentioned as being "a major, direct source for Russell's earliest eschatological ideas." Seiss was the author of several books and was the editor of the Prophetic Times and Quarterly Journal of Prophecy. Russell read Seiss's works and quoted extensively from Seiss's 1856 book The Day of the Lord. The prophetic chronology that has marked the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society's history came to Russell through Nelson Barbour. Russell had heard Barbour's ideas and invited Barbour to show him the proof of his projections. They met and Barbour was able to demonstrate to Russell's satisfaction how his prophetic time line was developed. As a result, they worked together publishing Barbour's magazine and proclaiming the soon coming end. Later a dispute over the ransom doctrine split their friendship. However, Barbour was not the person who had developed the original chronology. The chronology was developed by John Aquila Brown. He outlined his beliefs in the book Even-Tide (1823). The chronology began with the fall of Judah. Brown chose 604 B.C. as the date of that fall.<sup>21</sup> Then utilizing Daniel, chapter 4 he determined that the end of all things would be in 1917. However, Barbour found some discrepancies and revised the date to 1914.<sup>22</sup> Otherwise, the time line was accepted intact. For any that have not seen the date 604 used for the fall of the Jewish nation, it is because the date accepted by most, if not all, historians and theologians is 586 BC.

Russell's theology was novel in its configuration, but it was representative of what other individuals of that time were writing and thinking. Little was original. Russell primarily took what was available and utilized it. Therefore, when Russell said his theological system had developed in first two decades following 1870, he was only partially right. His belief system had been evolving over the history of the entire church age and, for the most part, represented minority opinions and, in a few cases, beliefs considered heretical.

The Centrality of the Watchtower Society

One of the reasons that theological discussions with Jehovah's Witnesses tend to go poorly is that Jehovah's Witnesses are insistent that their position is correct, and they refuse to consider the possibility that they might be wrong. This stems from their being taught that there is only one entity on the face of the earth that is capable of understanding the Bible and that is the Watchtower Society.<sup>23</sup> This obviously starts any conversation out unequally because the Witnesses knows that they are the only ones in the room who have a correct understanding of Scripture. This is compounded by their understanding that the Bible belongs to the Watchtower Society as a whole. It is not designed for individual Bible study. Therefore, the Witness is likely to view any person opposing his or her view as ignorant of God's truth. This is at least in part because the person to whom the Witness is speaking has been studying the Bible without guidance, so all of their conclusions are suspect.<sup>24</sup>

"As the canon of books of God's Word was expanded and the Christian Greek Scriptures were added to complete the Bible, each book was written directly to the Christian congregation or to a member of the Christian congregation in its behalf. Thus, the Bible is an organizational book and belongs to the Christian congregation as an organization, not to individuals, regardless of how sincerely they may believe that they can interpret the Bible. For this reason, the Bible cannot be properly understood without Jehovah's visible organization in mind."

Additionally, the individual Jehovah's Witnesses are taught that the Watchtower Society is their link with the truth. Only they have the ability to understand the Scripture correctly because Jehovah shares His truth with the governing body and then governing body makes that truth available to the individual Jehovah's Witnesses.<sup>25</sup> When a message comes from the Watchtower Society, the Witness is to accept the message and do what it takes to implement the message. The witness is not to second-guess Jehovah or be rebellious. There is no room for independent thinking.<sup>26</sup> The Witness needs the help of the Watchtower Society to understand the Bible.<sup>27</sup> Since the witness must be careful of error, any understanding of the truth must come from the Watchtower, not suspect sources.<sup>28</sup> The Witness is to be thankful for the truth that Jehovah has made available to them.<sup>29</sup>

The Watchtower warns the Witnesses that they need to evaluate their attitude toward the Watchtower Society. Just as loving Jesus shows a love toward God, loving the Watchtower Society also shows a love toward God. Rejecting the Society is rejecting God.<sup>30</sup> The warning not to wander from the guidance of the Watchtower Society is important. The Watchtower Society has noted that just studying the Bible alone leads people back into error.<sup>31</sup> This claim may be seen as a warning to be faithful to the Watchtower Society but there are questions that arise. If the reading of the Bible alone leads to conclusions that are different from the Watchtower Society's teaching, would it not be logical to wonder if the Watchtower is teaching another Gospel?<sup>32</sup> Moreover, if the Bible seems to teach one thing,

Theology in Flux: “New Light”

Once Russell had developed his basic theological framework, it would have seemed likely that the theology of the group would become stable and predictable. This did not happen. Like many of his Second Adventist associates, Russell believed that God was continuing to speak through the chosen leader(s) of His people. This extra-biblical revelation was referred to as “new light.” As a result, God, who is said to have chosen the Watchtower Society to be His representative on earth in 1919, would provide greater understanding through His mouthpiece. That mouthpiece would initially be Russell, followed by the next three presidents of the Watchtower Society and finally the Governing Body.<sup>33</sup>

This “new light” doctrine, or special revelation, is at the root of virtually every doctrinal error, policy reversal and failed prophecy the Jehovah’s Witnesses have experienced. It is based on the assumption that God continues to speak to selected individuals with the same or similar authority as that given to the Scriptures. Exactly where Russell developed his understanding of “new light” cannot be known for sure but an early co-worker unwittingly do this article. Let the honest-hearted person compare the kind of preaching of the gospel of the Kingdom done by the religious systems of Christendom during all the centuries with that done by Jehovah’s Witnesses since the end of World War I in 1918. They are not one and the same kind. That of Jehovah’s Witnesses is really “gospel,” or “good news,” as of God’s heavenly kingdom that was established by the enthronement of his Son Jesus Christ at the end of the Gentile Times in 1914. (Luke 21:24)”

<sup>33</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, “The Light Keeps Getting Brighter,” 2016 Yearbook of Jehovah’s Witnesses (New York: Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, 2016), 25, accessed June 8, 2018, <https://www.jw.org/en/publications/books/2016-yearbook/highlights/jehovahs-witnesses-beliefs-clarified/>. “As a result, their path “is like the bright morning light that grows brighter and brighter.” (Prov. 4:18) Increasing light from Jehovah continues to illuminate their way organizationally, doctrinally, and morally. of his, Nelson Barbour, believed in “new light” and spoke about how it changed his understanding of some of his mistaken prophecies.<sup>34</sup>

Barbour had received revelation and twice predicted the return of Christ based on a thirty-year adjustment of William Millers failed prophecy of 1844.<sup>35</sup> Barbour then used “new light” to explain his apparently flawed predictions. He ultimately taught that Christ returned invisibly in 1874.<sup>36</sup> Russell adopted Barbour’s chronology and the doctrine of Christ’s invisible return. He also utilized the idea of progressive revelation or “new light” to introduce his own teachings.

To provide a rationale for “new light,” Russell allegorized the parable of the faithful servant found in Matt. 24:45. He taught it as an illustration of how God was spiritually feeding his people. The parable showed how God would provide spiritual food for his followers until the rapture. Through the chosen faithful servant, God gives the servants (the church) food (spiritual teaching) at the proper time. Initially, Russell taught that all dedicated anointed Christians had this task.<sup>37</sup> However, his followers soon came to believe that Pastor Russell was the faithful servant. He publicly claimed the Watchtower Publication was the faithful servant. However, he admitted in private that it made sense that he could be that faithful servant.<sup>38</sup> So during his ministry, Russell was the source of “new light.”

When this expected Rapture failed to occur on time in 1878, The Herald's editor, Mr. Barbour, came up with "new light" on this and other doctrines.”

After Russell’s death, Rutherford taught that Jehovah and Jesus Had come to earth to inspect all the churches in 1914. After studying all he churches, they determined that only the Watchtower Society was faithful to Jehovah’s Word. Therefore, in 1919, God selected men from among the anointed 144,000 thousand, to be His mouthpiece on earth. Those chosen and anointed believers were the men who published the Watchtower.<sup>39</sup> So the vehicle for “new light” became the Watchtower Society or more specifically the Governing Body. However, in reality the Governing Body was a “rubber stamp” for the President’s decisions until the early 1990s. The President was the source of “new light” for the first four presidencies.

Under Russell, and later the Watchtower Society, the Watchtower Magazine became the vehicle for God’s new teaching. Rutherford taught that the Holy Spirit ceased to speak to the Church in 1918 when Jesus came into His spiritual temple.<sup>40</sup> Instead, God provided His Word to the Watchtower by angels.<sup>41</sup> The angels delivered the content of the writings in the Watchtower through an undisclosed process. The teachings, because of their heavenly nature, are to be believed and obeyed without question. Questioning the teachings of the Watchtower Society or disobeying them is independent thinking and willful disobedience, both of which can lead to being disfellowshipped. Therefore, believing “new light” is essential to life.

Jehovah's Word To Us?

Jehovah's Witnesses believe that Jehovah communicates directly with his chosen channel, the Watchtower Society, and that he reveals new truths to those who are the faithful slave class (The Governing Body). Watchtower proclaims that these truths are binding upon all who hear them.<sup>42</sup> They cannot be questioned, only believed and obeyed. The Watchtower also tells us that we must be faithful since Jesus and God fully trust the Watchtower.<sup>43</sup>

No doubt, they first hear the instruction which the Lord issues to his remnant and then these invisible messengers pass such instruction on to the remnant. The facts show that the angels of the Lord with him at his temple have been thus rendering service unto the remnant since 1919.”

(Psalm 119:105) But Jehovah God has also provided his visible organization, his “faithful and discreet slave,” made up of spirit anointed ones, to help Christians in all nations to understand and apply properly the Bible in their lives. Unless we are in touch with this channel of communication that God is using, we will not progress along the road to life, no matter how much Bible reading we do.”

Do we gratefully partake of it and readily apply what we learn? What is our response to organizational decisions made by the slave? Our willing obedience to the direction provided gives evidence of our faith in Jehovah's arrangement.”

These revelations are of the highest priority, and even the Bible is interpreted in light of these new revelations. This is why it is only possible to understand the Bible with the guidance of the Watchtower.<sup>44</sup>

Apologists for the Jehovah's Witnesses argue that the concept of progressive revelation or new light is not new.<sup>45</sup> They claim that orthodox Christianity or Christendom utilizes a form of progressive revelation when it allows the Bible to reinterpret the events of the Old Testament in light of the New Testament. However, it must be noted that this is not an example of how the Jehovah's Witnesses actually understand progressive revelation. In addition, the church believes that when the canon was closed, God ceased to speak to the church through progressive revelation.

One apologist for the Jehovah's Witnesses mentions a number of supposed examples of progressive revelation in orthodox Christianity.<sup>46</sup> On examination, it is clear that none of them would meet the criteria of progressive revelation. One example is the claim that

"But if each of us were left to himself just because he has a copy of the Bible and were to direct his movements independently as he thought he understood the Word, what? It is likely, or possible, that there would be a great deal of confusion or working in competition among us. Hence, besides individually possessing God's Word, we need a theocratic organization. Yes, besides having God's spirit of illumination, a Christian needs Jehovah's theocratic organization in order to understand the Bible."

"In his attempt to explain why the Trinity was not taught until the fourth century, Gregory Nazianzen in his 32nd Oration states that God used gradually increasing light to introduce the change to a belief in a Triune God."

<sup>46</sup> Ibid. "Both Protestant and Catholic commentators have applied the "expanding light" idea to an increase in Bible understanding regarding doctrine: In his attempt to explain why the Trinity was not taught until the fourth century, Gregory Nazianzen in his 32nd Oration states that God used gradually increasing light to introduce the change to a belief in a Triune God." Gill's Expositor says: "that shineth more and more. . . the light of the knowledge of Christ the way . . . is increased by means of the ministry of the word, . . . Light into the Gospel, and the doctrines of it, increases yet more and more . . . when the light of knowledge will be clear and perfect."

“Gregory Nazianzen, in his 32nd Oration, states that God used gradually increasing light to introduce the belief in a Triune God.”<sup>47</sup> However, Oration 32 does not say anything like this. In Oration 32, he speaks of using the sun, the ray and the light to describe the trinity, but notes it is an inadequate representation. There is no reference to or suggestion of progressive revelation.<sup>48</sup> A second example is from John Gill’s Exposition of the Bible.<sup>49</sup> However, a reading of the commentary reveals that the commentator was speaking of an individual coming to salvation and walking according to God’s Word. The section comments on Prov. 4:18. It contrasts those following an evil path that leads to great darkness to those following the path of righteousness, which leads to great light. The commentary does not suggest that progressive revelation leads to greater light but that through study of God’s Word and prayer, and by following righteousness we develop a deeper relationship to God.<sup>50</sup> Both of these last examples show that Watchtower scholarship is at best biased and at worst dishonest. Interestingly progressive revelation is commonly associated with cult groups. If progressive revelation were a biblical concept, there should be some scriptural indication.

The first grace in conversion is a “true light [that] shines” (1 John 2:8), by which a soul sees its own vileness and filthiness, the insufficiency of its own righteousness; and the fulness, suitableness, and ability Christ as a Saviour, and has some discerning of Gospel truths.”

The Scriptural Basis of “New Light”

Jehovah’s Witnesses do offer scriptural support for their use of progressive revelation. In addition to allegorizing Matthew 24, they quote Prov. 4:18, which states, “The path of the righteous is like the morning sun, shining ever brighter till the full light of day.” This is understood to mean that God has chosen to reveal his truth gradually, and the longer we persevere the more truth we have. God, they teach, will continue to supply new doctrinal teaching and prophecy.

Since it is important to find the truth regarding biblical teaching, the supporting Scriptures need to be examined in context. Prov. 4:18 is the strongest verse put forth by the Jehovah’s Witnesses. It is used almost exclusively in their support of progressive revelation. Therefore, the passage needs to be analyzed.

Proverbs 4 is wisdom literature written by Solomon. It provides a warning to a growing son. The son is to stay clear of the paths of wickedness and instead walk in the paths of righteousness. Those who walk in wickedness face ever-increasing darkness, and those who walk in righteousness will find themselves walking in greater light. Because they walk in righteousness, they will find happiness and security. The verse has nothing to do with prophetic knowledge increasing across time. It does not provide any basis to believe that God is supplying the Watchtower Society with increasing understanding.

If readers were to read Proverbs 4 without being indoctrinated with Watchtower theology, they would never see the passage as supporting progressive revelation. More than a dozen commentaries examining Prov. 4:18 were consulted. Not one provided any support for the Watchtower understanding of the text. They were unanimous in their understanding that the text was a warning to a young man to walk in the paths of righteousness.<sup>51</sup>

Two other verses are infrequently quoted as supporting “new light,” John 16:12 and Daniel 12:4. John 16:12 says, “I have many more things to say to you, but you cannot bear them now.<sup>13</sup> But when he, the Spirit of truth, comes, he will guide you into all truth. For he will not speak on his own authority, but will speak whatever he hears, and will tell you what is to come.” It would seem that this verse could be a claim to be receiving new light from the Spirit, but the Watchtower Society states that it has made no claims to be inspired or infallible.<sup>52</sup> Also Rutherford’s own teaching indicates that the Spirit no longer provides teaching to us. In his book Preservation, Rutherford states that since Christ has been enthroned, the comforter has been taken away.<sup>53</sup> Several other Rutherford quotes note that the role of the Holy Spirit has been changed and that angels are now ministering in the Spirit's place.<sup>54</sup> One perceptive individual noted that if the Holy Spirit were no longer necessary and his role was fulfilled by angels, only those at Watchtower headquarters had access to the truth. Since Rutherford had alienated many Bible Students, this was one way to deny the validity of any counter-claims to truth that they might have.<sup>55</sup>

Christian commentaries interpret Bible passages in light of the surrounding context. The context indicates that the Holy Spirit will reveal Jesus and the meaning of his ministry in the coming years. This allows the Spirit to guide the formation of the New Testament and be available for disciples as they share Jesus. The verse is not understood to suggest wide ranging progressive revelation.<sup>56</sup>

The last verse offered concerning progressive revelation is Dan. 12:4, "But you, Daniel, close up these words and seal the book until the time of the end. Many will dash about, and knowledge will increase.”<sup>57</sup> This verse adds little to the idea of ongoing progressive revelation.

Inherent Difficulties With “New Light”

There are a number of problems with progressive revelation. First, there does not seem to be any scriptural support for the idea. None of the verses that the Watchtower or individual Jehovah’s Witnesses have supplied support progressive revelation. Second, the use of “new light” often reshapes the clear meaning of scriptural passages. Third, the use of “new light” has led to many significant doctrinal changes as well as a number of false prophecies. Based on these factors, it seems doubtful that “new light” is a valid concept. In addition, other problems plague the concept of progressive revelation. If the Watchtower Society treats its declarations as God’s Word, but those words lead to error, God is responsible for the error. However, if the author is admittedly not inspired, how can the delivered “new light” be treated as inspired?

Functional Inspiration

A key problem faced by the Watchtower Society is how to view discredited doctrines and prophecies. When they have “new light” and a new truth replaces the old truth rather than building on it, it means that the old truth is no longer true. If the Watchtower is divinely

<sup>57</sup> Stephen R. Miller, Daniel, vol. 18, The New American Commentary (Nashville: Broadman & Holman Publishers, 1994), 321, “Literally the Hebrew text may be rendered either, ‘Many will go here and there and the knowledge will increase’ (cf. KJV, NASB) or, ‘Many will go here and there that the knowledge may increase’. The latter translation expresses the purpose of the going about, and the NIV seems correctly to have adopted this meaning. An increase in travel toward the end of the age is not the idea of the phrase ‘will go here and there’. In a number of Old Testament passages (e.g., 2 Chr 16:9; Jer 5:1; Amos 8:12; Zech 4:10), Hebrew yēšōṭēṭû denotes ‘to go here and there’ in search of a person or thing, and that is the meaning here. An ‘intense’ searching seems indicated by the verb form. The purpose of this search will be ‘to increase knowledge’. But what kind of knowledge is being sought? ‘Yet Gabriel was not predicting a mere surge in scientific ‘knowledge,’ and so forth, in the last days. The article appears with ‘knowledge’ (lit., ‘the knowledge’), showing that a particular kind of ‘knowledge’ was intended, that is, when and how Daniel’s message is to be fulfilled. As the time of fulfillment draws nearer, the “wise” will seek to comprehend these prophecies more precisely, and God will grant understanding (‘knowledge’) to them.”

inspired, how can this be explained? Does God make errors? Is God unaware of the future?
Does God mislead or lie?

To escape responsibility, the Watchtower Society denies that it is inspired.<sup>58</sup> They are just fallible men trying to follow Jehovah. However, while they make that claim, the word that the Watchtower Society produces is treated as if it is inspired. They state, “It is vital that we . . . respond to the directions of the ‘slave’ as we would to the voice of God. . . .”<sup>59</sup> To add to the confusion, the Watchtower both claims<sup>60</sup> and later denies prophetic authority.<sup>61</sup> However, since the Watchtower teachings are considered binding and unquestionable, it would seem logical that one understands that the Watchtower and its authors functionally claim inspiration.

Hence, in such cases, when their words do not come true, they should not be viewed as false prophets such as those warned against at Deuteronomy 18:20-22. In their human fallibility, they misinterpreted matters.”

After his death and until 1929, to support progressive revelation, Witnesses taught that Charles Russell conveyed God’s Word to the Watchtower Society from heaven.<sup>62</sup> However, in 1929, Rutherford began to erase Russell from Watchtower history. Earlier in 1927, Rutherford began to teach that the Faithful Servant was a composite consisting of the anointed 144,000.<sup>63</sup> These selected members received the message of Jehovah’s that was brought by angels. They then transmitted that message through the Watchtower.<sup>64</sup> Russell was no longer considered the faithful servant.

Watchtower, under Rutherford and later under the Watchtower Society, continued to receive flashes of “new light.” The Jehovah’s Witnesses held these prophetic words in high esteem. Over time, because Jehovah’s Witnesses were taught that they are not capable of understanding the Bible apart from the Watchtower, the Watchtower Society created a sense of dependency among the Jehovah’s Witnesses.<sup>65</sup> A similar claim from the Watchtower states plainly that only through the Watchtower can we learn the Bible and experience God's gifts.<sup>66</sup>

While teaching that they are the sole source of light for the world and the sole source of biblical knowledge, they are also teaching that no other denomination or Christian group has either truth or salvation.<sup>67</sup> The Watchtower Society points out that though the world is in darkness, the light of Jehovah purifies the Watchtower Society.<sup>68</sup> Therefore, we can see that Jehovah's Witnesses do understand that the utterances of the Watchtower Society are inspired. ### Mitigating the Damage

This “new light” has brought frequent doctrinal changes and unfulfilled prophecies. This has unsettled some Jehovah’s Witnesses and led to many leaving the Watchtower Society. Therefore, the Watchtower has made efforts to reassure Jehovah’s Witnesses. Because there is often an inability to see progress, they teach that there is a continued need to adhere to the teachings of the Watchtower Society in spite of any apparent problems. They use the analogy of tacking while sailing to explain this apparent lack of progress.<sup>74</sup>

When it becomes obvious that changes in doctrine or prophecies have not gone well, the Watchtower speaks of God’s progressive truth and encourages a positive attitude towards what they refer to as refinements.<sup>75</sup>

Rebranding doctrinal changes as refinements, the Watchtower attempts to minimize the internal public relations damage done by the doctrinal changes and prophetic errors. The

Another way to cooperate with Christ’s ‘brothers’ is to have a positive attitude toward any refinements in our understanding of Scriptural truths as published by ‘the faithful and discreet slave.’”

Watchtower recognizes that these changes sometimes cause stress and leave the Witnesses open to criticism. This of course discourages some Jehovah's Witnesses, and they are tempted to drop out of the Watchtower. However, the Watchtower reminds its adherents of a time when many of Jesus' followers abandoned him because of a hard teaching. His disciples, however, stayed because they knew only he had the light of God. The Watchtower Society encourages its people to do likewise.<sup>76</sup> In fact, the Watchtower cautions its people not to regress. It reminds them that they had once been part of Christendom and had held erroneous beliefs. However, they left those errors behind to obey the true light. Now, shaken by the errant flashes of new light, these same Jehovah's Witnesses find themselves tempted to return to the beliefs that they had before.<sup>77</sup>

However, the Watchtower has found that sometimes even a healthy dose of guilt may not be enough to keep people in line. The Watchtower must find a way of justifying the changes and the seeming errors. How can they do this?

Taking those words literally, many disciples said: "This speech is shocking; who can listen to it?" They "went off to the things behind." But Peter said: "Lord, whom shall we go away to? You have sayings of everlasting life." (John 6:60, 66, 68) Peter relied on God for spiritual enlightenment. "It is a serious matter to represent God and Christ in one way, then find that our understanding of the major teachings and fundamental doctrines' of the Scriptures was in error and then after that, to go back to the very doctrines that, by years of study, we had thoroughly determined to be in error. Christians cannot be vacillating—wishy-washy—about such fundamental teachings. What confidence can one put in the sincerity or judgement of such persons?"

Justification of Errors

The Watchtower encouragement to remain constant asks a great deal of the Jehovah's Witnesses. With many of the flashes of "new light," they are asked to embrace positions that are not logical development of prior new light but actually contradict the old light.

Sometimes the "new light" may have been previously rejected. This is illogical, but because the changes are "new light," the teachings must be accepted. What are the excuses commonly used by Jehovah's Witnesses to lessen the impact of changed doctrine and failed prophecies?

Apologist for the Jehovah's Witnesses suggest that the Jehovah's Witnesses should be allowed some leeway with their proclamations of "new light." They argue that the Apostles in the New Testament also made mistakes.<sup>78</sup> If the Apostles made errors, it is not surprising that the Watchtower Society also makes occasional errors requiring readjustment.<sup>79</sup> However, this approach fails. The Scriptures the Watchtower Society selected, to show the teaching error, do not show that.<sup>80</sup> Instead, they show the Apostles seeking Jesus' wisdom about the coming of the Kingdom of God and the end of things. The Apostles did not teach error in any of the Scriptures cited by the Watchtower apologists.

Earlier apologist for the Watchtower claimed that erroneous teachings have been permitted by God to test the Jehovah's Witnesses.<sup>81</sup> However, James 1:13 states, "When tempted, no one should say, 'God is tempting me'. For God cannot be tempted by evil, nor does he tempt anyone.” Therefore, this approach fails as well.

Other Jehovah's Witness apologist have explained away errors in a more casual way. They suggest that Watchtower is only guilty of being too eager for God's Kingdom to come. Who can speak badly about that? The mistakes were rooted in a desire to be vigilant and alert to the movement of God. Unfortunately, this sometimes led to error.<sup>82</sup> The prediction of false dates is viewed sympathetically by Jehovah's Witnesses because those who made the predictions were longing for God's Kingdom.<sup>83</sup> In fact, the Watchtower finds fault with other sects or denominations for not predicting future events. They accuse those groups of inducing apathy.<sup>84</sup>

The Watchtower Society is quick to excuse its own failings as due to virtue, while castigating other religious group as being unacceptable to God because of their untruths.

Jehovah's Witnesses reach out to others assuring them the Watchtower Society has the truth, the only truth.<sup>85</sup> Yet the Watchtower is all too ready to excuse itself, letting us know, when necessary, that they are not infallible and they do make mistakes.<sup>86</sup> This can be confusing because they, at one and the same time, state they are not infallible while claiming that the message they deliver is from God and spoken as He commands.<sup>87</sup>

Judge Rutherford was clear; the message delivered from the Watchtower is from God. However, God is not the purveyor of imperfect messages. This raises a significant issue. Is God mistaken? It would seem so. A number of claims seem to implicate Jehovah as being a God of error and change. This is compounded by the occasional, but vacillating claim the Watchtower Society speaks as God's prophet.<sup>88</sup> If this is true, all of the mistaken prophecy and all of the illogical doctrinal changes are the work of Jehovah. It is a difficult problem.

The Watchtower Society has claimed that angels delivered the truth to the leadership so that they might distribute it.<sup>89</sup> Later they claimed these angels caused God's truth to be

To deflect the blame from Jehovah some Watchtower apologist claim that Jehovah's Witnesses are only imperfect and fallible men. The errors that exist fall upon them.<sup>91</sup>

This is an interesting position because on one hand they require that the message delivered by the Watchtower be accepted and adhered to without question because it is God's message. On the other hand, they deny infallibility. It seems they are attempting to have the benefit of an infallible message with none of the risk that claiming infallibility brings. In response to this, it seems appropriate to look at the Watchtower to see how we should respond to the fact that they wish to be known as imperfect and fallible men. Watchtower admonishes Jehovah's Witnesses not to trust in imperfect men.<sup>92</sup> So if they wish to be known as imperfect men themselves how can they be wise? the Bible and forsake other guidance.<sup>94</sup> It would be unwise to follow the philosophies of imperfect men.<sup>95</sup> Those who chose to follow imperfect men will encounter problems.<sup>96</sup>

The Watchtower is caught in the horns of a dilemma. If the “new light” is inspired, God is awash in error. If the Watchtower Society is imperfect, their own literature condemns them and there is no need to adhere to their teaching or doctrines.

Is it possible that “new light” is actually reliable and the Watchtower can be acquitted of the claim that it is erroneous? Could there be a simple test that should be accepted by both Jehovah’s Witnesses and non-Witnesses?

A Simple Test For the Reliability of “New Light”

In his early writing, Russell established parameters that are still useful for evaluating the use of “new light” by the Jehovah’s Witnesses. He wrote that “new light” should be progressive and that the new teachings would not contradict the old. In other words, the truths would build upon one another in linear fashion.<sup>97</sup> Therefore, whether we accept the idea of progressive revelation or not, we have been given criteria for evaluating “new light” by the very man who founded the Watchtower Society. He taught that “new light” would add to and further explain older light. The “old light” would not be contradicted or extinguished. So doctrinal reversals would be a clear case of “new light” being erroneous.

Using Russell’s criteria, we find a number of serious doctrinal reversals and failed prophecies. We will look at one example. It is of no real significance other than it clearly demonstrates contradictions and flip-flops in what is supposed to be “new light.” The example is the fate of the men of Sodom and Gomorrah. For some reason, there arose a concern about the fate of those who had been in Sodom and Gomorrah. Were they beyond redemption? How does their fate fit with the Ransom doctrine? People wanted to know if they would be annihilated or whether they would be raised to participate in the millennium and have a second chance at earning eternal life. The Watchtower Society received “new light” several times regarding the status of those who had inhabited Sodom and Gomorrah. The different flashes of light did not add one on the other to provide new light but instead contradicted one another. This was exactly what Pastor Russell warned was an indication of error, a refutation of “new light.”

A new view of truth never can contradict a former truth. “New light” never extinguishes older “light,” but adds to it. . . .”

Gomorrah. On the positive side, according to Jehovah's Witness doctrine, these men are asleep so have not had to endure the anxiety induced by Jehovah's indecision.

We know that the God of the Bible is always the same. He does not lie or mislead people, and his judgment is perfect. These flashes of "new light" demonstrate as well as anything that the "new light" doctrine has led to serious error and implicates God in being dishonest. Can any doctrine that suggests God does not know from one year to the next what is true be true? Can any doctrine that suggests that God is misleading or deliberately playing with His people be true? The answer is clear; it cannot be true. "New light" is a false doctrine. Since this false doctrine is the foundation of many of the teachings that have set the Jehovah's Witnesses at odds with orthodox Christianity, the entire theological base of the Watchtower Society is suspect.

Scriptures indicate that apparently they will not. For example, one of Jesus' inspired disciples, Jude, wrote first about the angels that forsook their place in heaven to have relations with the daughters of men. Then he added: 'So too Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities about them, after they in the same manner as the foregoing ones had committed fornication excessively and gone out after flesh for unnatural use, are placed before us as a warning example by undergoing the judicial punishment of everlasting fire.' (Jude 6, 7; Gen. 6:1, 2) Yes, for their excessive immorality the people of Sodom and of the surrounding cities suffered a destruction from which they will apparently never be resurrected."

Chapter 4

Important Theology Unique to the Jehovah's Witnesses

The Gospel

What is the Gospel? For those steeped in an evangelical subculture, it does not seem possible that there could be any question. The Gospel is Christo-centric. It is what Christ has done to restore humankind's relationship with God. The basic Gospel message is that humans are unrighteous sinners (Rom. 3:23). In fact, no one is righteous (Rom. 3:10). Our works are inadequate to remove the damage of sin (Rom. 3:20). Christ came as an atoning sacrifice for our sins (1 John 2:2). When we believe in Him (which implies that the belief produces a change of heart and motivation to follow), our sins are forgiven, and our relationship with God is restored (Rom. 10:8-10). We pass from death to life (John 5:24). Both Peter and Paul recognized Jesus, the Messiah, as the one who came to set us free.

An evangelical defines the Gospel as the hope of forgiveness and eternal life found through faith in Jesus Christ. It includes the message Jesus proclaimed during His ministry, and the recounting of Jesus' life, death and resurrection. The Gospel tells of a present salvation with the hope of a future resurrection and eternal life.

On the other hand, Jehovah's Witnesses are not fond of the term 'Gospel'. While they do identify the four historical books of Jesus' life as Gospels, they use the term 'Good News' in place of the word 'Gospel' elsewhere. Their Good News differs from the Gospel with which the evangelical is familiar. For the Jehovah's Witness the Good News has a strong emphasis on the Kingdom of God (God's theocratic rule on earth). Jesus has been enthroned since 1914; the last days will end soon and Armageddon will occur.<sup>1</sup> Then God will raise the dead, and the millennium will begin. The emphasis of the Good News is directed at what Jehovah is doing. The Jehovah's Witness is to proclaim this coming Kingdom and be part of the Watchtower Society. They must work hard to qualify for the eternal life that will be available at the end of the millennium.<sup>2</sup> The idea of 'being saved' is foreign to the Jehovah's Witness. The majority of verses we associate with being a believer in Christ are said to be for the 144,000. Those in the Great Multitude do not benefit from those verses. They cannot be 'born again'.

The Jehovah's Witnesses recognize that they are presenting another or a different Gospel and believe that this does not constitute a problem.<sup>3</sup> The prior Gospel of Christendom is really no Gospel at all. Since 1914 they have been faithfully proclaiming the 'Good News'

"Now we are in the day of greater fulfilment. In 1920, that is, after the imprisoned condition and beheading experience of God's people during the war period, Bible Students came to a correct understanding of our Lord's prophecy contained in Matthew 24: 14. They then realized that "this gospel" which was to be preached in all the world for a testimony to the Gentiles or all nations, was not a gospel of a kingdom yet to come but a gospel to the effect that the Messianic King has begun His reign over earth, and 'the kingdom of God is among us' therefore."

All lovers of life should want to join the ranks of Jehovah's witnesses."

"Let the honest-hearted person compare the kind of preaching of the gospel of the Kingdom done by the religious systems of Christendom during all the centuries with that done by Jehovah's Witnesses since the end of World War I in 1918. They are not one and the same kind. That of Jehovah's Witnesses is really "gospel," or "good news," as of God's heavenly kingdom that was established by the enthronement of his Son Jesus Christ at the end of the Gentile Times in 1914. (Luke 21:24)" that leads to life. The true Gospel had been unavailable from the time of the last Apostle until Charles Taze Russell founded the Watchtower Society.

In summary then, the typical evangelical understands that the Gospel is bound to what Jesus Christ has done on our behalf. The Gospel is a message directed at individuals and calling for a response. The result of responding to the Gospel occurs in the present and leads to the forgiveness of sin, to the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and to eternal life. The Jehovah's Witnesses believe the focus of the 'Good News' is the vindication of Jehovah's name and the development of Jesus' Kingdom on earth. For the Jehovah's Witness the benefit of the 'Good News' is future. It will require much work here and will later lead to the forgiveness of sin and eternal life following a lengthy process of being perfected during the millennium.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, "You Can Live Forever in Paradise on Earth—But How?" Watchtower, February 15, 1983, 12, accessed July 30, 2018, <http://www.watchtowerwayback.org/jw-wb/English/Magazines/The%20Watchtower/1983%20The%20Watchtower.pdf>. "However, not everyone will be permitted to live in the Paradise earth. Requirements must be met. That is reasonable.—Matthew 6:10. Consider: If you were the owner of a beautiful home surrounded by well-kept gardens, would you allow just anyone to live there? No, he would have to meet with your approval, meeting your requirements. What does God require of those who will reside forever upon his Paradise earth? Let us examine four basic requirements. Four Requirements Jesus Christ identified a first requirement when he said in prayer to his Father: 'This means everlasting life, their taking in knowledge of you, the only true God, and of the one whom you sent forth, Jesus Christ.' (John 17:3) Knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ includes knowledge of God's purposes regarding the earth and of Christ's role as earth's new King. Will you take in such knowledge by studying the Bible? Many have found the second requirement more difficult. It is to obey God's laws, yes, to conform one's life to the moral requirements set out in the Bible. This includes refraining from a debauched, immoral way of life.—1 Corinthians 6:9, 10; 1 Peter 4:3, 4. A third requirement is that we be associated with God's channel, his organization. God has always used an organization. For example, only those in the ark in Noah's day survived the Flood, and only those associated with the Christian congregation in the first century had God's favor. (Acts 4:12) Similarly, Jehovah is using only one organization today to accomplish his will. To receive everlasting life in the earthly Paradise we must identify that organization and serve God as part of it. The fourth requirement is connected with loyalty. God requires that prospective subjects of his Kingdom support his government by loyally advocating his Kingdom rule to others. Jesus Christ explained: 'This 'Good News' of the kingdom will be preached in all the inhabited earth'. (Matthew 24:14) Will you meet this requirement by telling others about God's Kingdom?"

Jehovah's Witnesses place a strong emphasis on sharing the 'Good News' that Jesus is currently enthroned, and the Kingdom is coming.<sup>5</sup> Because of this Jehovah's Witnesses look forward to living in a restored new earth, a paradise where there will be order and everything will be stable. They do not acknowledge the current forgiveness of sin, the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, or the reception of eternal life. Those benefits are future.

It is interesting that even though there are many Bibles available, the door-to-door activity is considered essential. This is because a person reading just the Bible without the assistance of the Watchtower will be unable to understand the 'Good News'.<sup>6</sup> This is reminiscent of what Russell said about his own writings. He claimed that if Bible Students were to stop reading his materials and read just the Bible, they would fall back into error within two years. To a logical person that should suggest that the 'Gospel' of the Bible and the 'Good News' of the Watchtower are actually two very different things.

( Mt 4: 17; 10:7) Jesus, anointed as Christ, the King, said to the Pharisees, his enemies: 'The kingdom of God is in your midst.' ( Luke 17:20, 21 ) This was the theme, or central point, of the 'Good News' during Jesus' earthly ministry. However, it is not reported that after Jesus' death the disciples proclaimed the Kingdom as having "drawn near" or as being at hand. Rather, the 'Good News' they preached was that after Jesus had laid down his life as the ransom price for salvation, he ascended to heaven and was then sitting at God's right hand. They also preached about Jesus' return at a later time and his Kingdom to come."

Otherwise the people would be left in ignorance as to the setting up of the Messianic government in our day."

The 144 Thousand

According to Jehovah's Witness eschatology (theology of the end times), a special class of believers has been designated the anointed. Those 144,000 will go directly to heaven at their death, to rule and reign with Christ.<sup>7</sup> Russell believed that the Scriptures indicated that the 'little flock' of Luke 12:32 and the sheep of John 10:1-15 were synonymous with the 144,000 of Revelation 7 and 14. This is the most exalted class called the 'little flock' or God's congregation.<sup>8</sup> Those were faithful and true believers. They gave all to please God. They lived self sacrificially and sought the truth.

As a result, Jehovah selected them to rule with him.<sup>9</sup> The promises of the New Testament are for them, but not for others. At death, they immediately change, receiving a spiritual body and go directly to heaven to be with Jehovah.<sup>10</sup> There they rule and reign with

"Also, it is to the spirit-anointed Christians who will rule in that kingdom that of the Christian Greek Scriptures is directed, including the promises of everlasting life." Spirit anointed Christians are members of the little 'flock,' the 144,000 thousand.

"When the Bible speaks of 'the congregation of the living God', it is referring to a particular group of Christ's followers. (1 Timothy 3:15) They are also called 'the congregation of the firstborn who have been enrolled in the heavens'. (Hebrews 12:23) So this 'congregation of God' is made up of all Christians on earth who have the hope of heavenly life. In all, only 144,000 persons finally make up the 'congregation of God.'"

<sup>9</sup> Ibid., 125-126. "So it was from the earth that Jehovah arranged to take a 'little flock' of persons to be associated with his Son in the heavenly kingdom. They are the ones who, by their faithfulness to God, proved false the Devil's charge that men serve God only for selfish reasons."

Christ. Some early Christians were in the 144,000, but the apostasy of early Christendom meant that few in that time found their way into the 144,000. Only after Charles Taze Russell restored the church did God begin to select large numbers of faithful believers to be part of the ‘little flock.’ As a result, the majority of the 144,000 are followers of the Watchtower Society.<sup>11</sup> Russell taught that in 1878 all the anointed saints, who had previously died, were raised as a part of the ‘little flock’. From that time forward, all those chosen to be part of the ‘little flock’ would receive a spiritual body and go to be with Christ immediately at death. This special calling will continue until the anticipated harvest of the whole group takes place.<sup>12</sup> The great multitude, another class of believers, will be subject to the anointed class of believers. Russell also taught that the time for the selection of those special individuals was to end in October of 1881.<sup>13</sup> He said that “the favour has now ended” and “the door was

And while we, therefore, conclude that their resurrection is now an accomplished fact, and hence that they as well as the Lord are present in the earth, the fact that we do not see them is no obstacle to faith when we remember that, like their Lord, they are now spirit kings, and, like him, invisible to men.”

And these are to recognize him now, the others are to stumble and not recognize Him until these have all gone in to the marriage and the door to that high position is closed. Our understanding is that the Bridegroom came in 1874; and this little company is being brought to a knowledge of his presence, and in that sense, being separated from other true Christians who either are overcharged with the affairs of this world or bound by chains of denominationalism, are making void the word of God through their traditions, etc., and still others, who, not being in condition of heart to receive Him on the evidence of His word, but who turn to seek light on His presence in other directions and find it not until the door to that high calling is shut. shut.”<sup>14</sup> Those who were dedicated followers of Charles Taze Russell could become members of the 144,000 until then. They could share in the promises of Scripture, escape Armageddon, have spiritual bodies, and live in heaven.<sup>15</sup> Over time, the Watchtower has changed the 1881 date a number of times. In 1919 there was said to be a final harvest of the anointed. Then the date of 1931 was set as the last opportunity to be among the anointed. Finally, it was decided that it was not possible to know for sure when the last anointed might be selected.<sup>16</sup>

The Great Multitude

Those who did not follow Russell, those who were lukewarm and undiscerning, yet Christian, would become part of the great multitude but would never rule and reign with Christ.<sup>17</sup> The great multitude, by being apathetic and associating with corrupt Christendom,

If our application of Scripture be correct, the favor has now ended, and in the language of the parable, "the door was shut"; and to those who have never fully consecrated and sacrificed self to God, we cannot any longer hold out the great prize of our high calling, viz.: to be members of the Bride of Christ, joint heirs of Glory, Honor and Immortality.”

That the great multitude are Christ's in the sense we have presented seems evident even from the fact that they have robes; that is, they had been counted holy, or had Christ's righteousness imputed to them. But they had defiled their garments by contact with Babylon, and therefore their loss of the crown, and the need of the judgments to separate them.”

had associated with spiritual Babylon and was defiled.<sup>18</sup> Russell believed the great multitude would come from believers in apostate Christendom, this group was spoken of somewhat disparagingly. Russell taught the great multitude was destined to go to heaven. He said that when members of the great multitude die, they do not go directly to heaven but sleep until the resurrection of the righteous and unrighteous. When resurrected, they will have fleshly, not spiritual, bodies even in heaven.<sup>19</sup> If Armageddon were to occur while they were alive, God would protect them.<sup>20</sup> The great multitude will worship God and serve Jesus and the ‘little flock’, but they will never rule. Because this great multitude has second hand status, it exists to support the 144,000. Therefore, most of the New Testament does not apply to the great multitude.<sup>21</sup> They are not part of the New Covenant.<sup>22</sup> They are not part of the Congregation of God.<sup>23</sup> They are not born again.<sup>24</sup> They do not have Jesus as their mediator.<sup>25</sup> They are not Jesus' brothers.<sup>26</sup> They do not inherit the earth.<sup>27</sup> And finally, the Spirit does not pray for them.<sup>28</sup> This is the earthly hope to which the Jehovah's Witnesses aspire. It is essentially a hope to be resurrected to a 1000-year probation where they can prove themselves by being perfected, doing what Adam could not do, thereby receiving eternal life.

Over time there have been significant changes made in the composition and location of the great multitude. Russell had taught that the great multitude was composed of those who were lukewarm. They were members of Christendom who did not really give of themselves. Because of their failings, they became the "other sheep." They were not going to rule and reign, but instead they would be servants. They would live in heaven but would have physical bodies. However, under Rutherford, the identity of the great multitude changed, and the negative associations diminished.<sup>29</sup> Rutherford, perhaps realizing that a 144,000 was not a large enough group for a growing denomination, made some startling changes. In 1935, he announced during a presentation that it had been revealed that the great multitude was actually the grouping of faithful Jehovah's Witnesses.<sup>30</sup> It was not made up of the lukewarm or of other denominations of Christendom. In addition, it was revealed that rather than being in heaven they would live on a recreated perfect earth. Amazingly, this revelation was well received, and Jehovah's Witnesses are content to be relegated to a second hand status where most of the New Testament does not apply to them. They are even comfortable in the belief that they have an earthly calling where they can anticipate a millennium of testing before they are adopted and given eternal life.

The Non-Believing World

There is yet another class of people that is neither the little flock nor the great multitude. This class of people consists of those who have not had enough exposure to Jehovah to understand what is required of them.<sup>31</sup> These would be referred to as 'the lost' by Jehovah's Witnesses understand that these are loyal servants of God who will survive Armageddon with the prospect of living forever on an earth restored to the condition of Paradise."

<sup>30</sup> Ibid., 166. "For years, even down till 1935, they were not understood to be the same as the sheep in Jesus' parable of the sheep and the goats. As already noted, it was thought that they were a secondary heavenly class, secondary because they had been negligent about obeying God. However, that view gave rise to persistent questions. Some of these were discussed early in 1935 at the noon meal at the Watch Tower Society's headquarters. Some among those who expressed themselves at that time suggested that the great multitude was an earthly class."

most evangelicals. They are considered unrighteous, but when they die, the ransom removes the curse of original sin, and their own death pays for their personal sin. At the resurrection, they will be raised with physical bodies on the new earth.<sup>32</sup> Russell taught that even Adam was included in this redemption. Those resurrected will learn of Jehovah and come to follow him. In the end, those who learn to be obedient to Jehovah will be adopted to eternal life. Those who rebel will be destroyed.<sup>33</sup> Russell understood that only a very small number known only to God would not be resurrected. Later teaching by Rutherford restricted those who would benefit from the ransom. Those who have committed especially heinous sins such as Adam, the residents of Sodom, Judas Iscariot, and those who blaspheme the Holy Spirit will not be resurrected.<sup>34</sup> Current Jehovah’s Witness doctrine teaches that in addition to the number of people deemed incorrigible, billions alive on earth will perish without hope of resurrection at Armageddon unless they have a relationship with Jehovah and the Watchtower Society.

Interestingly, there is very little difference between the fate of those in the great multitude and those who have not known or followed Christ. The exception to this would be if Armageddon occurred during their lifetime since the Jehovah's Witnesses not in good standing and the lost would all perish with no hope of resurrection. However, with that one exception, according to current Watchtower theology, both the lost and the great multitude are saved from the effects of original sin by the ransom, both have had their individual sins forgiven through their own death, and both will be resurrected with a clean slate. Both groups will live during the millennium and will learn to follow Jesus. After proving themselves faithful and dedicated, there will be a great final test. If the test is passed, members of both groups will have earned the right to adoption by God and eternal life.<sup>35</sup> Some, however, will be obstinate and continue to reject God's love. They will perish.<sup>36</sup> They will be annihilated, but they will not experience torment.<sup>37</sup>

No ransom will be given for them, and there will be no release or resurrection for them, their sin being a willful, individual sin against full light and opportunity, under a most favorable, individual trial."

The Bible, the 144,000 and the Great Multitude

A number of concepts Russell developed or borrowed came the Book of Revelation. Revelation is apocalyptic literature and is rich in both figurative language and symbolism. Many passages in Revelation have a number of possible meanings. Therefore, Revelation should be used very cautiously if it is being used to develop or understand doctrine. The meaning of many passages is not clear and cannot be spoken about dogmatically. In spite of this, Russell draws heavily from the Book of Revelation to develop key doctrines. The Book of Revelation provides Russell with the 144,000, the great multitude and the millennium.

When “new light” symbolic texts and doctrinal development come together, there is seemingly no limit to what may be discovered. An example of this is found in a Watchtower study on Revelation in print between 1988 and 2006.<sup>38</sup> In the book, the trumpets of Revelation chapter 8 are identified with seven conferences that the Watchtower Society held in the 1920s following Rutherford’s release from prison. During those conferences, the Jehovah’s Witnesses called out the sin of Christendom and pronounced judgment, fulfilling the trumpet judgments. However, if an unbiased reader were to read these same verses and find them applied to those conferences, it would be clear to that reader that the interpretation of Scripture by the Watchtower Society has no mooring in either exegesis or reality. This should serve as a warning for those evaluating their other doctrinal teachings based on Revelation.

Russell is sure that the 144,000 found in Revelation 7 and 14 is a literal number that describes the size of the little flock of Luke 12:35 and the sheep of John 10:1-15. They are the faithful and true believers. The ones who have embraced God's organization on earth. Because of their faithfulness, God has chosen them to rule from heaven. However, a quick read of the passages in context would seem to negate that understanding. The passage in Revelation 7 describes who this group is and why they were sealed. The passage is preceded in Revelation 6 by a great impending judgment and the wrath of God. These believers, who live on the earth at that time, are marked in chapter 7 so that the judgment of God will not affect them. It is important to note that in his exegesis Russell translated the 144,000 literally but the tribes of Israel figuratively. Very few commentators would do that. In short, Russell's interpretation of the passage is speculative and unverifiable. Very few, if any, of those interpreting the passage in context would come away with the Russell's understanding of the passage.

Regarding the identity of the great multitude, Russell initially said the great multitude was composed of those who had not sought God sacrificially. They were either apathetic or belonged to the churches of Christendom. Later, Rutherford redefined the great multitude as Jehovah's Witnesses who did not have a heavenly calling. Rutherford received new light that the great multitude was to live on earth forever. However, when the passage in Revelation 7 is examined, the Bible itself interprets who this great multitude is. Again, we see that the Watchtower development of particular classes of believers is speculative and requires that the reader suspend disbelief. Who is the great multitude? Rev. 7:14 says, "I said to him, 'Sir, you are the one that knows'. Then he said to me, 'These are they who have come out of the great ordeal; they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.'"

The Watchtower is pre-millennial in its understanding of Revelation. However, a plain reading of the text seems to destroy the Watchtower interpretation. Teaching on the millennium is based on a relatively few verses in Revelation 20. Historically these verses have been understood three different ways: amillennialism,<sup>39</sup> pre-millennialism,<sup>40</sup> and post-millennialism.<sup>41</sup> Watchtower theology states that the millennium begins following Armageddon. To that point, they are doing well. However, they then claim that all who are not of the anointed class are resurrected, both believers and non-believers. All have a clean slate when raised, and they together begin a thousand year period of probation hoping to be approved after a great test at the close of the millennium. A look at the passage quickly dispels the Watchtower interpretation of Rev. 20:4-5. The text says,

Then I saw thrones, and those seated on them were given authority to judge. I also saw the souls of those who had been beheaded for their testimony to Jesus and for the word of God. They had not worshiped the beast or its image and had not received its mark on their foreheads or their hands. They came to life and reigned with Christ a thousand years. (The rest of the dead did not come to life until the thousand years were ended.) This is the first resurrection.

So the first resurrection does not seem to contain the great multitude nor does it contain those who had died without Christ. It also is not a time of training and probation because they are already reigning with Christ for a thousand years. Following this the devil is again released, and after that pandemonium there is the resurrection of all those who have ever lived. Those raised at the end of the millennium are raised, not to a period of probation, but to judgment. Watchtower attempts to skirt this passage by saying that “coming to life” means being perfected at the end of the millennium.<sup>42</sup> That does not seem to be the intent of the actual verse.

The distinction is frequently made by speaking of historic premillennialism, from which dispensationalism is a departure.”

Finally, traditional Christian scholarship does not find a two-tier system of salvation in the Scriptures. Christians do not believe the Bible teaches that some Christians are fully “saved” while others are not. Nor do they believe that one class of believers has spiritual bodies and reside in heaven while others have physical bodies and reside on earth. Christians believe the world contains two types of people, those who are saved and those who are lost. Those beliefs are firmly rooted in Scripture and have been the testimony of the church for more than 2000 years. The teachings of the Watchtower are specious. Perhaps this is why Russell warns his followers that they must faithfully read his materials. He claims that if people read only the Bible, in a period of two years, they will revert to the doctrines of Christendom.<sup>43</sup> The obvious question would be “why is that?” If the Watchtower and Scripture Studies are so radically different from the Bible that just reading just the Bible

Rather, it means that all persons come to life in that they finally reach human perfection. They will be in the same perfect condition as were Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden. alone would lead someone away from Watchtower theology and back to orthodox Christianity, then the Watchtower theology cannot be biblical.

The Ransom Doctrine

The ransom doctrine is a keystone doctrine of Watchtower theology. Understanding the implications of the ransom doctrine helps explain much of the rest of Watchtower theology. The ransom doctrine has three important implications. First, the ransom doctrine, as understood by Russell and the Watchtower, argues against the deity of Jesus Christ. Second, the development of the doctrine minimizes grace and makes people ultimately responsible for their own salvation. Third, the doctrine gives support to the Watchtower position on the immortality of the soul, hell, and resurrection.

Russell's understanding of Christ's ransom was controversial. It resulted in a split between Russell and his co-worker Nelson Barbour and alienated the Adventists.<sup>44</sup> From the time of the split, the relationship between Russell and Barbour was acrimonious and never healed.<sup>45</sup>

What is the ransom doctrine? Russell taught, in agreement with orthodox Christianity, that Adam's sin infected all humankind.<sup>46</sup> As a result, sin separated humankind from God, and death entered the world. God, holy and perfect, must, by nature, judge sin. However, Russell also believed that the Bible was a reasonable book and God was a reasonable God. Therefore, Russell reasoned that he could use his intellect to determine what the Scriptures meant.<sup>47</sup> The result was that Russell "reasonably" assumed that he could determine God's nature and purpose. It was here that Russell's understanding of Scripture went astray. Concerning the ransom sacrifice, Russell reasoned that God could only accept an equivalent or corresponding sacrifice to atone for Adam's sin.<sup>48</sup> A perfect man had sinned, now a perfect man must be sacrificed to free humankind from original sin. Russell believed the ransom doctrine was a reasonable doctrine because it was fair. A perfect man died for a perfect man. Russell had previously rejected the trinity as unreasonable. Russell believed

"If it was right six thousand years ago to deprive mankind of life because of sin, it would always be wrong to restore the life unless the pronounced penalty were justly cancelled by the payment of an equivalent price. And this could only be accomplished by the willing sacrifice of another being of the same kind, whose right to life was unforfeited, giving himself as a substitute or ransom." Russell provides an example of a prisoner exchange where a private would be swapped for a private and a general for a general.

Jesus was not divine and certainly not a member of the trinity. He understood that Jesus was actually Michael, the archangel.<sup>49</sup> Michael, the first creation of God, was incarnated as a perfect human being. The ransom doctrine buttressed Russell's non-Trinitarian belief because it was not reasonable for the one who ransomed Adam's lineage to be deity. Adam was a perfect human being who had fallen. This required a perfect human without sin who could become the required sacrifice. So the ransom doctrine becomes an argument against the deity of Christ for it is unreasonable that God will allow a divine being to be substituted for a perfect man. For someone outside of the Watchtower there might be a question concerning how it is different to have an angel become a perfect man as opposed to having God become a perfect man. Both are superior to Adam in rank at the time of the ransom. It is not an equal exchange in either case.

In addition to arguing against the deity of Christ, the ransom doctrine undercuts the doctrine of grace. It has the paradoxical effect of placing humankind in a situation where each person is responsible for earning his or her own salvation. Both the great multitude and the unbelieving world will be resurrected to live during the millennial period because the shed blood of Jesus has paid for original sin, inherited from Adam.<sup>50</sup> The ransom payment is for all. The payment is essential not only for paying the debt of original sin, but also for "Jehovah arranged to have a perfect man voluntarily sacrifice his life. According to Romans 6:23, 'the wages sin pays is death'. In sacrificing his life, the ransomer would 'taste death for every man'. In other words, he would pay the wage for Adam's sin. . . . This would have profound legal consequences. By nullifying the death sentence upon Adam's obedient offspring, the ransom would cut off the destructive power of sin right at its source."

bringing those resurrected to perfection.<sup>51</sup> Russell believed the atonement of Christ was sufficient to bring every person to resurrection.<sup>52</sup> So at first glance, it does appear that the ransom doctrine demonstrates God's grace and perhaps more than most Christians believe. The doctrine had a strong undercurrent of universalism. Russell taught that the ransom Christ paid removed original sin from every person that ever lived.<sup>53</sup> Just as Adam's transgression affected his entire lineage, so the sacrifice of Christ freed all of humankind from the effects of original sin. However, what at the front end appeared to be grace filled became a works project at the back end. The Watchtower Society eventually came to understand that the ransom atonement removed original sin but did not atone for the actual sins individuals committed. Fortunately, it was revealed that the death of the individual atoned for his or her own sin.<sup>54</sup> Russell taught that following Armageddon God would judge the world, and the millennium would begin.<sup>55</sup> Those who had died would be recreated and resurrected. They saved by grace but rather teaches that God's grace gives us a second opportunity to earn eternity on the recreated, perfect earth.<sup>60</sup> That would appear to be the antithesis of grace.

The ransom doctrine also helps to shape Watchtower Theology in other areas as well. The Watchtower teaches that men and women do not possess immortality.<sup>61</sup> This is helpful because it eliminates the need for a doctrine of eternal torment, something the Watchtower denies.<sup>62</sup> The ransom doctrine reinforces this by teaching that those who belong to great multitude and those who are without Christ at all will not be granted immortality until the end of the millennium when they have proved their faithfulness. Those who do not work faithfully and fail their probation will lose their existence. On the other hand, the Watchtower Society does not believe there will be punishment or torment. Instead, Watchtower teaches that those judged incorrigible in this lifetime would not be resurrected. Additionally, those who are resurrected and fail their trial during the millennium will cease to exist.

Russell had taught that the ransom was for all. The Watchtower Society under Rutherford felt that God could and should refuse to accept the atonement sacrifice for some who had done great evil. According to Rutherford, Adam was not atoned for, nor were those of Sodom and Gomorrah.<sup>63</sup> Current Watchtower theology also teaches that those living at the time of Armageddon, who are not Jehovah's Witnesses in good standing, will be killed and will not be resurrected. This theological change from Russell's ransom that covered all to Rutherford's partial ransom leaves non-Jehovah's Witnesses with a concern for their own safety. If Armageddon occurs during their lifetime and they are not in good standing with the Watchtower Society, they will be killed and not be resurrected. This amounts to theological extortion, a calculated decision to motivate people to be loyal to Jehovah in case Armageddon occurs during their lifetime.

When conservative Christian scholars look at the ransom paid by Christ, they see it as potentially effective for all, but actually effective for those who respond in faith.<sup>64</sup> They also see the ransom being effective to save completely any person with faith. All the promises of the New Testament apply to the one who has faith in Jesus. So the ransom doctrine does not demand a universal application of salvation. Further, there is no reason that the ransom doctrine demands an identical sacrifice. There are parameters for a sacrifice but those parameters does not prevent Jesus from being both divine and human. Scriptures show Jesus sharing titles with God,<sup>65</sup> accepting worship (Matt. 14:33), forgiving sin (Mark 2:1-12), controlling nature (Mark 4:36-41), healing and casting out demons (Mark 5:1-20). Jesus also all mankind, hence was a murderer. (Rom 5:12) Thus, the sacrificed life of Jesus is not acceptable to God as a ransom for the sinner Adam." predicted his death (Matt. 16:21). God raised him from the dead in fulfillment of his claims. The ransom doctrine is not a strong argument against the deity of Christ.

Whether man is natively immortal or will receive immortality is an interesting discussion. This understanding of immortality is not unique to the Watchtower Society. It is common among Adventist, and a significant number of evangelical scholars believe in conditional immortality.<sup>66</sup> As a Christian doctrinal position, conditional immortality affirms that immortality—living forever and never dying—is a gift from God given only to the saved (1 Tim 6:16; Rom 2:7; 2 Tim 1:10; 1 Cor 15:54; John 6:50-51; John 11:25-26; Luke 20:36).<sup>67</sup> Evangelical conditionalist understand that Hell is a real place and that punishment will be meted out to the lost. They do not believe conditional immortality leads to immediate annihilation. Instead, they believe that punishment is perfectly applied and is of perfect conscious duration. However, when the Watchtower denies conscious punishment and accepts annihilation because God is love, they err. The Bible speaks of the resurrection of both the righteous and the unrighteous and notes that following death there is a certainty of judgment (Heb. 9:27). The Bible also tells us there will be a punishment following the judgment (Matt. 25:46; 2 Thess. 1:9).

According to Russell, Jesus was the first creation of God and therefore legitimately a Son of God.<sup>68</sup> He was known as Michael the Archangel<sup>69</sup> prior to his incarnation on earth. On earth he was Jesus, the Messiah. Following his successful atonement, he returned to heaven as a spirit being.<sup>70</sup> There was no resurrection of the body of Jesus, and as a result, Jesus is now a spirit creature.

Salvation

Jesus died to pay the ransom for the Adam's sin. Because of his sacrifice, a perfect man for a perfect man,<sup>71</sup> he opened the door for the salvation of all exercising faith in him.<sup>72</sup> Russell believed that the death of Jesus paid for the original sin of all men. Therefore, all men would be resurrected and have an opportunity to learn to live for God in the millennium. Later witness theology would teach that each individual's death would pay for his or her own personal sin. Everyone resurrected would in effect be raised with no guilt for past sin. Though the imagery of the cross was utilized by Russell, Rutherford taught that Jesus died not on a cross but on a torture stake.<sup>73</sup> For that reason, Jehovah's Witnesses do not use the imagery of the cross.

"If it was right six thousand years ago to deprive mankind of life because of sin, it would always be wrong to restore the life unless the pronounced penalty were justly cancelled by the payment of an equivalent price. Russell later utilizes an example of a prisoner exchange where a private would be swapped for a private and a general for a general.

The Kingdom

Jehovah's Witnesses believe that the Kingdom of God is a real government that has influence over this world. Jesus' authority began to be displayed when he was installed as king in 1914.<sup>74</sup> Their goal is to obey God, spreading His Kingdom. Ultimately, the whole world will be under the control of God's Kingdom. This is the message they proclaim, God's coming rule.

Man

Jehovah's Witnesses do not believe the soul is immortal.<sup>75</sup> They also believe that at the time of death a person loses all awareness and ceases to exist. Figuratively they sleep. After Armageddon, God will recreate each person, and each will have an opportunity to learn to follow God. Eventually they will achieve perfection. Then they will be adopted by God

But God's Word assures us that he has provided against such a perpetuation of sin and sinners: that man is mortal, and that the full penalty of willful sin against full light and knowledge will not be a life in torment, but a second death. *The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

Chapter 5

Dates and Issues within the Jehovah's Witness Community

Major Dates and Prophecies

It is significant that Charles Taze Russell began his ministry studying with the Second Adventist. The Second Adventists had followed or studied the ministry of William Miller and his failed prophecy. Miller had erroneously taught that the end of the world was to occur in 1844. Some who would become Seventh Day Adventist accepted the 1844 date and believed that Jesus had returned invisibly at that time.<sup>1</sup> However, the Second Day Adventist, rejected 1844 as an error and developed alternative dates. None of those alternative dates came to pass either. During this time, a number of impressive prophetic schemes developed, and many people believed it would be possible to pinpoint the time of Christ's return. Ultimately, all these schemes were demonstrated to be wrong. Russell, who had no theological training prior to his contact with the Second Adventist, adopted part of the faulty prophetic system of the Second Adventist as well as a number of their doctrines. Those that followed Russell kept some, but not all of his teaching. They also made multiple failed predictions concerning Christ's return. Following are significant dates in the history of the Watchtower Society.

Charles Taze Russell adopted the historicist teachings of the Second Adventist. The Second Adventist interpreted prophecy using the day-year theory. This system understood that a biblical day was in reality a prophetic year. Viewing Daniel and Revelation, the

These still accepted the 1844 date but said that what had taken place then was in heaven, invisible to human eyes.”

Adventist sought to apply biblical prophecies to their time, a trait that is still common among Advent Christians. It was agreed by many that the year AD 539 marked the beginning of Papal rule and therefore the beginning of the 1260 years spoken of in Daniel. Therefore, the date of the beginning of the end times was arrived at by adding 539 years and 1260 years. The chosen date was 1799. Nelson Barbour, who initially taught Russell about the prophetic dates, understood the date to be 1798, a date Russell corrected to 1914.<sup>2</sup>

Russell taught that 1260 years of oppression at the hand of the papacy was drawing to an end. The judgment of God was coming. In this interim, God's Word would go forth declaring His Kingdom.<sup>3</sup> The power of sin was broken.<sup>4</sup> Following Russell's death, 1799 would continue to be proclaimed as 'the beginning of the end' in publications through the 1920s. Rutherford wrote of the 1799 date in the Harp of God and Creation.<sup>5</sup> Watchtower also

"The wonders there referred to, were the 'time of trouble, the resurrection,' etc., and with present light, we understand that the definite time in this case reached to the end of the 1260 years of papal dominion, and therefore ended in 1798; but the completion of the scattering of the power of the Holy people, will not be ended until the end of the times of the Gentiles, or in 1914."

"Henceforth we deal with the Antichrist, whose gradual development and organization from secretly working ambition are a fitting prelude to the terrible character displayed after the coveted power had been grasped—from 539 A.D. to 1799 A.D., 1260 years. Of this period the first three hundred years mark the rise of this temporal power; the last three mark its waning under the influences of the Reformation and civilization; and the intermediate period of seven centuries embraces Papacy's glory-time and the 'dark ages' of the world, full of frauds and deceptions in the name of Christ and true religion."

"Since the beginning (1799) of the Time of the End, God has been preparing his consecrated 'holy people', his 'Sanctuary', for the great blessings he intended to pour upon them during these forty years of harvest: which blessings are also intended as special preparation for their entering with Christ into full joy and joint-heirship with him, as his bride. At the exact 'time appointed,' 1799, the end of the 1260 days, the power of the Man of Sin, the great oppressor of the Church, was broken, and his dominion taken away."

Russell, following Barbour and the Second Adventist, understood that when man had been on the earth for 6000 years, Jesus would come, the church would be raptured, and the thousand years of Sabbath rest would occur. Russell calculated that man's time on earth was coming to an end in 1874. He believed that this would bring about the second advent of Christ and a time of harvest.<sup>8</sup> Russell believed that Jesus was now a spirit creature and would finished it and returned to France on October 1, 1799. The campaign is briefly, yet graphically, described in the prophecy, verses 40 to 44; and being completed in 1799, marks, according to the Prophet's own words, the beginning of the 'time of the end'" Also J. F. Rutherford, Creation (1927), 294-295, accessed August 5, 2018, <http://www.watchtowerwayback.org/jw-wb/English/Books/Teachings/1927%20Creation.pdf>. "In Biblical symbology a 'time' means a year of twelve months of thirty days each, or 360 days. Each day is considered for a year, as the prophet says: 'I have appointed thee each day for a year'. (Ezek. 4:6) Here are mentioned, then, three and a half times of 360 prophetic days each, or a total of 1260 prophetic days, which would mark the beginning of the time of the end of this beastly order. Twelve hundred and sixty years from 539 A. D. brings us to 1799, which is another proof that 1799 definitely marks the beginning of 'the time of the end'. This also shows that it is from the date 539 A. D. that the other prophetic days of Daniel must be counted."

not be seen by human eyes.<sup>9</sup> The Second Adventist did not believe this and thought that His return would be visible. Following 1874, Russell taught that Jesus was present, invisibly. Rutherford maintained this belief until the beginning of the 1930s. A Watchtower from 1924 confirmed 1874 as the year of Jesus' return.<sup>10</sup> As late as 1929 a book written by Rutherford vouched for the 1874 date.<sup>11</sup> However, in 1932, 1874 was ignored and the date of Jesus' return was changed to 1914.<sup>12</sup> Then in 1943 a new chronology was proposed and the date 1874 was retired. 1914 became the new date of Jesus' invisible return, and 1874 was abandoned as a significant date.<sup>13</sup>

"From Adam's creation to the end of 1943 A.D. is 5,971 years. We are therefore near the end of six thousand years of human history, with conditions upon us and tremendous events at hand foreshadowed by those of Noah's day."

In the years prior to 1878, Russell worked with Nelson Barbour, an Adventist publisher. Russell and Barbour had reasoned that Jesus must return to rapture the church in 1878.<sup>14</sup> They reached that conclusion because they believed Jesus had returned invisibly to earth in 1874. They had made the calculations utilizing reasoning common to premillennialism in that era.<sup>15</sup> Mirroring was common in prophetic teaching. Some believed significant events were going to be mirrored in the coming prophetic events. As an example, after Jesus' first advent occurred, he began his ministry. This ministry took three and a half years. A mirroring of that time would mean that Jesus would return to heaven with his 144,000 saints three and a half years after his invisible return. At that point he would be installed as the ruling king.<sup>16</sup> Therefore, Russell believed the rapture of the church would occur in 1878. Based on this, both Barbour and Russell began to teach and preach that the

Therefore, since 1874 was in place because it was thought to be the end of 6000 years and the beginning of the Sabbath thousand years, the rearrangement of the prophetic timeline meant that 1874 was no longer a contender for the return of Jesus. That event would logically be located in the mid-1970s except that 1914 is central to Watchtower theology and Jesus was to have returned in 1914.

<sup>14</sup> Jason Wright, "C. T. Russell and the date 1878," Watchtower Investigated UK (June 17, 2014), accessed May 5, 2018, <https://watchtowerinvestigated.wordpress.com/2014/06/17/c-t-russell-and-the-date-1878-by-jason-wright/>. "Hence Barbour proclaimed a three and a-half year period was already underway, starting in 1874 (Jesus invisible return/Parousia) and ending in the spring of 1878, it was what he called the anti-typical harvest period (parallel dispensation). This period ended with the translation of the Elijah class (little flock) and Jesus taking up his throne and became king in heaven. So there we have it! In 1877 Russell and Barbour were absolutely sure the translation of the little flock (true church) would occur at latest April 6th 1878."

"Based on the premise that events of the first century might find parallels in related events later, they also concluded that if Jesus' baptism and anointing in the autumn of 29 C.E. paralleled the beginning of an invisible presence in 1874, then his ride into Jerusalem as King in the spring of 33 C.E. would point to the spring of 1878 as the time when he would assume his power as heavenly King."

time was short for the church. When 1878 came and went, many were disheartened. Nelson Barbour struggled to understand how they could have been wrong. However, Russell was not discouraged. After considering the matter, Russell decided that he was not mistaken about the date. The problem was that he had been mistaken about what would transpire. Though there was no change in the visible church, there was a change in spiritual realms. The Adventist had expected a fleshly manifestation, not a spiritual manifestation. This did not occur, and Russell determined that what had actually happened was that those of the anointed class (144,000) who had previously died were in fact resurrected to be with Jesus, and from that point on all those who were anointed would go directly to be with Jesus when they died.<sup>17</sup> In addition, Jehovah installed Jesus as King in 1878. This was a spiritual event and Jehovah was in the process of establishing his kingdom.<sup>18</sup>

Since Rutherford moved the date of the invisible return of Jesus forward to 1914, the year 1874 was vacated. Therefore, the dates of 1878 and the date of 1881 were also vacated, as they were dependent on 1874.

Because this date was based on the 1874 return of Jesus which was vacated, it also is no longer a pertinent date.

1914

The year 1914 is unique for Jehovah's Witnesses. The use and centrality of this date sets them apart from all other groups. The rest of their theology, aberrant or not, can be found elsewhere in different groups, but 1914 is unique.

The date had been calculated by Russell as he searched for the meaning of the "Time of the Gentiles." He first determined the beginning of this time by determining when the rule of the Jews was broken. He identified that time as the year that the tribe of Judah went into captivity to Babylon. Russell accepted a date of 606 BC that had been suggested previously by John Aquila Brown.<sup>21</sup> The date itself was later changed by a year to 607, but the 1914 date was not adjusted. The length of the period was found by examining Daniel, chapter 4.

Believing that the cutting down of the tree represented the fall of Judah, Russell focused on a

<sup>19</sup> Russell, The Time Is at Hand (1889), 235. "As in the type that date—three and a half years after the death of Christ—marked the end of all special favor to the Jew and the beginning of favor to the Gentiles, so we recognize A.D. 1881 as marking the close of the high calling, or invitation to the blessing peculiar to this age - to become joint-heirs with Christ and partakers of the divine nature."

<sup>20</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Jehovah's Witnesses—Proclaimers of God's Kingdom, 632. "It was also reasoned that the end of God's special favor to natural Israel down to 36 C.E. might point to 1881 as the time when the special opportunity to become part of spiritual Israel would close."

<sup>21</sup> Penton, Apocalypse Delayed, 30. "In fact, it was John Aquila Brown who first explained what he considered to be the key to the length of those times in a book called Even-Tide, published in London in 1823. What he posited was that the typical theocratic kingdom of Judah had fallen under Gentile rule in 604 B.C. Thereafter, there would be no godly government on earth until four great empires—the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Macedonian, and Roman—had had their sway. Then Christ, as David's heir, would rule in Jerusalem. But how long would it be before those empires expired? Brown found his answer in the fourth chapter of the book of Daniel." Brown believed 1917 was the year of the end. Barbour found fault with his calculations and decided upon 1914, a date Russell followed.

period of seven times or seven years. Since each year is 360 days long (lunar years), the total number of years was 2520 years. When this is added to 606 BC, it gives the date 1914.

Therefore, the end of the “Time of the Gentiles” was 1914. Russell knew immediately that time was short and that the end was drawing near.<sup>22</sup>

There are a number of significant flaws with the calculation of 1914. The first is the calculation of the date for the end of the Jewish times. The return from the Babylonian exile is the date used to begin calculating the end of the Jewish times. The dates 536 thru 539 BC are commonly used for the return from the exile to Babylon. There is inadequate information available to choose one over the other. Since the initial date used to calculate the end of the Jewish times is uncertain, it would be difficult to be precise. The date selected for the end of the Jewish times, the year Judah went into captivity, is said to be 607 BC. The Watchtower Society alone presents that number. There is not a single shred of historical data to suggest that 607 is the correct date.<sup>23</sup> The vast majority of archeologist, historians, and biblical experts (essentially everyone) believe the correct date is 586 BC. Further difficulty arises when the idea of a second fulfillment of Daniel chapter 4 is suggested. No other section of Similarly, the Watch Tower issue of March 1880 stated: ‘The Times of the Gentiles’ extend to 1914, and the heavenly kingdom will not have full sway till then.’”

<sup>23</sup> Franz, Crisis of Conscience, 29-30. “Months of research were spent on this one subject of ‘Chronology’ and it resulted in the longest article in the Aid publication. Much of the time was spent endeavoring to find some proof, some backing in history, for the 607 BCE date so crucial to our calculations for 1914. Charles Ploeger, a member of the headquarters staff, was at that time serving as a secretary for me and he searched through the libraries of the New York city area for anything that might substantiate that date historically. We found absolutely nothing in support of 607 BCE. All historians pointed to a date twenty years later.”

Daniel has a second fulfillment. Then there is the problem of calculating with lunar years (360 days) and utilizing the result in a system of solar years (365 days). Further, nothing in the Daniel verses hint at the Gentile times or the end times. Therefore, it appears therefore that the selection of 1914 has multiple fatal flaws.<sup>24</sup>

The date was felt by Russell to be significant for a number of reasons. It was the end of the Gentile Times. False religion and all government would be cast down. Armageddon would occur, and all the dead would be raised. Finally, Jesus would begin his thousand-year reign on paradise earth.<sup>25</sup> Therefore, it is clear that Russell and the early Bible Students taught and understood that 1914 marked the end of the world. Rutherford, and those who followed him, changed the focus and began to teach that 1914 was the beginning of the ‘end times’ as none of the predicted events occurred in 1914. This was because the date is central to Watchtower theology and cannot be easily abandoned. It became more prudent to change the significance of the date than maintain the earlier understanding. So rather than being the end of all things, 1914 became the ‘beginning of the end’. Along with this new understanding, it was proclaimed that the generation of 1914 would not pass away without Armageddon occurring. That did not happen, and the Watchtower Society has now abandoned the claim that those alive in 1918 would not die before Armageddon. The

The major issue with how Watchtower arrives at 1914 is that Jerusalem did not fall in 607 B.C. . . . However, even if the assumption is made that 607 B.C. is correct, Watchtower’s interpretation fails at a number of other levels. There is no reason to believe Daniel 4 has two fulfillments, 606 B.C. or 607 B.C.? 539 B.C. or 537 B.C.? July or October? 70 Weeks and the 7 Times? 360 Day ‘Prophetic Year’ for a Solar Year?”

<sup>25</sup> “Changed Dates: Failed Predictions,” JWFacts.com, accessed August 6, 2018, <https://www.jwfacts.com/watchtower/1800s.php>. “1914 has been a pivotal date for the Watchtower. The expectations prior to 1914 included it being the end of the Gentile Times, the end of Armageddon, the fall of false religion, the end of all governments, the resurrection, the start of Jesus 1000 year reign and paradise on earth.”

Watchtower Society uncoupled the end of time from 1914, saying that anyone who knew an anointed person from that generation also belongs to the generation that would see Jesus return. This is referred to as an overlapping generation.<sup>26</sup> The major issue that prevents the Watchtower Society from abandoning 1914 is that it is the underpinning for 1918, the year that Jesus and Jehovah are said to have come and inspected the churches of the world. Based on that that inspection, in 1919 only the Jehovah's Witnesses were found to be pure and true to His Word. Therefore, Jehovah appointed the Watchtower Society as His organization and His mouthpiece for the world. If 1914 is abandoned, the declaration of the Watchtower Society's as God's mouthpiece disappears as well.

When 1914 failed, there were many who looked to 1918 to be the date of the end.<sup>27</sup> As with the previous failures, the date was moved forward continuing the expectancy that something momentous was about to happen.<sup>28</sup> During this time, Rutherford taught Jesus accompanied Jehovah to the spiritual temple to cleanse his people.<sup>29</sup>

The Watchtower teaches a cleansing of the temple took place in 1918. There was also in inspection of all the churches that was to have begun in 1918. Jesus and Jehovah determined that only the Watchtower Society was mature and capable enough to be His mouthpiece.<sup>30</sup> Later there was a revision, and it was determined that the inspection had begun, not in 1918 but instead in 1914.<sup>31</sup> Still, only the Watchtower could be God's Society. Interestingly there is no logical or scriptural reasoning for these claims.

So in not many years within our own generation we are reaching what Jehovah God could view as the seventh day of man’s existence. ## Issues within the Witnesses Community

Medical Issues

To the detriment of all, the Watchtower Society has inserted itself in the medical decisions of its people. Watchtower Society has made decisions based on poorly thought out theology and sheer medical ignorance. Then, they have insisted that their positions be rigidly followed under fear of being disfellowshipped.

It is difficult to understand how an organization could develop and enforce policies that lead to the death and suffering of its own members. It is also impossible to say whether the Watchtower Society is entirely ignorant of medical and biological facts or whether there was another agenda. Perhaps it was an effort to isolate Jehovah's Witnesses culturally from those who do not support the Witnesses' teachings, or perhaps it is a control issue. To enforce their demands, it appears that they were relying on the fact that their devotees are poorly educated and conditioned to follow the Watchtower Society without question.

Whether through malice or ignorance the demands of the Watchtower Society have caused unnecessary death and suffering. The Watchtower's history concerning vaccinations, organ

"It may be that some who have been serving God have planned their lives according to a mistaken view of just what was to happen on a certain date or in a certain year. They may have, for this reason, put off or neglected things that they otherwise would have cared for. transplantation, and blood transfusions is appalling. Callous, poorly reasoned decisions have cost untold lives. In addition, the ongoing confusion has created a bit of a dilemma for the Watchtower Society itself. As God's mouthpiece, it has forced its adherents to refrain from accepting available lifesaving medical treatment because God would, according to their understanding, require their blood for violating his law. God, who had earlier allowed transfusions, vaccines and organ transplants, changed His mind and prohibited them. And even after that, God changed his mind again and in many cases reversed His position due to 'new light'. However, these reversals violate the criteria that Russell had insisted would be seen with 'new light'. So, is God at fault? Or does the Watchtower, which denies inspiration but insists that its people follow Watchtower's inspired word, need to be recognized as a calloused, hard hearted, and evil society that insists that its members die rather than reject the Watchtower's unethical medical instructions?

Vaccines

Smallpox has been a destroyer of civilizations for ages.<sup>45</sup> In the United States, smallpox played a role in the Revolutionary War. During that time, a primitive system for vaccinating against smallpox had been developed, and Washington had his troops vaccinated. Because of the horrendous living conditions of the troops, British and American, epidemics of smallpox decreased troop strength and effected operational readiness. One historian credits

"Smallpox is mentioned in ancient Sanskrit from China (1122 BC), and the mummified remains of Ramses V bears scars suggesting the Egyptian pharaoh's death in 1156 BC may have resulted from smallpox. Smallpox epidemics were responsible for bringing about the end of at least three empires and its potential for use as a biological weapon dates back to the French-Indian War (1754-1767) when a British commander suggested using the virus to reduce the Indian population."

the vaccination of Washington's troops with the success of his forces.<sup>46</sup> Vaccination for smallpox was generally viewed positively, and the process became safer across time.<sup>47</sup> In the nineteenth century a number of communities had mandatory vaccination policies.<sup>48</sup> In the early decades of the twentieth century, vaccines were developed for pertussis, diphtheria, and tetanus.<sup>49</sup> This increased the anxiety of those who had fought against all forms of vaccination. In the early 1920s the issue of vaccinations became important to the Watchtower Society. In 1921 there were articles in Golden Age critical of the vaccines.<sup>50</sup> In 1922 there

"Gen. George Washington knew this. The problem for him was that the process to inoculate soldiers would take weeks, and he hesitated to take any troops off the front lines. However, after losing a battle over British-occupied Canada—in part due to an outbreak of smallpox in the camps—Washington made a decision to have his soldiers inoculated. Today, many historians credit the move with helping the Continental Army win the Revolutionary War."

"In the late 1700s, a young English physician named Edward Jenner began experimenting with using cowpox virus to inoculate humans against smallpox. Jenner collected data in controlled experiments and wrote articles publishing his findings among his peers in the medical societies of Europe." This was much safer because transmission of human borne illnesses such as syphilis and tuberculosis were eliminated.

<sup>48</sup> Ibid. "The first mandatory vaccination law in the United States was enacted in 1809 in Massachusetts, giving the government the power to enforce mandatory vaccination or quarantine in the event of a disease (smallpox) outbreak that posed a threat to the public health. Throughout most of the 1800s, vaccination against smallpox in the United States was voluntary, though coercion was often used to convince citizens to receive the procedure."

<sup>49</sup> Piper-Terry, "History of Infectious Disease and Vaccination in the United States." During the first half of the twentieth century there was a great expansion in vaccine research, leading to the development of new vaccines for pertussis, diphtheria, and tetanus in 1902, 1926, and 1938, respectively. The polio vaccine was licensed in 1955, followed by the development of the measles, mumps and rubella vaccines in the late 1960s. Although smallpox vaccination had been a requirement of school attendance for decades, it was during the late 1930s that compulsory vaccination against other illnesses began to be instituted for children enrolling in public school.

Even those who recover from the acute symptoms cannot be sure that they are done with the matter, as a portion of the virus may remain in the system. The damage done may lurk in the system for years, and then break out in full fury."

was a rebuttal.<sup>51</sup> These back and forth arguments went on for a nine-year period. The arguments against the vaccinations were emotional and sometimes hysterical, being long on innuendo but short of scientific fact.<sup>52</sup>

During this time, vaccinations became an increasingly contentious issue.<sup>53</sup> In 1931, there was an article written that tied vaccines to the issue of eating blood. This made vaccines a religious issue, and it became improper for witnesses to be vaccinated.<sup>54</sup> The use of vaccines was banned for Jehovah's Witnesses, and the use of vaccines was thoroughly

The whole system of inoculation is built upon imagination and false and superstitious theories; and it is steeped from foundation to summit in commercial interests. thrashed.<sup>55</sup> There were a number of court cases as Jehovah's Witnesses refused to allow their children to receive vaccinations.<sup>56</sup> The failure of Jehovah's Witnesses to vaccinate their children doubtless led to many unnecessary deaths as smallpox and diphtheria were still a common public health issue during this period.<sup>57</sup> In spite of this, the ban on vaccines was general policy for a number of years. In the 1940s, there was a softening of the Watchtower position. In fact, one ranking Jehovah's Witness was allowed into a prison to explain to Jehovah's Witness conscientious objectors that the acceptance of vaccines did not constitute an issue of faith.<sup>58</sup> Finally, this ban, in effect for twenty-one years, was reversed on April 15,

<sup>55</sup> Pattillo, "The Sacredness of Blood," 293. "In the New Testament it is deserving of particular notice that at the very time when the holy spirit declared by the apostles that the Gentiles are free from the yoke of circumcision, abstinence from blood, was explicitly enjoined (Acts 15: 28, 29), and the action thus prohibited was classed with idolatry and fornication. This plainly suggests that much of the looseness of our day along sexual lines may be traceable to the easy and continued violation of the divine commands to keep human and animal blood apart from each other. With cells of foreign blood racing through his veins man is not normal, not himself, but lacks the poise and balance which make for self-control."

One can only wonder how many Witnesses suffered real physical harm or even death as a result of conforming to the Society's ban on vaccination."

<sup>58</sup> Macmillan, Faith on the March, 188. "One of the more serious problems I had to deal with, as I remember, was vaccinations. An order was received from the health department in Washington for all the inmates and guards to be vaccinated. Some of our boys in one prison in particular considered this the same as blood transfusions, and refused to submit. This caused considerable trouble. Then the order came from Washington to put all the men who refused to be vaccinated in solitary confinement. This did not change our men. The prison authorities hesitated to be overly strict about it; still they had their orders from headquarters . . . I asked the Warden to permit me to talk to all the men who refused to be vaccinated. . . 'I was in prison,' I reminded them, 'and I bared my arm and received the shot. Furthermore, all of us who visit our foreign branches are vaccinated or we stay at home. Now vaccination is not anything like blood transfusion. No blood is used in the vaccine. It is a serum. So you would not be violating those Scriptures which forbid taking blood into your system.'"

1952.<sup>59</sup> This reversal was reaffirmed in 1961. Vaccines are now considered a matter of conscience.<sup>60</sup> The Jehovah’s Witnesses and the Watchtower proclaim neutrality regarding vaccines.<sup>61</sup> In fact, some recent articles have acknowledged the effectiveness of vaccines in controlling tuberculosis and several other diseases. The Watchtower did a TB Fact Sheet to encourage use of the TB vaccination.<sup>62</sup> In addition they published articles that noted the decrease in serious disease for those who had been vaccinated.<sup>63</sup> Without question, the vaccination controversy hurt the image of the Jehovah’s Witnesses. The arguments were weak, and the anti-scientific bias left the Witnesses looking foolish. In addition, the ban led to illness and death for a significant number of Witnesses. This created a theological issue. If the Watchtower is the mouthpiece of God, how is it possible that God got this so wrong? This is a real dilemma. If God was responsible for the information in the articles, then there is adequate information to understand that God is confused, befuddled, and inept. If the Watchtower is responsible for the information, there is no reason to think that they are God's mouthpiece and they can safely be ignored.

Organ Transplants

The knowledge, technology and skill available in the medical community has rapidly advance over the last two hundred years. Advances in the medical field have provided the means to increase a person's lifespan and to improve the quality of life. This has come about with new medicines, new technology, and even the ability to transplant organs.

The first organ transplant was in 1869. A physician successfully preformed a simple skin graft. It would be thirty-seven years later in 1906 before medicine had advanced enough do a corneal transplant. In 1954 the first kidney transplant was done. By 1963 lungs were transplanted. In 1966 there was a successful pancreas transplant, followed in 1967 by a successful liver transplant. Also in 1967 there was the first successful heart transplant. In 1968 a successful bone marrow transplant was done.<sup>64</sup>

It is reasonable to ask whether there is enough benefit to transplants to make the surgery worthwhile. The evidence indicates that there is an increased quality of life and an extended life expectancy. Kidney failure patients who have transplants do not require special diets, food restrictions, and frequent dialysis. Transplant patients have been shown to live normal lives and live much longer than those on dialysis.<sup>65</sup> Liver transplant patients live decades longer and far more comfortably.<sup>66</sup> Heart transplant patients have a better than fifty percent chance of living for another decade.<sup>67</sup> So by most standards transplants would be a valuable means to help people. A transplant can reduce suffering and extend life.

Until 1967 there was no resistance to the idea of having a transplant. It was deemed a matter of conscience. An article in 1961 addressed a reader's concern and assured them that there was no scriptural reason to refuse a transplant.<sup>68</sup> However, in 1967 the Watchtower determined that it was cannibalistic to allow an organ transplant, and the procedure became off limits to Jehovah's limits.<sup>69</sup> This was declared to be God's will in the matter, so many Jehovah's Witnesses perished because they had kidney or heart disease and needed a transplant to survive.

What followed had to be painfully embarrassing to any educated Jehovah's Witness. A number of articles in Awake! used deception to discourage the use of transplants. To put things in perspective, consider one of the articles, written in 1971. Nixon was president of the United States. We were engaged in the Vietnam War, and we launched the Mariner spacecraft to Mars. Tobacco advertising was banned on TV and Radio, and All In The Family ran its first episodes. It was a time when the population was generally well educated. Yet the Watchtower Society began to explain to the public why they should be wary of transplants using bogus, pseudo-scientific arguments. One concern mentioned was that the seat of the emotions was located in the kidneys, and having a transplant would change the personality of the recipients.<sup>70</sup> Another concern was that since the heart participated in a person's thought processes, a mind, heart, dichotomy existed. Both were necessary for normal thinking. This line of reasoning was amazing. In 1971, the Watchtower society was teaching that the heart replacing the cells. When men of science conclude that this normal process will no longer work and they suggest removing the organ and replacing it directly with an organ from another human, this is simply a shortcut. Those who submit to such operations are thus living off the flesh of another human. That is cannibalistic. However, in allowing man to eat animal flesh Jehovah God did not grant permission for humans to try to perpetuate their lives by cannibalistically taking into their bodies human flesh, whether chewed or in the form of whole organs or body parts taken from others."

<sup>70</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, "Insight On the News," Watchtower, September 1, 1975, 519, accessed August 1, 2018, <http://www.watchtowerwayback.org/jw-wb/English/Magazines/The%20Watchtower/1975%20The%20Watchtower.pdf>. "Transplant Problems: A peculiar factor sometimes noted is a so-called 'personality transplant'. That is, the recipient in some cases has seemed to adopt certain personality factors of the person from whom the organ came. One young promiscuous woman who received a kidney from her older, conservative, well-behaved sister, at first seemed very upset. Then she began imitating her sister in much of her conduct. Another patient claimed to receive a changed outlook on life after his kidney transplant. Following a transplant, one mild-tempered man became aggressive like the donor. The problem may be largely or wholly mental. But it is of interest, at least, that the Bible links the kidneys closely with human emotions."

was literally the seat of our thoughts.<sup>71</sup> Then having established the importance of the heart, they insinuated that a person with a heart transplant really doesn't have a heart anymore.<sup>72</sup> As a scare tactic they began to blame transplants for psychiatric breakdowns.<sup>73</sup> Those who had a heart transplant seemed to be at high risk of losing their minds because the new heart was not in contact with the mind anymore and the person became unstable.<sup>74</sup>

The Watchtower also ran an article by a surgeon who was a Jehovah's Witness. He did not use transfusions and had a large clientele of Jehovah's Witnesses. He believed that

"Most psychiatrists and psychologists tend to overcategorize the mind and allow for little if any influence from the fleshly heart, looking upon the word "heart" merely as a figure of speech apart from its use in identifying the organ that pumps our blood. . . . The heart is a marvelously designed muscular pump, but, more significantly, our emotional and motivating capacities are built within it. Love, hate, desire (good and bad), preference for one thing over another, ambition, fear-in effect, all that serves to motivate us in relationship to our affections and desires springs from the heart."

<sup>72</sup> Ibid., 135. "These patients have donor-supplied pumps for their blood, but do they now have all the factors needed to say they have a 'heart'? One thing is sure, in losing their own hearts, they have had taken away from them the capacities of 'heart' built up in them over the years and which contributed to making them who they were as to personality."

<sup>73</sup> Ibid. "Medical World News (May 23, 1969), in an article entitled 'What Does a New Heart Do to the Mind?' reported the following: 'At Stanford University Medical Center last year, a 45-year-old man received a new heart from a 20-year-old donor and soon announced to all his friends that he was celebrating his twentieth birthday. Another recipient resolved to live up to the sterling reputation of the prominent local citizen who was the donor. And a third man expressed great fear of feminization upon receiving a woman's heart, though he was somewhat mollified when he learned that women live longer than men. According to psychiatrist Donald T. Lunde, a consultant to surgeon Norman Shumway's transplant team at Stanford, these patients represent some of the less severe mental aberrations [italics ours] observed in the Shumway series of 13 transplants over the last 16 months.' The article continues: 'Though five patients in the series had survived as of early this month, and four of them were home leading fairly normal lives, three of the non-survivors became psychotic before they died last year. And two others have become psychotic this year.'"

<sup>74</sup> Ibid. "It is significant that heart-transplant patients, where the nerves connecting the heart and brain are severed, have serious emotional problems after the operation. The new heart is still able to operate as a pump, it having its own power supply and timing mechanism independent of the general nervous system for giving impulse to the heart muscle, but just as it now responds only sluggishly to outside influences, the new heart in turn registers few, if any, clear factors of motivation on the brain. To what extent the nerve endings of the body and the new heart are able to make some connections in time is not clear, but this cannot be ruled out as one of the several factors causing the serious mental aberrations and disorientation that doctors report are observed in heart-transplant patients."

the use of blood products was a health risk with no benefits.<sup>75</sup> He also doubted that God would approve of transplants.<sup>76</sup>

In addition, the Watchtower Society used scare tactics in its publications. While granting no positive benefit from transplants, they listed horror stories about the bad results of transplants.<sup>77</sup> In addition, they made claims that would seem to be unsupported regarding the detrimental effects of a transplant.<sup>78</sup> It is true that there are health risks to those receiving a transplant, but it also true that the transplant is lifesaving. An individual facing a transplant would die without it. Rather than having the bleak prognosis suggested by Watchtower, the patient has a prognosis of a continuing life and with that comes the hope of survival for many.<sup>79</sup> occur. The incidence of post-transplant lymphoproliferative disorder with a cyclosporine based immunosuppressive regimen is estimated to be around 2–4% and is a frequent and often fatal complication of organ transplantation. It most often results from an Epstein-Barr virus transformed B cell clone, which expresses B cell surface markers such as CD20. While these lymphomas may respond to reduction of immunosuppression, they may be successfully treated with the CD20 antibody rituximab.”

First, the mind is confronted with certain facts. Perhaps older clothes are getting past their usefulness or there is a need for a change for some good reason. The heart comes very much into the picture too, as there is a desire at heart to look presentable. Heart and mind are in agreement that a new dress or suit be obtained. The mind now collects information on prices, quality, styles, and so forth, so that when you go shopping you have a pretty good idea which suit or dress should be purchased. But when you arrive at the store, there in the window is quite an eye-catcher, just waiting for the impulse buyer. It is not really practical for you; it involves much more money; it is rather extreme in styling; but how it tantalizes the heart! ‘It’s the heart’s delight!’ Now what will be done? What decision will be made? Will it be a practical, reasoned-out one, or one according to this new desire of the heart? If you are not very careful, the heart will overwhelm the mind.”

and had outgrown that belief. However, they did not own up to the fact that they had recently held that same erroneous belief.<sup>83</sup>

The thought processes that went into the ban on organ transplantation were unquestionably faulty. The Watchtower Society reversed an earlier position and ultimately reversed it again. This meant that for thirteen years, Jehovah's Witnesses who had serious health issues were sacrificed to a bad decision. Those who followed the leading of the Watchtower Society and refused to submit to the world by having a transplant died. While some may have seen them as loyal heroes, their deaths were unnecessary. Based on the reasoning the Watchtower Society utilized in banning organ transplants, one is forced to wonder if the Watchtower Society is an echo chamber cut off from all meaningful contact with the society around it.

Blood Transfusions

Blood transfusion were being done at the beginning of the twentieth century, and primitive blood banks were operational in the period between 1920 and 1935. It was not until 1945, more than fifty years after Russell began studying and working with the International Bible Students, that blood transfusions became an issue.

Russell was familiar with the Scriptures quoted by the Watchtower Society to prohibit blood transfusions. Russell did not identify any connection between Bible verses in Leviticus and Acts that speak of eating blood and the act of transfusing blood medically. He appeared to believe that the reason that Christians would want to abstain from eating blood was so that Jewish brethren and possible converts would not be offended.<sup>84</sup>

"The ancient Egyptians believed that the physical heart was the seat of intelligence and the emotions. They also thought that it had a will of its own. The Babylonians said that the heart housed the intellect as well as love. The Greek philosopher Aristotle taught that it was the seat of the senses and the domain of the soul. But as time passed and knowledge increased, these views were discarded. Finally, the heart became known for what it is, a pump to circulate the blood throughout the body."

Clayton J. Woodworth became the editor of the Golden Age magazine in 1919. He was very concerned about vaccinations and blood products. In the 1920s there was significant debate about vaccines and whether they were harmful. Articles were written that coupled the literal eating of blood with transfusions and other medical uses of blood. These articles presented an absolutist position that the use of blood products would bring about God's judgment.<sup>85</sup>

Woodworth was a driving force seeking to ban the use of blood products. He was known to have strong views on the subject and the Golden Age and Consolation reflected his views.<sup>86</sup> Still the early members of the Watchtower Society did not see the medicinal use of

He further suggested writing to them merely that they abstain from pollutions of idols, i. e., from meats offered to idols (verse 29), and from things strangled and from blood—as by eating such things they might become stumbling blocks to their Jewish brethren (See 1 Cor. 8:4-13)—and from fornication. blood as eating blood and even more interesting did not see the directive of Acts 15 as a law but rather as a “necessary thing.”<sup>87</sup>

Witness literature demonstrates that there was not a bias against donating blood, and there did not appear to be concern about transfusions. An article from 1929 noted that a British man had donated eleven gallons of blood during his life, for which he was commended.<sup>88</sup> In 1931, an article in Golden Age undercut the current argument used to condemn transfusions.<sup>89</sup> The argument was straightforward. The Watchtower Society equates a transfusion with eating blood. Their claim is that placing nutrients directly into the bloodstream is still like eating. The article in 1931 stated that it was not the eating of blood that was the problem, but the bringing the blood of an animal in contact with a human. This argument may have been developed to discourage vaccinations, but it runs counter to the current arguments against blood transfusions. In 1940 there was an article praising a physician who had donated blood during a surgery to save the patient.<sup>90</sup> Therefore, it is clear that there were decades when having a transfusion or giving blood was not a theological issue. That was not to last though. In 1945 the article “One Reason for God’s Vengeance” from a 1927 Watchtower resurfaced and the use of blood and blood products was declared to be pagan and immoral. Transfusions were effectively banned.<sup>91</sup>

Because of the ban, people began to look at alternatives. It was known that the components of blood could be separated. The question then became, “Are the components of blood acceptable?” Because of this, the Watchtower history involving the use of serums and blood fractions is interesting. Serum is a blood based clear fluid in which cells are suspended. The cells are removed, and the serums are used to provide immunity from disease and to treat certain medical conditions. Like other blood products, they were initially approved of until the ban of 1945. The Watchtower by banning blood and serum products was putting itself in the place of God. It was literally forcing people to choose to die in order to remain faithful to the Watchtower Society. If the victims of this policy did not do as they were instructed, they would be disfellowshipped. To the individual Witness this meant that they were cast away from God and they would perish without the hope of eternal life. So, the Watchtower Society, acting as God’s mouthpiece, implemented a policy that would lead to the unnecessary deaths of at least 33,000 Jehovah’s Witnesses. Even worse, children that were faithful to the Society and died as a result were hailed as heroes of the faith. “New light” was leading to unnecessary loss of life.

As long ago as December 15, 1927, an article appeared in this magazine entitled ‘One Reason for God’s Vengeance,’ and it called attention to the gross violation by the nations of Jehovah’s everlasting covenant. . . . They reasoned that as the blood is the principal medium by which the body is nourished, transfusion, therefore, is a quicker and shorter road to feed an ill-nourished body than eating food that turns to blood after several changes. So transfusion was thought of not only as a cure, but also as a rejuvenator.” Hence, a blood transfusion is the same as eating blood. Food changes to blood after several changes according to the Watchtower.

Because decisions like the ones the Watchtower Society was making were critical, it would be reasonable to expect a well thought out series of linear decisions leading to a better endpoint. However, this is not what is seen. Instead, the Watchtower made several confused and contradictory decisions about serum products. In 1954, during the polio epidemic, the Witnesses were told that Gamma Globulin, the only treatment currently available, was a blood product and they should decline all serum-based products.<sup>92</sup> Four years later, in 1958, the teaching changed and blood based serum products were no longer banned. It was now a matter of conscience.<sup>93</sup> However, five years later, in 1963, blood serums and blood fractions were again banned.<sup>94</sup> Less than 21 months later, in 1964 the Watchtower again reversed itself.<sup>95</sup> There were four reversals in ten years. There was no progress; the Watchtower conscience of the individual to determine whether to submit to inoculation with a serum containing blood fractions for the purpose of building up antibodies to fight against disease. If a person did this, he may derive comfort under the circumstances from the fact that he is not directly eating blood, which is expressly forbidden in God’s Word. It is not used for food or to replace lost blood. Here the Christian must make his own decision based on conscience. Therefore, whether a Christian will submit to inoculation with a serum, or whether doctors or nurses who are Christians will administer such, is for personal decision.”

Society simply returned to the ‘old light’ and then came back to the ‘new light’. There is no evident, logical reason for these flip-flops and every time they banned blood products, someone was put at risk. In 1974, the Watchtower re-affirmed that using serum was a matter of conscience.<sup>96</sup> In 1978, RhoGAM<sup>97</sup> use was declared a matter of conscience.<sup>98</sup> This is important as the failure to utilize RhoGAM can lead to a high rate of infant mortality.<sup>99</sup> The lack of consistency and the overarching confusion is clear evidence that decisions are not being made by God but by very fallible men.

This seems to fall into a gray area. Some Christians believe that accepting a small amount of a blood derivative for such a purpose would not be a manifestation of disrespect for God’s law; their conscience would permit such. (Compare Luke 6:1-5.) Others, though, feel conscientiously obliged to refuse serums because these contain blood, though only a tiny amount. Hence, we have taken the position that this question must be resolved by each individual on a personal basis. We urge each one to strive to have a clear conscience and to be responsive to God’s guidance found in His Word.”

Hence some Christians have concluded that to them it does not seem a violation of Bible law to take a shot consisting of antibodies, like RhIG, since the process is essentially like what happens naturally.”

When the Watchtower Society effectively banned blood transfusions in 1945, they did not follow a policy of disfellowshipping. Elders were instructed to be merciful and supportive while still encouraging obedience.<sup>100</sup> However, in 1961 the Watchtower Society began to take a hard-line position regarding transfusions. Anyone who disregarded Jehovah's Organization was to be disfellowshipped unless they repented and diligently sought restoration.<sup>101</sup> In 1997, elders were encouraged to seek a justice that was tempered with mercy.<sup>102</sup> In the year 2000, it was decided not to disfellowship individuals that have had a transfusion or used a blood product. If they are deemed unrepentant, they will be considered to have disassociated themselves.<sup>103</sup>

Before looking at some practical approaches that have been developed to provide the best possible medical care without blood products, the arguments used to support the ban on blood products needs to be examined to see if they have any weight. The first type of argument was that blood, or an organ, carried within it the personality of the donor.

Therefore, the recipient is at risk of developing mental illness or aberrant personality traits. It is difficult to believe that these arguments were seriously proposed in the 1960s.<sup>104</sup> A second type of argument was built around the real but negligible risk of disease or rejection. This type of argument fails when it is realized that the blood transfusion is designed to prevent death in a time of real danger. While it is true there is a risk, a low probability of getting hepatitis<sup>105</sup> or HIV,<sup>106</sup> when compared to a high probability of dying does not seem like a strong argument. A third argument was developed around the fact that there will be some incompatibility between the donor and the recipient. However, this incompatibility is generally medically insignificant.<sup>107</sup> The fourth and final argument is the religious argument.

If we love Jehovah, we will find the idea of a blood transfusion repugnant.<sup>108</sup> However, the Scriptures do not address the issue of transfusions, and the blood prohibitions of the Old and New Testaments are not related to the medical use of blood products, but to prevent the adoption of pagan behaviors.

Because transfusions of whole blood products remain prohibited, there have been attempts to find alternatives. These alternatives have improved as medical technology has improved. Initially the Watchtower Society was less than cooperative in pursuing surgical alternatives. Surgical technology existed that allowed for the scavenging of blood that was lost during the surgery. This blood would be salvaged and returned to the patient. The Watchtower Society stated that once the blood had left the circulatory system, it could only be poured out.<sup>109</sup> Following much discussion, procedures were developed that were helpful for the Jehovah's Witness who would not receive blood from others during surgery. In conjunction with the Jehovah's Witnesses, the medical community designed devices to recover blood in a manner that was acceptable to the Watchtower Society. It was decided that if blood remained in circulation, even an artificial circulation, it could be used again.<sup>110</sup> In addition to methods to reclaim lost blood, medications were developed to stimulate blood cell production, and non-blood products that could carry oxygen were developed.<sup>111</sup>

Jehovah's Witnesses do not accept any of the four major blood components. However, they currently can accept fractions from each of the groups. This means that they are able to access the equivalent of whole blood, just in a reformatted form. However, most Jehovah's Witnesses do not appreciate what this means and continue to carry the "no transfusion cards" and refuse blood products.

Like the serum, blood fraction acceptance was not a linear process. It had reversals. Like other blood products, they would be banned and then reinstated.<sup>112</sup> Given the lifesaving nature of these products, it almost seems callous to keep people with serious medical issues guessing and sometimes uninformed. In 1982, the Watchtower became open to utilizing minor blood components. At the same time heart-lung and dialysis equipment was okayed as long as they were not primed with blood.<sup>113</sup> In 2000 the use of blood fractions became a

Disfellowshipping

The Watchtower Society is a high control organization.<sup>118</sup> When members are baptized, they proclaim allegiance not only to Jehovah and Jesus but also to the Watchtower Society.<sup>119</sup> Independent thinking is discouraged, and there are many behavioral expectations.<sup>120</sup> The group views itself as a ‘clean’ organization and does not tolerate theological dissent or moral carelessness.<sup>121</sup>

Historically the Watchtower Society under Charles Taze Russell practiced a shunning of Christians who brought disrepute on the name of Christ.<sup>122</sup> They were not to be treated as

He promoted independent thinking. ‘You can decide for yourself what is good and bad,’ Satan told Eve. ‘You don’t have to listen to God. He is not really telling you the truth’. (Genesis 3:1-5) To this day, it has been Satan’s subtle design to infect God’s people with this type of thinking.—2 Timothy 3:1,13. 21 How is such independent thinking manifested? The early Watchtower Society pointed out that disfellowshipping was not a biblical practice, but instead sprung from paganism and the Catholic Church.<sup>124</sup> However during both Rutherford's and Knorr's presidencies, the Watchtower Society began to exert greater and greater control on the members. Even the Druids had a method of expelling those who lost faith in their religious superstitions. It was therefore after Catholicism adopted it pagan practices, AD 325, that this new chapter in religious excommunication was written. Thereafter, as the pretensions of the Hierarchy increased, the weapon of excommunication became the instrument by which the clergy attained a combination of ecclesiastical power and secular tyranny that finds no parallel in history.”

presidency, he continued a centralizing of the authority of the Watchtower Society. He implemented district and circuit overseers and established a procedure for installing elders through the Watchtower Society rather than by direct congregational vote. Judicial Committees operated locally but under the authority of the Watchtower Society. Elders and committees often received advice from the Society. The president of the Watchtower Society was absolutely in control of the Watchtower Society and the Watchtower Society was absolutely in control of the individual Kingdom Halls.

The Watchtower Society produced books training elders how to deal with the congregations. In one such book, seven out of twelve chapters dealt with disfellowshipping individuals.<sup>126</sup> At the congregational level, the elders exert tremendous control over individuals. When advised that there is some form of sin in the camp or some theological aberration, they will quickly assemble a judicial committee and call a hearing. The individual who is summoned cannot bring a lawyer or support person, cannot have anyone testify on behalf of his character and cannot record the proceedings.<sup>127</sup> In the case of sexual issues this can mean that young ladies are forced to describe their intimate sexual behavior to three male congregational elders that they likely know, while having no one present to observe or support them. Those elders will then pass sentence. The committees tend to be punitive rather than nurturing.

The list of behaviors that can lead to disfellowshipping is extensive and goes beyond what the Scripture identifies as behavior that calls for separation.<sup>128</sup> The separation that is called for is also more severe than what the Bible calls for. The Bible nowhere calls for families to shun family members. In addition, the attitude the congregation is to have towards someone who has been disfellowshipped is harsh and different from what the Bible counsels.<sup>129</sup>

If someone is disfellowshipped, it is a traumatic event. Once the disfellowshipping is announced, no Jehovah's Witness can associate with that person. There is to be no acknowledgment that they are alive. If that person is a family member, other than a husband or wife, there can be no associating with them.<sup>130</sup> Families are often permanently disrupted by this discipline. Children go for decades without seeing their parents, and parents may never see their disfellowshipped child or their family again. For the disfellowshipped person this can be devastating. Being raised in a Jehovah's Witness community, Witnesses are discouraged from forming friendships with anyone other than another Witness. This means that when persons are disfellowshipped, they have no social support system at all. Their family, who used to love them, now shuns them, their friends who used to act like they loved them now shun them.<sup>131</sup> In fact, the Watchtower literature tells the Witnesses to hate those who are disfellowshipped. In addition, the witness knows that the theological penalty for being separated from Jehovah's Organization is irreversible death. To die without being restored would mean no resurrection.<sup>132</sup>

We obey Jehovah not only when it is convenient but also when doing so presents real challenges. Love for God moves us to obey all his commandments, recognizing that he is just and loving and that his laws promote the greatest good. (Isaiah 48:17; 1 John 5:3) Second, withdrawing from an unrepentant wrongdoer protects us and the rest of the congregation from spiritual and moral contamination and upholds the congregation's good name. (1 Corinthians 5:6, 7) Third, our Bible principles on this subject apply equally to those who disassociate themselves from the congregation. A firm stand for Bible principles may even benefit the disfellowshipped one. By supporting the decision of the judicial committee, we may touch the heart of a wrongdoer who thus far has failed to respond to the efforts of the elders to assist him. Losing precious fellowship with loved ones may help him to come 'to his senses', see the seriousness of his wrong, and take steps to return to Jehovah."

<sup>132</sup> Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, "We Should Not Neglect the House of Our God," Watchtower, December 15, 1965, 751, accessed August 6, 2018, <http://www.watchtowerwayback.org/jw-wb/English/Magazines/The%20Watchtower/1965%20The%20Watchtower.pdf>. "Disfellowshipping means the casting of a member out of God's household; and if one should remain in this disfellowshipped condition till he died, it would mean his everlasting destruction as a person who is rejected by God. Staying away from meetings leads in that very direction."

The penalties imposed are draconian. Once disfellowshipped an individual needs to come back and repentantly attend meetings, generally for a year. During that year, the members continue to shun them. Finally, after their time of waiting is over, they meet with the elders, and when the elders are convinced of their repentance, they are again allowed into the society. When that happens, everyone will again associate with him or her. Once back in, they can go door to door witnessing, but they cannot answer questions at meetings or participate in the services until the elders feel like they are ready.<sup>133</sup> Generally, it is advised that ten years pass before they are allowed to give a public talk.<sup>134</sup>

Statistically, 1 percent of all Witnesses will be disfellowshipped annually. That means that approximately 80,000 Witnesses are disfellowshipped annually. Of these two-thirds will never re-associate with the Watchtower Society.<sup>135</sup>

This might occur, but only after at least ten years from reinstatement. (For details see The Watchtower, 8/15/65, p. 497; Lamp, p. 121.)”

<sup>135</sup> “Disfellowshipping and Shunning,” JWfacts.com. “For every 100 Jehovah's Witnesses more than 1 is disfellowshipped each year; over 80,000, with two out of every three never reinstated. Being disfellowshipped results in serious emotional side effects because: those that continue to believe Watchtower doctrine are told that whilst disfellowshipped they are condemned to everlasting destruction. Those who become unbelievers, with no intention of returning to the Watchtower Society, realize they are unlikely to freely associate with Witness family and friends for the remainder of their lives.”

the behavior or there are two witnesses to the action. Therefore, a woman who is suspected of bad behavior and who will not lie, but confesses, is punished, while a person accused of sexual child abuse simply denies the allegation, and because there are not two witnesses, escapes punishment. The victim is without recourse because it is unlikely that there will ever be a second witness. Therefore, even if the victims report the abuse to the elders, they will have to stay in a congregation with their abuser. That is an incentive not to report abuse.

It is interesting that the Catholic Church and the Jehovah's Witnesses both have similar authoritarian, top down systems of government. Both also have high levels of child sexual abuse because the systems protect the priest or elders. Both groups also value the organization above the victim and silence the victims when possible. Ultimately, the motivation to preserve the organization protects the molester and damages the victim. It is hard to imagine how things could be so twisted.

Until recently, the Watchtower Society made no effort to report child sexual abuse to law enforcement since they considered it a moral issue, not a legal issue. This created a situation where thousands of child victims were sexually abused among the Witnesses. The problem is so prevalent that the governments of different nations have launched hearings into the problem.

Barbara Anderson, a Jehovah's Witness who was a researcher at Bethel, uncovered records of extensive child molestation occurring in the Watchtower Society. She quickly discovered the society did not wish for this to become public nor did the society wish to change the policies that made this possible. Because of Barbara's unwillingness to be silent, she was disfellowshipped from the Jehovah's Witnesses. Undeterred, she did detailed research detailing Watchtower payouts to victims and ongoing cover-ups of sexual abuse.

She has documented multiple court cases where the Watchtower Organization has been forced to make large payments for its complicity in child abuse.

This is an ongoing issue and the Watchtower continues to insist that the two-person rule will not be changed. It appears that the child sex abuse, prevalent among Jehovah's Witnesses and documented on multiple web sites, will continue to be an issue until the Watchtower decides to aggressively address the issue. See the footnote for sites that have information on this plague.<sup>136</sup>

Dishonest or Poor Scholarship

Anyone that has carefully read the literature of the Watchtower Society is aware that it is sometimes misleading. In fact, some note that the Watchtower Society has obtained a reputation for scholastic dishonesty. They are known to pull Scripture out of context, use poor logic, misquote scholars, and quote the sources that they use selectively. As a result, it is necessary to examine the material that is advanced to support Watchtower claims carefully.

The goal of reading and studying is to uncover truth. Therefore, it would be expected that everyone engaged in serious discussion would avoid the use of Scripture taken out of context. Misleading statements should also be avoided. Ideally, beliefs should be presented simply and without distortion. While an individual cannot be responsible for the beliefs or statements of another person, each one is responsible for his own. Discussion and dialogue is not a team sport where the only goal is to win. The goal of discussion and dialogue must be to find the truth.

This site provides links to multiple sites that report on sexual child abuse in the Watchtower. Barbara is a hero. She took a stand on behalf of good and faced down the Watchtower at great personal cost.

Raymond Franz (an ex-JW) commented about his scholarship during the time he wrote for the Watchtower. As he distanced himself from the Watchtower and reconsidered his writing, he came to believe that his preconceived beliefs had constrained his understanding. After he was disfellowshipped and had the time and resources to do unhurried Bible study, he found that his views changed.<sup>137</sup> He found that rather than defending an established position at all cost, he had the freedom to evaluate his beliefs fully and to discuss theology openly.

In order to avoid being misled, it is necessary to look at the arguments of the Watchtower Society closely. We must avoid the tendency to quickly peruse material and instead learn to approach it in an unhurried manner.<sup>138</sup>

When evaluating Scripture, it is important to check the translation being used. When viewing any passage, different translations should be compared to see if the translation being used presents the Scripture in the same way that the majority of translations do. If not, it is important to determine if the translation is based on good scholarship or if there are possible problems with the translation. Next, the Scripture should be read in context. The context provides meaning. The meaning should make sense not only for us, but it should also fit the context of those who first read the Scriptures. Unusual interpretations of ambiguous

<sup>137</sup> Franz, Crisis of Conscience, 48. "But above all it was seeing the need always to let the context guide, always to let the Scriptures themselves control, that made the major difference. There was no overnight change of viewpoint but rather, over a period of years, a gradual deepening of appreciation of the crucial need to let God's Word speak for itself to the fullest extent possible."

scriptures should not be the basis of doctrine. In addition, if the first century believers would not have recognized the interpretation and meaning of the text, it is certainly not correct.

When evaluating non-biblical literature, it is important to evaluate the statements to see if the position taken is logical and the arguments that are advanced support the conclusion. Truth claims need to be evaluated as to the authority they claim. Is the person making the claim knowledgeable? Is the person an expert? On what basis has the claim been made? Is the claim verifiable?

When evaluating footnotes, it is important to read the quotes in their original context. While it takes some effort to find the original sources, sometimes it will be discovered that the original quote makes an argument that is opposite that which the person using the quote is making. Quotes can become misleading when they are selectively used. Additionally, when an ellipse is noted, it is especially important to read the original because the ellipse indicates that something has been left out. Ostensibly, the omission is for brevity, in order to include only the pertinent information. However, sometimes the use of the ellipse eliminates material that contradicts the position the person who is quoting the material is making. When Scriptures are listed in the footnotes, they should be read to see if they actually support the argument. Often, they do not.

When scholars are quoted, it is important to determine their credentials and underlying philosophy. It is of little value to quote a scholar as debunking a doctrine if that scholar opposes all Christian theology. It is of much greater weight to quote a conservative theologian who is in disagreement with a specific doctrine. When a scholar is quoted, his quotation should be looked at in context. In the past the Watchtower Society has quoted conservative theologians out of context and been rebuked by those theologians.

When evaluating doctrines it should be noted whether the current position is different from when it was originally proposed. Historically how has it developed? Is the development rational? Additionally, is the doctrine clearly rooted in the Scripture, or is it the result of “new light”?

Every passage of interest should be read several times. It may be necessary to utilize lexicons, grammars, concordances, commentaries, and other Bible tools to arrive at a correct understanding. Always use due diligence when studying. Even small deviations over great distances can put traveler miles from their destination. The same is true with Scripture. Be sure that all Scripture is properly translated and understood.

Chapter 6

Conclusion

The Watchtower Society and its followers are a virulent theological and sociological cult preying on individuals who are insecure, lonely, or unfulfilled. The group recruits individuals into the Watchtower organization and ultimately demands total obedience to its culture and teachings while discouraging independent thinking. The Watchtower Society is harmful to those who participate. It takes away self-autonomy, requires the refusal of certain lifesaving medical care, and in the past has forced its adherents to maintain political positions that have led to death and imprisonment.

More importantly, the Watchtower Society falsely claims that it is God's only organization on earth. As demonstrated in previous chapters, this claim is demonstrably false. Multiple lines of evidence lead to that conclusion. There is not one shred of evidence, other than their own self-serving proclamation, demonstrating that they are God's organization. Even the history of their being bestowed with this honor can be shown to be false by examining the dates used to arrive at 1914.

Bad Theology

Theologically the Watchtower Society is bankrupt. They use of the concept of "new light" to create doctrine out of thin air and then re-interpret Scripture to support those doctrines. The Watchtower Society has a different Jesus and a different Holy Spirit. They have created a works based system that claims that the death of the man, Jesus, was adequate only to bring them to a sinless state. They insist that their salvation will be the result of their work towards perfection during the millennium. Those who work diligently at serving Jehovah and being obedient to Jesus will ultimately be adopted by Jehovah into eternal life on earth. They also teach that the promises of the New Testament apply to only the elect 144,000 who will be located in heaven with God.

Their concept of “new light” is especially troublesome. The Watchtower Society places itself beyond criticism by claiming they have heard directly from God. Members cannot question the Watchtower Society’s interpretation of Scripture or its development of doctrine. There is no biblical warrant for the position. The “new light” claim is bogus, and it always has been. It is a bit like a game of “let’s pretend” with a friend, where only the friend gets to lead. The Watchtower cannot credibly be believed when it claims to hear from God on other peoples’ behalf.

In addition, an examination of doctrinal changes shows that “new light” has not added knowledge to existing light, thereby cumulatively increasing knowledge. Instead, it has often contradicted and reversed previous “new light.” It seems that “new light” is a means to manipulate and maintain control of the organization.

Because of “new light” the Jehovah’s Witness have a history of many failed prophecies and changed theological positions. Why join a group that has not pronounced a single prophecy right for more than a hundred years and which frequently changes doctrine? Their current record of accomplishment indicates that association with them will only lead to future disappointments.

The Watchtower Society is also prone to re-writing history to suit their own purposes. This is seen in the changing and reinterpreting of dates and prophetic events. They also ignore any science or history not supporting their doctrine. Their history books both whitewash events and conceal information. In addition, a lack of scholarship and integrity is evident in their literature and in the New World Translation.

Even though the teachings of the Watchtower Society are available back to their founding date, the Watchtower Society website only makes material available back to 1950. In order to find older materials, it is necessary to go to non-Jehovah's Witness sites, something Jehovah's Witnesses are strongly encouraged not to do. These non-Watchtower websites have available all the literature produced since 1879. This is useful because it allows the reader to see how much has changed since Russell was president. None of the literature produced by Russell or Rutherford is currently in use because of doctrinal changes.

Another theological issue is the Watchtower Society's excitement about the coming Armageddon<sup>1</sup>. The organizations joyfully looks forward to Armageddon as the beginning of the millennium and the end of all evil systems. However, since Armageddon will bring about the annihilation of 7.6 billion people and since those who perish at Armageddon will not be resurrected and have an opportunity to seek eternal life, how can Jehovah's Witnesses be so casual about people becoming Jehovah's Witnesses? It is common for them to say that they are fine with people believing whatever they want. They graciously say they are available if someone wants to know the truth, and they say they are not here to convince anyone of anything. Does that make sense? Where is the sorrow and the longing for people to be saved? This is not their finest moment; it appears they care little for the world outside their own group.

"The war of Armageddon will cleanse the earth of all corruption and wickedness and open the way for a righteous new system of things under the rule of God's Messianic Kingdom. (Isaiah 11:4, 5) Instead of being a frightening cataclysmic end, Armageddon will signal a happy beginning for righteous individuals, who will live forever on a paradise earth."

Damage to Members

The organization is harmful to the individual members. It does not allow any type of independent thinking. The Watchtower Society prefers and insists that a person believe a lie rather than protest an error. People are compelled to believe things they do not understand, or even worse, believe things that they suspect might be wrong. Those who protest or dare to read apostate literature or even Russell's original writings face possible disfellowshipping. In addition, even if a person could agree with all of today's theology, he risks being disfellowshipped in the future, as the current positions change and the leadership demands full allegiance to the new policies. The Watchtower Society is a totalitarian organization controlling all of life. Conformity is valued over truth.

The organization has little concern for its own members. The policies it has enacted have caused grievous harm to its own members. The Watchtower Society is either hopelessly ignorant or deeply malevolent. The current blood transfusion policies have led to the deaths of thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses, including many children. The two-witness rule has led to thousands of children being sexually molested. However, the organization will not change the two Witness rule and continues to be slow to report child abuse unless compelled. The Watchtower Society places the interest of the organization over that of the victims. Currently millions of dollars are being assessed against the Watchtower Society as the result of court cases they have lost. Shunning is also a major issue with Witness wellbeing. The practice of shunning has torn apart families, caused tremendous psychological suffering and led to suicides. All these things indicate that the Watchtower Organization is irreparably flawed and there is no indication that future decisions by the Watchtower will not be equally damaging.

The Watchtower Society has a totalitarian hold on Jehovah's Witnesses. If a person was baptized and later wanted to leave, the organization would disfellowship that person. None of the people that had previously loved the person would ever acknowledge their existence again. Even if they repented and came back, they would still endure shunning until they had proved their repentance. That generally takes a period of a year. The unwillingness to allow individuals the right to be autonomous individuals, making their own decisions, is deeply troubling.

It is also true that the individual Jehovah's Witnesses are encouraged to stand out from others by being faithful Jehovah's Witnesses. They are not to be worldly. While that sounds very Christian, the Jehovah's Witnesses are being asked to assume a victim's role. They are compelled to act in socially awkward ways and are sometimes persecuted by those outside the group for their actions. They may not participate in holidays or birthdays. They cannot salute the flag; they cannot belong to the military. They should not have non-Witness friends. All this helps to create isolation and calls attention to the group, both of which are desired results. As a result, they feel they must isolate themselves from the evils of society and avoid non-witness family and non-witness friends.

Due to social and theological conditioning, there is a failure of individual Witnesses to engage seriously in dialogue and discussion. This makes it difficult to communicate with the Witnesses and the Watchtower Society. While they appear to prey on those who do not have biblical knowledge, they avoid people who can discuss theology and history. Individual Witnesses are not encouraged to search for truth by the Watchtower Society. The Watchtower has done their studying for them and then makes it available in the literature.

It is useful to think about the Jehovah's Witnesses in the context of a team sport. The Witnesses have their position and their team. Their goal is to defend their team at all cost, while destroying or minimizing opposing arguments. Unfortunately, for Jehovah's Witnesses, they do not see discussion as a search for truth. Instead it is a competition to beat the opponent. Truth is sacrificed for the sake of the organization. That is never appropriate. Truth is far too important to be sacrificed. Healthy individuals are created to pursue for truth. In fact, Scripture indicates that God is truth.

Chapter 7

Evaluation

Setting

The course, based on the previous chapters, was taught at Freedom House in October and November of 2018. Freedom House is the only Prison Fellowship partner in Belize and is one of a very few halfway houses in the country. The facility has four austere wooden buildings located on a plot of land in Roaring Creek, just outside of the capital of Belmopan. The ministry provides lodging for up to 17 residents and two full time staff members. The residents are males who are seeking to find wholeness and healing through Christ. Most have been in prison, but a few have only substance abuse problems. The residents have had little education, and most read at a rudimentary level. Most have had some exposure to Jehovah's Witnesses.

During the time the course was taught, there were twelve residents in attendance. The course was taught in the period utilized for a mandatory evening worship service. Therefore, everyone was present. During the time of the course, there was no turnover of residents, so the same individuals were present. Most of the residents would be in their twenties and thirties, but there were some outliers.

Result of Pre and Posttesting

In order to evaluate the effectiveness of the teaching, a quiz was given at the beginning of each class. The students were aware that the same quiz would be given at the end of the class and that the answers would be provided during the presentation. This format seemed to work well, and during the class, the students often pointed out the answers to questions that had been asked. At the end of the class a posttest was given. The students were excited about having learned the information and were anxious to answer the questions, often calling answers as the questions were being asked. This led to everybody doing well in the posttest, but it was also quite evident that the information had been absorbed during the course of the presentation and that it would be counterproductive to interfere with this demonstration of learning.

Both the seminar questions and the PowerPoints were developed for a one week, Monday to Friday presentation. This was not possible at the Freedom House. Instead, the seminar actually took place Tuesday and Friday for two weeks and finished on the next Tuesday. In order to maintain continuity with the materials and to minimize confusion, the results will be reported out in a Monday to Friday framework.

The results of both the pre and the posttesting were consistent. The pretest scores ranged from an average of 53 to an average of 66. They did the worst in the class discussing what a cult was and the techniques favored by the Jehovah’s Witnesses and best on the class about the structure of the Watchtower Society. Monday, “Recruiting Techniques” averaged 53. Tuesday, “The Watchtower Society” averaged 66. Wednesday, “Factors That Allowed the Development of the Watchtower Society” averaged 55. Thursday, “Watchtower Theology” averaged 62. Friday, “Dates and Controversies” averaged 61. In all five sections the posttest was effectively 100. So each presentation demonstrated a change of between 34 and 47 points. The average was 43 points. The following graphs detail this information.

The use of pre and posttest demonstrated a very real increase in short-term learning. Further testing would be necessary to assess long-term memory. The evaluation process suffered from three design flaws. The first was the small sample size. Samples under the size of 30 do not provide accurate statistical analysis. The sample size here was 12. The second design flaw was the use of a projector to do the posttest. The group was enthusiastic, and some members needed to demonstrate that they now knew the answer. While it appeared, everyone had actually learned the right answers, it was impossible to verify that they had not heard someone verbally offer the answer. The third design flaw was that the population was not random. They were all Christian men (because the setting was a Christian halfway house) and all of the members had demonstrated an inability to navigate society successfully. Most had little formal learning, and all had either criminal histories or histories of substance abuse. Since this group is one of our target audiences, it was not an overly important factor. However, to demonstrate that the seminars were beneficial, a more diverse group needs to be taught. The group will need to have more than 30 individuals and will need to include men and women as well as individuals with diverse educational levels.

Evaluation by the Instructor

The course was done on Tuesday and Thursday evenings after the residents returned from their work and before they had supper. That, potentially, could have led to many tired and inattentive residents. Thankfully, that was not the case. The residents were alert and respectful. They engaged in dialogue and genuinely seemed to enjoy the discussion. During the five evenings, the residents engaged in discussion and remained focused on the topic. It appeared that they were absorbing the information, comparing it to what they knew and learning that the Watchtower Society was not a good deal.

A question asked at the beginning and close of the seminar was designed to determine if there had been any change in their beliefs during the seminar. At the beginning of the seminar, five individuals stated that they would not enter into a Bible study or read Watchtower materials. They believed the Watchtower to be a harmful cult. Six individuals did not have enough information and would be willing to study the Bible with a Jehovah's Witness in order to learn about the Watchtower. One individual appeared to have an openness to exploring or adapting the Watchtower's theology.

At the close of the last day of the seminar, the same question was again asked to see if there had been any change. At that time, all twelve of the individuals present indicated that they would not be open to studying the Bible with a Jehovah's Witness nor reading their materials. This is reflected in the following graphs.

Results from Evaluation Forms

The results of the evaluation forms filled out by the residents were not surprising. On the Likert scale, 4s or 5s were checked for the first seven items. This indicated that they enjoyed the presentation and found the setting and presentation acceptable. However, a number of residents checked 1 on question 8 about having a course on Mormonism. That indicates either that they have little interest in teaching about particular cults or that they prefer their normal evening chapel setting, which consist of singing and a devotional like topic. The sole exception to the above was one individual who thought that the material was difficult and that it should not be regularly taught. Ratings in the physical setting and the instructor ranged from good to excellent. Several comments concerning the course are included below.

What did you most appreciate/enjoy/think was best about the course? Any suggestions for improvement?
Responses:
“That more people need this teaching”
“I appreciated learning about their false doctrines, for the fact that I will not be caught in their lies.”
“My best suggestion is to avoid the JW’s.”
“ I learned the TRUTH.”
“I learnt that JW sucks”
“All the information, and all the crazy stuff they believe”
“I learn something new.”
“It was amazing to know this. More of this need to happen”
Did this course change your view of the Watchtower Society? If so how?
Responses:

“No change at all”
“Yes it did, taught me many things I didn’t know about them and their false teachings as well as the false prophecies.”
“Yes it did making me aware of who they are.”
“Yes it did, thanks.”
“Definitely, Don’t have no interest in being their friends.”
“No, I knew they were scoundrels.”
“By learning the Watchtower is not good”

Project Evaluation

The project unfolded better than I had hoped. It was apparent that as long as the format was an interactive, question and answer style, the group remained involved. This allowed an opportunity to explain concepts and words with which they were not familiar. The lack of reading ability and formal education did not pose a serious barrier. In addition, the presence of two leaders with whom I had a prior relationship allowed questions to be asked freely. They asked for definitions or for clarification when it was necessary. The informal nature of the seminar and the easy banter made it comfortable for people to question statements and make alternative proposals.

The goals of the project were met. Prior to the seminar more than half of the group would have gone to a Watchtower Bible Study to study with the Jehovah’s Witnesses if they had been asked nicely. By the end of the study, no one would do that. In addition to meeting the goals for the group, it seems clear that an interested instructor could reuse the material and have a successful seminar with students who are not able to read beyond the sixth grade level. The key is not in the PowerPoint presentation but in avoiding the reading of the slides. Instead, with the slide as a backdrop, the material must be presented very simply and with examples that come to mind.

In addition, an individual interested in doing apologetics with Jehovah's Witnesses could use much of the material to prepare. Jehovah's Witnesses do not wish to use apostate or enemy resources, so the material in the paper can be used to explain their history and doctrine and to refute their errors.

PowerPoint Presentations

PowerPoint Presentation for Monday: What Is A Cult: How To Avoid Being Recruited

Slide 1

What Is A Cult: HOW TO AVOID BEING RECRUITED

Slide 2

What is a cult?

Slide 3

Cults Are Defined either Theologically Or Sociologically

Slide 4

Theologically

Slide 5

Theologically

“A cult of Christianity is a group of people, which claiming to be Christian, embraces a particular doctrinal system taught by an individual leader, group of leaders, or organization, which (system) denies (either explicitly or implicitly) one or more of the central doctrines of the Christian faith as taught in the sixty-six books of the Bible.”

Alan W. Gomes, Unmasking the Cults (Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 1995), 7, Kindle.

Slide 6

Central doctrines include:

- The Trinity
- The deity of Christ
- The bodily resurrection
- The atoning work of Christ on the cross • Salvation by grace through faith.

These doctrines so comprise the essence of the Christian faith that to remove any of them is to make the belief system non-Christian.

Slide 7

Sociologically

Slide 8

- Sociological Cults Are Authoritarian.
- They Stifle Independent Thinking
- They Are Exclusive
- They Are Isolating
- They Are Fear Based

Slide 9

By Both Definitions The Watchtower Society Is A Cult.

(Members of the Watchtower Society are known as Jehovah's Witnesses.)

Watchtower Statistics

World wide: average of 8,248,982 monthly publishers, an annual increase worldwide of 1.4 percent.

Belize: average of 2555 average monthly publishers, an annual increase of 2 percent.

Slide 11

What are the characteristics of the people most likely to be recruited?

Slide 12

Why do a large number of cultist come from Christian backgrounds?

Slide 13

Most people recruited are not recruited because of the theology. What do you think gets them into the cult?

Slide 14

Jehovah's Witnesses prepare for every encounter. Conversation openers for every occasion. - Reasoning from the Scriptures

Slide 15

Plan is:

- Multiple contacts
- Offer for Bible Study
- Isolation

- Visit Kingdom Hall

Slide 16

Three issues will come up early on. The Trinity, the Deity of Jesus, and the Deity of the Holy Spirit.

Why do these come up?

Are most Christians prepared to discuss them? If not why?

Slide 17

Arguments against The Trinity:

- Pagan
- Irrational
- Incomprehensible • Not in Bible
- Out of context quotes
- Supposed 4th century Development

Slide 18

Is the Trinity Pagan?

1. The sources used by the Watchtower to make this argument are liberal and would reject all of Christianity as being based in paganism. (Christianity borrowed pagan ideas).
2. No credible comparison between Trinity and pagan gods. They are very different.
3. Trinity not developed from historical precedents. It is found in the New Testament so pagan arguments are irrelevant.

Irrational?

The Watchtower Society and Russell himself (the founder) believed God was rational. Therefore, with effort, everything can be understood. Since the idea of a God who was really one God manifest in three persons did not make sense it could not be true.

However the Trinity does provide a rational explanation of the conundrum that the New Testament creates in its description of God. Therefore it is not “irrational.” It is not fried ice or a round triangle.

Slide 20

Incomprehensible

The book of Job speaks to this. God is beyond our ability to comprehend. In fact, much of the universe we live in is currently still incomprehensible. So the fact that we cannot comprehend God is not an argument against the Trinity. It is a reasonable admission.

Slide 21

Not in the Bible

1. Trinity is a theological and descriptive term. It is not in the Bible, but it is useful to discuss the nature of God as revealed in the Bible.
2. The word theocratic, which is very important to the Watchtower, is not in the Bible nor are the terms Watchtower study, circuit overseer, district overseer, governing body, publisher, pioneer, auxiliary pioneer, Kingdom Hall, or presiding overseer.
3. That the exact word used to describe something is not in the Bible does not make it false (Rapture for instance).

Slide 22

Out of context quotes

The Watchtower Society has been caught any number of times selectively quoting experts to support their positions. They will either pluck a sentence or two out and run them alone or will remove lines from within their quote and substitute an ellipse in their place. When the full quote is read and its context examined, many times it turns out that the original quote does not say what they made it to say.

Slide 23

The “Constantine Did It” Argument

The early church fathers, writing soon after the completion of the Bible and through the next few centuries, make statements demonstrating their belief in the deity of Jesus and the Holy Spirit. It is true that the formal doctrine of the Trinity developed slowly and took centuries to be ratified by the churches. However, from the beginning, many of the early church fathers attested to the deity of Christ and the Holy Spirit. The key components of the Trinity are attested to in both the New Testament and early church history.

Slide 24

Arguments Against the Deity of Christ:

- Created being
- Michael the Archangel • Perfect human
- Not God (didn't call himself God)
- Less than God. (prayed to God)

Slide 25

Jesus, A Created Being?

Scripture provides good evidence that Jesus was divine and not a created being. The Watchtower NWT translates John 1:1 as “a god” and inserts without warrant “other” in Colossians 1 to indicate that he was the first created being. Neither of these is good scholarship. Then in addition to the correct translation of John 1:1 and Colossians 1, there is Titus 2:13 – “waiting for our blessed hope, the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ” and 2 Peter 1:1 – “To those who have obtained a faith of equal standing with ours by the righteousness of our God and Savior Jesus Christ.”

Side 26

Jesus is Michael, the Archangel

No Bible verse demonstrates that Jesus is Michael. Three key verses derailing this speculation are Hebrews 1, which shows that the Lord is not an angel; Daniel 10:13, which shows Michael is one of the great angels; and Jude 9 in which Michael, not willing to rebuke Satan, says, “The Lord rebuke you.” This is a teaching revealed by “divine light.” God is supposedly directly teaching the Watchtower this otherwise hidden truth.

Slide 27

Jesus, The Perfect Man?

The Ransom Doctrine of the Watchtower states that Adam’s sin had to be atoned for by an equal, a perfect man. This means that it would not be reasonable for Jesus to be Divine. The sacrifice called, not for a God, but for a perfect man.

The Ransom Doctrine will be addressed later. But there is no biblical issue that prevents Jesus being both man and God and sacrificing himself for mankind’s sake.

Slide 28

Jesus Never Said He Was God. So there!

While Jesus never said the words, “I am God,” he did refer to himself as the Son of Man, a reference to Daniel and his own deity. He, on more than one occasion made claims for divinity and was almost stoned because people clearly understood the intent of his claims (John 8 and 10). He also referred to himself as the “I am” and performed miracles. He also fulfilled OT prophecy in which he was called “God with us.”

Slide 29

Jesus Was Less Than God

The argument is that he prayed to his father so he could not have been equal. That is not necessarily true. I used to work as a paramedic. The entire staff was trained to the level of a paramedic. So on some calls I drove and took instructions from my partner and on other calls he drove and took instructions from me. We were never unequal; we just assumed a role difference. Husbands and wives are not unequal. They come to some decision about roles and maintain them. So on earth during the incarnation for some reason Jesus was functionally subordinate.

Slide 30

Arguments against the Holy Spirit: • No name

- Neuter gender • Acts like force
- Personifications
- Not present in early church beliefs.

Slide 31

The Holy Spirit was not named, so cannot be a person.

God did not share his name until he met with Moses. Perhaps someday we will know more about the Spirit's name.

The Holy Spirit does have a title and is also part of God so has a name in that sense. Both angels and demons appear in the New Testament without personal human names. So the lack of a name is not a strong argument.

Slide 32

The Gender Is Neutral so Must Be an It

The fact that the Holy Spirit is a neuter noun is a convention of the language and does not have to do with gender or lack thereof. The word for demon and the word for child are both neuter but we are not going to deny their personhood based on a language convention. We believe demons are real beings with personality, and all of us believe that children, regardless of sex, are real individuals.

Slide 33

Acts like a force.

God himself acts like a force sometimes. That does not make God an impersonal tool of someone else does it?

Slide 34

This Is Just A Personification.

We could say that, but we could also acknowledge the Spirit's personality and reality. We choose based on our presuppositions.

In addition, a personification is understood to exist when the literal is not possible or likely. So the Bible says trees clap their hands. That must be a personification but when something can be literally true, we would not want to call it a personification. Jesus also described the actions of the Holy Spirit in ways that cannot be a personification.

Slide 35

The Holy Spirit Is Absent in Early Church Teaching

This is simply not true. The Holy Spirit is mentioned by the Early Church Fathers.

Slide 36

The use of Watchtower material is significant.

Watchtower Literature interprets the Bible and leads to a set of conclusions.

Without the Watchtower interpretation someone reading only the Bible would NEVER come to the understanding that the Jehovah's Witnesses come to.

So.... Which is true? . . . Watchtower or the Bible?

Slide 37

Getting grafted in

Slide 38

New recruit must know that we cannot interpret Scripture.

Slide 39

Watchtower Society: Chosen in 1919 as God's mouthpiece, The Watchtower interprets Scripture because Scripture is for organization, not individuals.

Slide 40

No one can understand Scripture apart from the Watchtower.

Slide 41

No one can have salvation apart from the Watchtower.

Slide 42

Must learn to not be an independent thinker. Even if it does not make sense, believe and obey. We should not think independently, and we must be obedient.

Slide 43

Russell was not sociologically cultic.

Rutherford led to increasing control. Next two presidents made it worse.

Slide 44

Our goal is not to take on the cult, but to be smart enough to avoid it and help other do the same.

It is not realistic to expect to change a Witnesses' mind in a few contacts. Cultists have too much at stake to change their mind. They would lose their family and social support system. They are also taught they would lose their salvation. Christians who are loving and who have good Bible knowledge may want to spend time dialoging with Witnesses, but results come slowly.

Why is there a concern?

Slide 19

As we will see later, the Jehovah's Witnesses

- believe in another Jesus and
- present another gospel.

Slide 20

Development and Growth of the Watchtower Society to what is now known as the Jehovah's Witnesses.

(From 1870 to 1935 they were known as the International Bible Students)

Slide 21

Began as Bible Study in 1870

Slide 22

The Bible Studies grew and brought together others with a similar mindset.

Slide 23

During this period (following the Second Great Awakening) people were unsettled and looking for something more.

Slide 24

During this time there was a lot of theological error and a peculiar affinity for that error. Most American cult groups arose during this same time frame.

Slide 25

Among the cults were:

Campbellite movement of the 1820s,

Mormons from 1830,

Millerites from 1844,

Christadelphians from 1848,

Seventh-day Adventist from 1861,

Jehovah's Witnesses from 1879,

Christian Science from 1879,

Unity School of Christianity from 1895.

Slide 26

Watchtower Bible and Tract Society formed in 1884. The Allegheny Bible Study oversaw the operation of the groups.

Slide 27

1909 there was a move to Brooklyn, New York

Slide 28

Russell developed a publishing empire. This accomplished two purposes:

1. Wealth acquisition. Their books and magazines were purchased. They were also necessary because-
2. Communication. The magazines and flyers proclaimed the message.

Slide 29

Both magazines (Watchtower and Awake!) are considered authoritative, and members are expected to agree with the positions taken and follow the instructions offered. No disagreement or disobedience is tolerated.

Slide 30

The role of The Watchtower is to explain Bible teachings and what the Scriptures say about God's Kingdom. It has been published continually since 1879.

Slide 31

Awake! has articles with general subjects, such as nature or science. The goal is to create faith in a Creator. Awake! also stresses how the Bible can be of practical value in life.

Slide 32

"The Watchtower has a circulation larger than any other magazine in the world. Each issue has a print run of more than 42 million copies.

Slide 33

Awake! is second, with a circulation of 41 million copies each issue. Both magazines are published by Jehovah's Witnesses and are distributed in 236 lands."

Slide 34

The Leadership

Slide 35

Charles Taze Russell

Slide 36

Charles Taze Russell was born on February 16, 1852. His mother hoped her son would aspire to the ministry.

Slide 37

Russell's earliest church experiences were in the Presbyterian church, but when he was a teenager he migrated the Congregational church.

Slide 38

In 1869 (when 18) Russell, who had earlier given up on church, attended a service done by Jonas Wendell, an Advent Christian.

Slide 39

He was excited by what he heard. By 1870 he was studying Adventist beliefs and exploring end time prophecy.

Slide 40

The early Bible Students thought Russell was restoring the church. In reality he brought together Adventist beliefs and other theologies common to the time.

Slide 41

In 1879, at 27 years of age, he parted ways with the Adventist and began publishing The Zion's Watchtower.

This same year, 1879, he married Maria Francis Ackley. She believed Russell to be the "faithful and wise servant" of Matthew 24:45.

Slide 42

By 1880 there were multiple Bible Study groups meeting in several states. Many of his followers believed that Russell's was some sort of prophet.

Slide 43

In 1895 Russell began to encourage use of his developing series "Studies in the Scriptures" during meeting times. This model is still in practice today using the Watchtower Magazine.

Slide 44

This series taught that God has one harmonious plan for the ages and that the plan was gradually revealed.

Slide 45

Consider this partial quote by Russell:

"Not only do we find that people cannot see the divine plan in studying the Bible by itself, . . ."

So, if it requires a guide to see this plan, is it not equally possible that the Bible does not teach it?

Slide 46

"But we see, also, that if anyone lays the Scripture Studies aside, even after he has used them, after he has become familiar with them, after he has read them for ten years—if he then lays them aside and ignores them and goes to the Bible alone, though he has understood his Bible for ten years, our experience shows that within two years he goes into darkness."

Slide 47

Again, is it not equally likely that the reason that people revert to previous Bible beliefs is that they are clear and in the Scriptures?

Slide 48

"On the other hand, if he had merely read the Scripture studies with their references and had not read a page of the Bible, as such, he would be in the light at the end of the two years because he would have the light of the Scriptures."

Slide 49

So the statement seems to mean that “if you read only Russell’s teachings, you will continue to follow and believe Russell’s teaching. But if you stop and read the Bible, Russell’s teachings are not evident and are lost.”

Slide 50

Unfortunately for Russell, during his ministry he encountered a number of difficulties.

Slide 51

In 1896 Maria, his wife, reversed her stance on Matthew 24:45-47. Russell was no longer the "faithful and wise servant." He was now the "evil servant" of later verses.

Slide 52

In 1903 Maria filed for legal separation.

Slide 53

Then some of his business practices were scrutinized.

Slide 54

In 1913 the Brooklyn Daily Eagle reported on his selling overpriced wheat and making miraculous claims about its yield. Instead the miracle wheat was found to be average.

Slide 55

Russell also embarked on a ministry world tour for publicity. He wrote reviews for newspapers along the way and had grandiose reports of his reception.

Slide 56

However, the Brooklyn Daily Eagle did research and found that

- he did not give many of the speeches he claimed he had
- nor was his reception at all like it had been presented.

Slide 57

Charles Taze Russell presented himself as someone very accomplished. A pastor took exception to that and wrote a tract stating that Russell was uneducated, had never been ordained, and was behaving immorally.

Slide 58

Russell filed a libel suit. During the trial it was revealed that he had no knowledge of original Bible languages, no formal training, and he had never been ordained.

Slide 59

Russell since 1891 had been preaching that the return of God's kingdom was soon to be inaugurated.

Slide 60

He believed the "Times of the Gentiles" were to end with Second Coming of Jesus to crush Gentile powers. It was "the full establishment of the Kingdom of God in the earth," and it was to occur in 1914.

Slide 61

The prophecy failed.

Slide 62

In 1915 Russell reinterpreted the failure of 1914. He claimed it was to be a progressive fulfillment being completed in a few years.

Slide 63

Later, after Russell died, the next president claimed that 1914 will be the beginning of the end and was the year Jesus returned to be with the Watchtower invisibly. So 1914 replaced 1874.

Slide 64

Judge Joseph Franklin Rutherford

Slide 65

Following Russell's death in 1917 Joseph Franklin Rutherford was elected as the second president of the Society.

Slide 66

He was not charismatic and was not well liked. There was resistance to his leadership from the beginning.

Slide 67

However, Rutherford was a force to be reckoned with. Demanding compliance to his will he reorganized the society and purged all dissenters.

Slide 68

This autocratic style is still imbedded in the Society.

Slide 69

In those first years many of the Bible Students left, forming other groups. A large segment of those who followed Russell refused to follow Rutherford.

Slide 70

In 1920 Rutherford published "Millions Now Living Will Never Die!" He predicted that 1925 would be the end of the world. God would recreate paradise on earth.

Slide 71

He changed the focus from personal holiness to door to door evangelism. Door to door ministry, phonographs, and vehicles with loudspeakers were utilized to spread the message.

Slide 72

In 1927 Russell's influence began to be minimized The Society was named as the "faithful and wise servant," not Russell.

Slide 73

This "servant class," the 144,000, is now God's channel of communication. Representatives at Watchtower headquarters reveal God's will for the Witnesses.

Slide 74

In 1930 Rutherford reworked the doctrine of Christ's Second Presence and changed the date from 1874 to 1914.

Slide 75

In 1931 he renamed the followers as Jehovah's Witnesses based upon Isaiah 43:10. "You are my witnesses" is the utterance of Jehovah, "even my servant whom I have chosen."

Slide 76

Rutherford was not held accountable for his actions. He was a bully and had a temper. He was reportedly an alcoholic. He did not communicate with his wife or child after he became president, and he kept a mistress. He also spent lavishly while the average Bethel worker was in poverty.

Slide 77

Joseph Rutherford died in 1942. At that time there were approximately 108,000 members in the Society. Unlike Russell who was deeply mourned, there was no reaction to his death, and his funeral was very sparsely attended.

Slide 78

Nathan Knorr

Slide 79

Nathan Homer Knorr became the third president of the Society in 1942. There were about 115,000 members. By 1975 he had grown the organization to 2,000,000 members.

Slide 80

Knorr was an adequate speaker, but he possessed little of Russell's charisma and Rutherford's drive.

Slide 81

However he was more qualified and did more for the organization than either. He was also not prone to scandal.

Slide 82

He wisely began to re-imagining the Watchtower and sought to overcome some of its negative history.

Slide 83

He seemed to have an intuitive grasp on the need for education and training the Jehovah's Witnesses in their doctrine and their apologetics.

Slide 84

He established:

- The Theocratic Ministry School to train men to speak and use Bible aids.
- The Watch Tower Bible School of Gilead to train the most talented Witnesses for overseas missionary work.

Slide 85

Like his predecessors Knorr continued to maintain that the Bible could not be understood apart from direction from the Watchtower.

Slide 86

He directed the development of the New World Translation from 1950-1961. The translation makes unwarranted changes to the Bible that support JW doctrine.

Slide 87

Knorr consolidated the authority of the Watchtower Society.

Slide 88

Local Kingdom Halls were brought directly under the authority of the Watchtower Society. Each Kingdom Hall became a congregational judicial center used to enforce a strict religious and moral code.

Slide 89

The Watchtower Society's decrees affected all Witnesses. There was an increasing use of explicit instructions guiding Witnesses in their lifestyle and conduct.

Slide 90

Nathan Knorr died in 1977. At that time there were two million Jehovah's Witnesses.

Slide 91

Frederick Franz

Slide 92

In 1979 Frederick Franz was elected to the Presidency.

Slide 93

Power was supposed to have been transferred to the Governing Body, but Franz, by force of personality and reputation, maintained the power of the presidency.

Slide 94

In 1992, after 13 years as President, Frederick Franz died at age 98.

At that time membership was close to 5 million.

Slide 95

Milton Henshel, Don Alden Adams, Robert Ciranko

Slide 96

The next three presidents were essentially anonymous and the role of president had no real importance.

Slide 97

The first four presidents were the Watchtower Society.

They ruled and their rule was synonymous with the Watchtower Society and the Governing Board.

Slide 98

With Franz's death in 1992 the Governing Board actually began function as it had been envisioned to function.

Witnesses most likely believed that the governing body had been functioning since the beginning, but it had not. It was a useful fiction.

Door to Door

All active Jehovah's Witnesses are required to spend time preaching (publishing). The most basic way to do this is to go door to door. The return is low and many people who go out do not like the feeling of rejection when people refuse to talk to them.

Slide 104

Cart Ministry

In the past few years there has been an emphasis on setting up book carts in public places. There is no attempt to stop or engage people unless they are approached. A significant number tracts and books are given out for free.

PowerPoint Presentation for Wednesday: Three Foundational Issues
Promoting the Success of the Watchtower Society

Slide 1

Theology

Theology is the study of the nature of God and religious belief.

Slide 2

Three Factors Gave Rise to Watchtower Theology

Slide 3

The first is the theological credulousness of Charles Taze Russell. He had no theological training and was not equipped to deal with the many erroneous ideas current in his day.

Slide 4

Little of Russell's theology was original. He worshipped with the Advent Christians following his disillusionment with mainline Christianity.

Slide 5

There he studied with some of their prominent leaders and absorbed a number of unusual ideas. In addition, he read widely and garnered theological ideas from his reading.

Slide 6

Among his adopted beliefs are:

- Neo-Arianism
- Non-Trinitarian Ransom Theory
- Worship pattern of Kingdom Halls
- Conditional Immortality
- Soul Sleep
- Prophetic Date Setting

Slide 7

- A second chance for the lost during the Millennium
- Communion once a year on Nisan 14
- The millennial reign following 6000 years on earth
- The two part return of Christ to call his church

- The invisible return of Christ
- Pre-tribulation Rapture
- 607 BC fall of Jerusalem
- Prophetic Chronology (date setting)
- Non-existence of punishment (Hell)

Slide 8

Russell randomly combined doctrines until he had something that seemed rational to him. The unique combination of these pre-existing ideas set his people apart and gave him something to recruit to.

Slide 9

What do you believe contributed to Russell's mix of doctrines?

Is this a good argument for required theological education of those who lead others in a faith context. Why or why not?

Suggest one thing that would help avoid being ensnared by someone with erroneous views.

Slide 10

Second is the ABSOLUTE centrality of the Watchtower Society.

Slide 11

This is a bit ironic since Russell had said specifically that an organization was not necessary and would be harmful. Russell also valued independent thinking. He wanted people to arrive at their conclusions honestly.

Slide 12

But this is not what happened. The Watchtower Society under Rutherford created an authoritarian organization and demanded full submission. Independent thought was not tolerated.

Slide 13

Notice the need for conformity to the organization and the centrality of the organization for salvation.

Slide 14

A few quotes showing that individuals cannot interpret the Bible without the Watchtower Society

Slide 15

"Thus the Bible is an organizational book and belongs to the Christian congregation as an organization, not to individuals, regardless of how sincerely they may believe that they can interpret the Bible."

Slide 16

[The Watchtower] "is the only organization authorized and qualified to interpret the Bible."

Slide 17

"We all need help to understand the Bible, and we cannot find the Scriptural guidance we need outside the 'faithful and discreet slave' organization."

Slide 18

"All who want to understand the Bible should appreciate that the 'greatly diversified wisdom of God' can become known only through Jehovah's channel of communication, the faithful and discreet slave."

Slide 19

"From time to time, there have arisen from among the ranks of Jehovah's people those, who, like the original Satan, have adopted an independent, faultfinding attitude. . . . They say that it is sufficient to read the Bible exclusively, either alone or in small groups at home.

Slide 20

But, strangely, through such 'Bible reading', they have reverted right back to the apostate doctrines that commentaries by Christendom's clergy were teaching 100 years ago. . . ."

Slide 21

Quotes requiring submission to the Watchtower Society.

Slide 22

"We should eat and digest and assimilate what is set before us, without shying away from parts of the food because it may not suit the fancy of our mental taste . . . (continued....)

Slide 23

"We should meekly go along with the Lord's theocratic organization and wait for further clarification, rather than balk at the first mention of a thought unpalatable to us and proceed to quibble and mouth our criticisms and opinions as though they were worth more than the slave's provision of spiritual food. (continued....)

Slide 24

“Theocratic ones will appreciate the Lord's visible organization and not be so foolish as to put against Jehovah's channel their own human reasoning and sentiment and personal feelings.”

Slide 25

"It should be expected that the Lord would have a means of communication to his people on the earth, and he has clearly shown that the magazine called The Watchtower is used for that purpose.”

Slide 26

“We cannot claim to love God, yet deny his word and channel of communication.”

Slide 27

As can be seen in the previous quotes, the Watchtower does not believe that Jehovah's Witnesses can or should read the Bible for themselves or think independently.

Slide 28

A chilling example of that concept played out in a courtroom in 1954. Both Frederick W Franz (president 1978 - 1999 ) and Hayden C. Covington (former lawyer for the Watchtower Society) were in court supporting Douglas Walsh.

Slide 29

During the trial, it was admitted that the Watchtower Society had promulgated a false claim that they knew to be false. However, they insisted that individual members were obligated to believe the lie, whether or not it was true.

Slide 30

Anyone failing to believe the lie was subject to being excommunicated, which is believed to be a theological death sentence.

Slide 31

So, the Watchtower Society claims the right to lie to its members and insists that they must believe a known lie or be punished with the most extreme of punishments. Amazing.

Slide 32

Why do they have such great power?

Slide 33

The Watchtower Society explains that Jesus and Jehovah began inspecting all the worlds churches in 1914.

Slide 34

In 1919 they determined that only the Watchtower Society was faithful to God. At that time the Watchtower Society became God's Organization on earth. It is God's mouthpiece.

Slide 35

It is through this amazing claim that the Watchtower Society claims to be the only group able to interpret Scripture and to direct those who wish to follow Jehovah.

Slide 36

This date is dependent on 1914 being correct. If 1914 is wrong, this claim cannot be true. 1914 is wrong. Hence the claim to be God's visible organization is not true.

Slide 37

So it should be clear that it is not truth that motivates the Watchtower, but absolute control over what people think, believe, and do.

Slide 38

The Watchtower Organization claims God has bestowed on it the honor of being his one and only channel of communication. God did this because they were the only group of true believers practicing the true faith.

How do we know this is true? They say because their literature tells us. This is an example of circular reasoning. There is no outside referent. What demonstrates that the Watchtower Society has the truth. Only their claim that they do.

Slide 39

“New Light”

Slide 40

“New light” is the third theological concept that has made it possible for the Watchtower Society to invent and change doctrine as it desires.

Slide 41

With “new light” the governing body is supposed to be hearing directly from God. God is slowly refining and revealing truth to the Watchtower Society.

Slide 42

Many of their claims are unverifiable (e.g., Jesus is ruling in heaven with the 144,000 right now.) But when they have made claims that can be verified, they have yet to be right (1799, 1874, 1878, 1881, 1914, 1925, 1975).

Slide 43

So “new light” is the understanding that God parcels out his light to us slowly so he will not blind us. The light is getting brighter over time. This means new revelations continue to occur.

Slide 44

Since the Watchtower tells us it is the only organization that God works through, new light can come only through the Governing Body. New light is then dispensed through the Watchtower.

Slide 45

The doctrine is built upon the claim that Prov. 4:18 shows that God has been gradually developing Watchtower doctrine.

Slide 46

Prov. 4:18 (New Revised Standard Version) “But the path of the righteous is like the light of dawn, which shines brighter and brighter until full day.”

Slide 47

However, in context, the verse follows a common biblical theme. The wicked walk in darkness, the righteous walk in the light, so walk in the light.

Slide 48

It has nothing to do with God revealing doctrinal truth gradually or otherwise.

Slide 49

In addition, when Watchtower new light occurs it becomes evident that very often doctrine is not being refined, it is being changed.

Slide 50

Russell himself said that “new light” would not change doctrine but would gradually refine it. There would not be contradictions.

Slide 51

But this is not what we see. With blood transfusions, organ transplants, and vaccine use, we see examples, not of gradual development, but of abrupt changes and reversals. With the residents of Sodom and Gomorrah, we see multiple flip flops on their eternal destiny.

Slide 52

We will look at one example. It is of no real significance other than it clearly demonstrates contradictions and flip-flops in what is supposed to be “new light.”

Slide 53

The example is the fate of the men of Sodom and Gomorrah. For some reason, there arose a concern about the fate of those who had been in Sodom and Gomorrah. Were they beyond redemption? How does their fate fit with the Ransom doctrine? People wanted to know if they would be annihilated, or whether they would be raised to participate in the millennium and have a second chance at earning eternal life.

Slide 54

The Watchtower Society received “new light” several times regarding the status of those who had inhabited Sodom and Gomorrah. The different flashes of light did not add one on the other to provide new light, but instead contradicted one another. This was exactly what Russell warned about.

Slide 55

In the 1879 Watchtower, the men of Sodom and Gomorrah had a chance for redemption. However, in 1951 Jehovah made a different determination. Their redemption was an utter impossibility. In 1952, Jehovah affirmed his prior decision. They would not be resurrected.

Slide 56

However, in 1965, Jehovah reconsidered and the door for resurrection was again open for them. But, in 1967, Jehovah again reversed himself, and the men of Sodom and Gomorrah were faced with annihilation. Nevertheless, in 1974 Jehovah again was feeling more charitable and the men of Sodom and Gomorrah could look forward to resurrection.

Slide 57

However, 1982 and 1988 were bad years for the men of Sodom and Gomorrah, and they were again consigned to annihilation. The year was not totally bad, though, because while still in 1988 it was determined that Jehovah will resurrect some of the men of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Slide 58

Things were definitely looking up. It was determined that it was the city itself that would undergo eternal destruction. The men of Sodom and Gomorrah could sleep restfully.

Slide 59

Unfortunately, Jehovah rethought things, and in the latter part of 1988 and 1989, he finally decided to annihilate all of the men of Sodom and Gomorrah. On the positive side, according to Jehovah’s Witness doctrine, these men are asleep so have not had to endure the anxiety induced by Jehovah’s indecision.

Slide 60

We know that the God of the Bible is always the same. He does not lie or mislead people, and his judgment is perfect. These flashes of “new light” demonstrate as well as anything that the “new light” doctrine has led to serious error and implicates God in being dishonest.

Slide 61

Can any doctrine that suggests God does not know from one year to the next what is true, be true? Can any doctrine that suggests that God is misleading or deliberately playing with His people be true? The answer is clear: it cannot be true. “New light” is a false doctrine.

Slide 62

Since this false doctrine is the foundation of many of the teachings that have set the Jehovah’s Witnesses at odds with orthodox Christianity, the entire theological base of the Watchtower Society is suspect.

Slide 63

The Watchtower excuses its own doctrinal errors and changes as being due to eagerness or misunderstanding while branding the views of groups they do not agree with as being “false teachings” or “godless myths.”

Slide 64

How does the Watchtower deal with this problem?

Slide 65

One of the key problems with the concept of “new light” is this. Does God make mistakes?

Slide 66

The Watchtower Society does not claim inspiration. However, they demand that their material be treated as inspired. That is a word game.

Slide 67

Either they are inspired, and it is the word of God, or they are not inspired, and everyone should be able to take or leave what they publish as their opinion.

Slide 68

When they claim to have “new light” and it does not prove to be true, is God in error? After all, God was supposed to be the author of the “new light.”

Slide 69

When confronted with this paradox, sometimes they say that they are “just fallible men.” But there are multiple Bible verses that tell us not to depend upon fallible men.

Slide 70

So if they are fallible men, should we not stop listening to them?

Slide 71

If the God of the Watchtower keeps making errors, perhaps we should stop listening to Him as well. The God of the Bible does not lie and does not make errors.

PowerPoint Presentation for Thursday: Unique Issues in Watchtower Theology

Slide 1

Jehovah's Witness Theology Unique Issues

Slide 2

What Is the Gospel

Slide 3

For the average Evangelical Christian, it does not seem possible that there could be another Gospel. Scripture is very clear as to what the Good News is.

Slide 4

An evangelical defines the Gospel as the hope of forgiveness and eternal life found through faith in Jesus Christ.

Slide 5

It is the message Jesus proclaimed during His ministry and is seen in the recounting of Jesus' life, death, and resurrection.

Slide 6

This Gospel consists of a present salvation with a future hope of resurrection and eternal life.

Slide 7

On the other hand, Jehovah's Witnesses are not fond of the term 'Gospel'. While they do identify the four historical books of Jesus' life as Gospels, they use the term 'Good News' in place of the word 'Gospel' elsewhere.

Slide 8

For them, the 'Good News' has a strong emphasis on the Kingdom of God.

Slide 9

Jesus has been enthroned since 1914, the last days will end soon and Armageddon will occur.

Slide 10

Then God will raise the dead, and the millennium will begin.

Slide 11

The emphasis is directed at what Jehovah is doing. The Jehovah's Witness is to proclaim this coming Kingdom and be part of the Watchtower Society.

Slide 12

They must work hard to qualify for the eternal life that will be available at the end of the millennium.

Slide 13

In summary then, the typical evangelical understands that the Gospel is bound to what Jesus Christ has done on our behalf. The Gospel is a message directed to individuals and calling for a response.

Slide 14

The result of responding to the Gospel occurs in the present and leads to the forgiveness of sin, the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and eternal life.

Slide 15

The Jehovah's Witnesses believe the focus of the 'Good News' is the vindication of Jehovah's name and the development of Jesus' Kingdom on earth.

Slide 16

For the Jehovah's Witness the benefit of the 'Good News' is future. It will require much work here and will later lead to the forgiveness of sin and eternal life following a lengthy process of being perfected during the millennium.

Slide 17

Jehovah's Witnesses place a strong emphasis on sharing the 'Good News' that Jesus is currently enthroned and the Kingdom is coming. Because of this, Jehovah's Witnesses look forward to living in a restored new earth, a paradise where there will be order and everything will be stable.

Slide 18

They do not acknowledge the current forgiveness of sin, the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, or the reception of eternal life. Those benefits are found in the future.

Slide 19

Though there are many Bibles available, the door-to-door activity is considered essential.

Slide 20

This is because a person reading just the Bible without the assistance of the Watchtower will be unable to understand the 'Good News'.

Slide 21

One of Charles T. Russell's quotes helps us to understand why the individual Jehovah's Witnesses hold the positions they do. The Watchtower literature leads them astray.

Slide 22

“Not only do we find that people cannot see the divine plan in studying the Bible by itself, but we see also that if anyone lays the 'Scripture Studies' aside, even after he has used them, after he has become familiar with them, after he has read them for ten years—if he then lays them aside and ignores them and goes to the Bible alone, though he has understood his Bible for ten years, our experience shows that within two years he goes into darkness.

Slide 23

On the other hand, if he had merely read the 'Scripture Studies' with their references and not read a page of the Bible as such, he would be in the light at the end of two years, because he would have “the light of the scriptures.”

Slide 24

The claim that if someone reverted to reading only the Bible after having read the JW material, they would fall back into darkness, suggests that there is a significant difference between the JW material and the Bible.

Slide 25

Jehovah's Witnesses typically spend much more time studying JW materials than the Bible. When they study the Bible, it is always interpreted through the lens of JW writings.

Slide 26

The 144,000 and the Great Multitude

Slide 27

According to Jehovah's Witness eschatology (theology of the end times), a special class of believers is anointed. Those 144,000 will go directly to heaven at their death to rule and reign with Christ.

Slide 28

Russell believed that the Scriptures indicated that the “little flock” of Luke 12:32 and the sheep of John 10:1-15 were synonymous with the 144,000 of Revelation 7 and 14.

Slide 29

This is the most exalted class called the “little flock” or God's congregation.

Slide 30

Jehovah selected them to rule with him. The promises of the New Testament are for them. At death (since 1878), they immediately change, receiving a spiritual body and go directly to heaven to be with Jehovah.

Slide 31

Russell also taught that the time for the selection of those special individuals was to end in October of 1881. Rutherford extended the time for the selection of the elect to 1935.

Slide 32

The Great Multitude

Slide 33

Initially it was taught that the lukewarm and undiscerning Christians became part of the great multitude. At the time of the resurrection, they still would go to heaven, but rather than wearing a crown would serve Jesus and the 144,000 elect.

Slide 34

Even in heaven they will be resurrected not with spiritual bodies like the 144,000, but with fleshly bodies.

Slide 35

In addition, most of the New Testament DOES NOT APPLY to the great multitude. The promises of the New Testament are for the 144,000.

Slide 36

Rutherford, perhaps realizing that a 144,000 was not a large enough group for a growing denomination, made some startling changes.

Slide 37

In 1935, he announced in a presentation that it had been revealed that the great multitude was actually the grouping of faithful Jehovah's Witnesses. It was not made up of the lukewarm or of other denominations of Christendom.

Slide 38

In addition, it was revealed that rather than being in heaven, they would live on a recreated perfect earth.

Slide 39

Amazingly, this revelation was well received, and currently Jehovah's Witnesses are content to be relegated to a second hand status where most of the New Testament does not apply to them.

Slide 40

They are even comfortable in the belief that they have an earthly calling where they can anticipate a millennium of testing before they are adopted and given eternal life.

Slide 41

The Non-Believing World

Slide 42

There is another class of people that is neither the little flock nor the great multitude. This class of people consists of those who have not had enough exposure to Jehovah to understand fully what is required of them.

Slide 43

They are considered unrighteous, but when they die, the ransom removes the curse of original sin, and their own death pays for their personal sin. At the resurrection, they will be raised with physical bodies on the new earth

Slide 44

Those resurrected will learn of Jehovah and come to follow him. In the end, those who learn to be obedient to Jehovah will be adopted to eternal life. Those who rebel will be destroyed.

Slide 45

Current Jehovah's Witness doctrine teaches that in addition to the number of people deemed incorrigible, billions alive on earth will perish without hope of resurrection at Armageddon unless they have a relationship with Jehovah and the Watchtower Society.

Slide 46

Interestingly, there is very little difference between the fate of those in the great multitude and those who have not known or followed Christ. The exception to this would be if Armageddon occurred during their lifetime since Jehovah's Witnesses not in good standing and the lost would all perish with no hope of resurrection.

Slide 47

This is an excellent opportunity to discuss the interpretive method of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Their interpretation of Revelation is rooted in "new light" or divine revelation. "God told us."

Slide 48

However, in this case you cannot get there from here. No one reading the Bible and using good exegetical practices would ever understand that the 144,000 or the great multitude are who the Jehovah's Witnesses claim they are.

Slide 49

A plain reading of the verses speaking about the 144,000 and the great multitude IN CONTEXT could never be understood as the Watchtower teaches. This is an example of “new light” leading to an incorrect and heretical conclusion.

Slide 50

Even their understanding of the millennium is out of context. The Bible tells us who will be reigning with Christ during that thousand year period.

Slide 51

There simply is no two tier system of salvation in the Bible. The Bible does not teach that some Christians are fully saved while others will need to pass through a 1000 year period of probation.

Slide 52

Ransom Doctrine Or Atonement

Slide 53

The ransom doctrine is a keystone doctrine of Watchtower theology. Understanding this doctrine and its implications helps explain much of the rest of Watchtower theology.

Slide 54

The ransom doctrine has three important implications.

Slide 55

First, the ransom doctrine, as understood by Russell and then the Watchtower, argues against the deity of Jesus Christ.

Slide 56

Second, the development of the doctrine minimizes grace and makes people ultimately responsible for their own salvation.

Slide 57

Third, the doctrine gives support to the Watchtower position on the immortality of the soul, hell and resurrection.

Slide 58

Concerning the ransom sacrifice, Russell reasoned that God could only accept an equivalent or corresponding sacrifice to atone for Adam’s sin.

Slide 59

A perfect man for a perfect man, not a God for a man.

Slide 60

In addition to arguing against the deity of Christ the ransom doctrine undercuts the doctrine of grace. It has the paradoxical effect of placing humankind in a situation where each person is responsible for earning his or her own salvation.

Slide 61

Both the great multitude and the unbelieving world will be resurrected to live during the millennial period because the shed blood of Jesus has paid for original sin, inherited from Adam.

Slide 62

Russell believed the atonement of Christ was sufficient to bring every person to resurrection.

Slide 63

The Watchtower Society eventually came to understand that the ransom atonement removed original sin, but did not atone for the actual sins individuals committed. Fortunately, it was revealed that the death of the individual atoned for his or her own sin.

Slide 64

However, after their resurrection each person progresses toward adoption and immortality based on their own works. There is a one thousand year period of training and testing.

Slide 65

When the unrighteous are resurrected, will they be judged on the basis of their past actions? No, for Rom. 6:7 states, "The one who has died has been acquitted from his sin." The unrighteous will have paid for their sins by dying.

Slide 66

Thus, they will be judged on the basis of what they do after their resurrection, not what they did in ignorance before they died.

Slide 67

After resurrection, the unrighteous will have opportunity to learn God's laws, which will be revealed when symbolic scrolls are opened.

Slide 68

They will then be judged "according to their deeds," that is, whether they obey God's laws or not (Rev. 20:12, 13).

Slide 69

For many of the unrighteous, this will be, not a second chance, but their first real opportunity to gain eternal life on earth by learning and doing God's will.

Slide 70

While perhaps an interesting theological exercise, the Ransom Doctrine of the Watchtower Society is based in “new light.” It is not a biblical understanding of the atonement.

Slide 71

Wrong in so many ways, the entire edifice crumbles with a single verse (Heb. 9:27)

“And just as it is appointed for mortals to die once, and after that the judgment.”

Slide 72

Interestingly, since we now know according to the Watchtower that we will be resurrected with no sin in order to begin our 1000 year period of testing, why should we be concerned about doing things that lead to salvation?

Slide 73

But the Watchtower does lay out the things that we need to do to find God’s favor.

Slide 74

What Must I Do to Be Saved?

Slide 75

So if the atonement was solely to remove the sin of Adam, what is it that I must do to find full salvation?

Slide 76

“[Belief] involves taking in accurate knowledge of God’s purposes and his way of salvation. Then faith has to be exercised in Jesus Christ as the Chief Agent of salvation.

Slide 77

This places the Christian in a saved condition, but he must now persevere in doing God’s will and continue to adhere to all of God’s requirements for the rest of his life. Only then will he be saved to eternal life”

Slide 78

Requirement One: Accurate Knowledge

The first requirement, as stated above, is “taking in accurate knowledge of God’s purposes.” Specifically, this is knowledge of Christ’s role as “earth’s new King.”

Slide 79

Requirement Two: Avoid Debauchery

The second requirement is to refrain from “an immoral, debauched way of life.”

Slide 80

Requirement Three: Watchtower Membership

The Society states, “A third requirement is that we be associated with God’s channel, his organization” (i.e., the Watchtower Society).

Requirement Four: Proselytism.

The most pronounced manifestation of loyalty to the Society is proselytism. “God requires that prospective subjects of his Kingdom support his government by loyally advocating his Kingdom rule to others.” Serving as loyal spokesmen for the Society is “a sacred duty, a requirement on which our life depends.”

Slide 82

One might wonder how that fits with Eph. 2:8-10

“For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this is not from yourselves, it is the gift of God—not by works, so that no one can boast. 10 For we are God’s handiwork, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do.”

Slide 83

Christians believe that Jesus completed the work of salvation. On the cross he cried out, “It is finished.”

Slide 84

“We have been sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all” (Heb. 10: 10).

Slide 85

Salvation Is by Grace through Faith. The word “grace” literally means “unmerited favor.”

Slide 86

Eternal life cannot be earned. It is a free gift of grace that comes as a result of believing in the Savior, Jesus Christ. Jesus said, “Truly, truly, I say to you, he who believes has eternal life.”

Slide 87

“What must I do to be saved?” They replied, “Believe in the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved” (Acts 16: 31).

Side 88

The Resurrection Of Jesus

Slide 89

JWs teach, “The physical body of Jesus Christ was not allowed to decay into dust as did the bodies of Moses and David, men who were used to foreshadow Christ” (Deut. 34:5, 6; Act 13:35, 36, 2:27, 31).

Slide 90

When his disciples went to the tomb early on the first day of the week, Jesus’ body had disappeared, and the bandages with which his body had been wrapped were left in the tomb, his body doubtless having been disintegrated without passing through the process of decaying.—John 20:2-9; Luke 24:3-6.

Slide 91

Jesus’ own words showed that he would not be resurrected with his flesh-and-blood body. He said that he would give his “flesh in behalf of the life of the world,” as a ransom for mankind. (John 6:51; Matthew 20:28)

Slide 92

If he had taken back his flesh when he was resurrected, he would have canceled that ransom sacrifice. This could not have happened, though, for the Bible says that he sacrificed his flesh and blood “once for all time.”—Heb. 9:11, 12.

Slide 93

“God raised this One [Jesus Christ] up on the third day and granted him to become manifest, not to all the people, but to witnesses appointed beforehand by God” (Acts 10:40, 41).

(Why did not others see him too? It is because he was a spirit creature, and when, as angels had done in the past, he materialized fleshly bodies to make himself visible. He did so only in the presence of his disciples.)

Slide 94

However Christians teach differently:

Slide 95

Jesus physically rose from the dead. The resurrected Christ said, “See My hands and My feet, that it is I Myself; touch Me and see, for a spirit does not have flesh and bones as you see that I have” (Luke 24: 39 NASB).

Slide 96

Jesus told the Jews, “‘ Destroy this temple, and I will raise it again in three days’. The Jews replied, ‘It has taken forty-six years to build this temple, and you are going to raise it in three days?’ But the temple he had spoken of was his body” (John 2: 19-21).

Slide 97

The resurrected Christ ate physical food on four different occasions. He did this to prove that he had a real, physical body (Luke 24:30, 24:42-43; John 21:12-13; Acts 1: 4).

Slide 98

Christians believe . . . He lived a sinless life and died on the cross as the sinner's substitute, shedding His blood for the remission of sins. On the third day He rose from the dead in the body that had been laid in the tomb. . . .

Slide 99

The Cross

Slide 100

JWs say, “An important reason [Christians should not wear a cross] is that Jesus Christ did not die on a cross. The Greek word generally translated “cross” is stau·ros’. It basically means ‘an upright pole or stake.’”

Slide 101

There were some in the eighteenth century and beyond who believed the cross to be a simple upright stake. A number of the early church fathers described a cross with a cross bar. The NT is quite silent on the issue. History would seem to favor the traditional cross.

Slide 102

Suggestive biblical evidence for the cross would be the use of the plural of nail for the hands and the sign above His head. Tradition indicates Peter was crucified, and John 21:18-19 suggests that his arms were outstretched. This would not be possible on a stake.

Slide 103

The cross reflects the historic reality of that time. In addition, Charles Taze Russell use the design of a cross on his earliest publications. See the cover of the “Zion's Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence, October 1, 1907” below. The idea that a stake was used is a later addition.

Slide 104

Zion’s Watchtower features a cross on the cover

Slide 105

The Return of Christ

Slide 106

JWs teach, “The year Christ returned invisibly to begin his rule was 1914. [It had been 1874.] The Kingdom of God is a Sovereign-empowered theocratic government under an administration of divinely appointed Kings. Jehovah himself is the everlasting King (1 Tim. 1:17; Rev. 15:3; Jer. 10:10). He has taken into association as co-regent his Son Christ Jesus.

Slide 107

God has purposed the Kingdom as the capital or ruling part of his universal organization. It is comprised of the King Christ Jesus and 144,000 associate kings taken from among men. It is entirely heavenly, having no earthly part. All becoming members must be resurrected and given spirit bodies.

Slide 108

At times the term "kingdom" is applied to the one (in the Scriptures, Christ) who has the rank, quality, attributes, and authority of a king. The term also is used to refer to the realm over which the Kingdom government exercises control. This Kingdom began operation in full power with the enthronement of Christ in the heavens, AD 1914.

Slide 109

Before leaving the earth Christ promised to return again according to God's purpose to establish his kingdom, to rule amidst his enemies, to judge the nations, and to bring salvation and deliverance to faithful mankind.

Slide 110

This second presence (par.ou.si'a) of Christ the Messiah was to be invisible, and the unmistakable sign he gave shows conclusively that this return of Christ began in the year 1914.

Slide 111

Since that time Christ has turned his attention toward earth's affairs and is dividing the peoples and educating the true Christians in preparation for their survival during the great storm of Armageddon when all unfaithful mankind will be destroyed from the face of the earth.

Slide 112

His return is recognized by the eyes of one's understanding, such eyes being enlightened by God's unfolding Word. Christ's arrival and presence are not discerned because of a visible bodily nearness, but by the light of his acts of judgment and the fulfillment of Bible prophecy. This light spreads from east to west and everywhere.

Slide 113

Today the evidence of Christ's presence is all about us, and yet so-called "Christendom" does not see it. How, then, is he manifest to his true followers and not to the world? To his followers he gave the promise: "Happy are those slaves whom the master on arriving finds watching!"

Slide 114

“Truly I say to you, He will gird himself and make them recline at the table and will come alongside and minister to them” (Luke 12 :37, NW). The Master Jesus is the provider of this spiritual food, "food at the proper time," and he provides it through a visible instrument or agency on earth used to publish it to his slaves.

Slide 115

Christians do not believe Jesus returned invisibly in 1914. There is no warrant for that belief.

“‘Men of Galilee,’ they said, ‘why do you stand here looking into the sky? This same Jesus, who has been taken from you into heaven, will come back in the same way you have seen him go into heaven’” (Acts 1:11).

Slide 116

Rev. 1:7 notes, “Every eye will see him.” In Titus 2: 13 Paul speaks of “looking for the blessed hope and the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior, Christ Jesus.”

Neither seems to indicate an invisible return.

Failed Prophecies

The Organization has often denied infallibility yet it tells us that the revelations of God are brought to it by either angels or the Holy Spirit. They tell us that the prophecies of the future are from God. So, therefore, since these are prophecies of the future, they are at least in theory, God's Word to us. What does God's Word say about Prophets?

Slide 3

1. "When a prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, if the word does not come to pass or come true, that is a word that the Lord has not spoken; the prophet has spoken it presumptuously. You need not be afraid of him" (Deut. 18:22 ESV).

Slide 4

Since we recognize that failed prophecies are a problem for the credibility of an individual or of an organization, let's look at the prophetic disasters that the Jehovah's Witnesses have weathered across the years.

Slide 5

1799

Slide 6

The Second Adventist believed that the book of Daniel predicted a 1260 year period that would begin the year Gentile reign began. That time was decided to be AD 539. Adding 539 to 1260 brings the calculation to 1799. The was the beginning of the end.

Slide 7

1874

Slide 8

The Millennial Reign Began in 1873

"The Bible chronology herein presented shows that the six great 1000 year days beginning with Adam are ended, and that the great 7th Day, the 1000 years of Christ's Reign, began in 1873."

Slide 9

Calculating the number of years man had been on the earth, 6000 was a special time. It would stand for the sixth day of creation. The next thousand years would be the Sabbath rest. The Second Adventist believed 1874 was the date. It was taught by Russell that Jesus returned to Earth invisibly.

Slide 10

Slide 11

Prophetic events were believed to mirror important events that had happened previously. If Jesus had returned in 1874, we need only to know what Jesus' ministry lasted three and a half years. Then he returned to heaven. So when 1878 comes about, it is expected that the church will be raptured.

Slide 12

Nothing appears to happen, but Russell begins to teach that actually the dead in Christ, at least the anointed ones, went to be with Jesus and begin ruling and reigning with him. No anointed believer has to be concerned with death. Now they know they will go immediately to be with Jesus.

1881

Slide 14

Charles Taze Russell believed that the fall of 1881 was the closing of the ranks of the anointed ones. After that anyone who followed God would belong to the great multitude.

1914

Slide 16

Year was selected by looking at Daniel chapter 4. The time of the Gentiles would be 2520 years (7x360). This would start at the destruction of Judah. The chosen date was 607 BC.

Slide 17

The event was supposed to be the END of the world. Armageddon was occur, Jesus was returning and the dead were to be resurrected to begin the thousand year millennium where they would be perfected.

Slide 18

Some problems exist. First, no particular reason exists why the verse in Daniel would have a second fulfillment. None of the others do. Second, there is nothing about the Gentile Times in the Daniel passage. Third, the years are predicted on a lunar cycle, but imposed on a solar cycle. Fourth, the year/day scheme is fiction, and fifth, the date 607 is demonstrably in error.

Slide 19

Nothing happened in 1914 (that the Watchtower predicted). But the date was not abandoned. First it was claimed things would unfold over the next year, and finally it was dropped as the end. However...

Slide 20

The date was repurposed. It was said to be the BEGINNING of the end. In 1932 it became the date that Jesus returned to earth invisibly. It was also claimed the saints were also to have been resurrected to reign with Jesus.

In 1943, 1914 replaced 1799, 1874, 1878, and 1881. All those replaced dates were previously known to be correct and certain.

Slide 21

1918

Slide 22

1917 Armageddon Has Begun

“The present great war in Europe is the beginning of the Armageddon of the scriptures.”

Slide 23

Since Jesus returned in 1914 (as opposed to 1874), and we know he ministered for 3.5 years the end was now said to be 1918.

When this did not occur, it was taught that in 1918 Jehovah and Jesus came and inspected the churches of the world. Unfortunately Christendom had failed to carry out God’s will. Only the Watchtower was deemed faithful.

Slide 24

Slide 25

Based on the inspection of 1918 (later changed to 1914) the Watchtower was found to be the only faithful organization on earth. As a result God made the Watchtower Society the only contact point on earth people have with Jehovah. Jehovah would use the Society as his means to deliver spiritual food to the world.

Slide 26

Only through The Watchtower Society Can Man Know God.

Slide 27

1925

Slide 28

1918 prediction

The Saints Will Be Resurrected in 1925

“Therefore we may confidently expect that 1925 will mark the return of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and the faithful prophets of old, particularly those named by the Apostle in Hebrews 11, to the condition of human perfection.”

Slide 29

From 1922

Jesus Will Return in 1925

“The date 1925 is even more distinctly indicated by the Scriptures than 1914.”

Slide 30

From 1923

Jesus Will Return in 1925

“Our thought is that 1925 is definitely settled by the Scriptures. As to Noah, the Christian now has much more upon which to base his faith than Noah had upon which to base his faith in a coming deluge.”

Slide 31

Rutherford developed a belief, with a weak scriptural foundation, that in 1925 the Old Testament saints would return and paradise on earth would begin.

Slide 32

This belief was widely spread. It was heralded under the heading “Millions Now Living Will Never Die.” There was a large influx but after the prediction failed many left the organization.

Slide 33

Comment in 1925

“The year 1925 is here. With great expectation Christians have looked forward to this year. Many have confidently expected that all members of the body of Christ will be changed to heavenly glory during this year. This may be accomplished. It may not be. In his own due time God will accomplish his purposes concerning his people. Christians should not be so deeply concerned about what may transpire this year.”

Slide 34

1975

Slide 35

In 1943 the time of the end was again calculated. The end of the 6000 years was determined to be 1975. As the time approached there was preaching and teaching the end was near. Many went into full time publishing and many joined the Watchtower Society.

Slide 36

Jesus Will Return in 1975

“Why are you looking forward to 1975?” . . .

“And yet the end of that sixth creative “day” could end within the same Gregorian calendar year of Adam’s creation. It may involve only a difference of weeks or months, not years.”

Slide 37

“Just think , brothers, there is only 90 months left before 6000 years of man’s existence on earth is completed. . . . The majority of people living today will probably be alive when Armageddon breaks out.”

Slide 38

When the date did not come to pass, the organization blamed over zealous members for the pronouncements, and it was years before they took any responsibility. People had quit their jobs, not married, delayed having children, sold their homes all based on another false prophecy.

Slide 39

Minor Dates

Slide 40

1940 Armageddon Is Eminent within the Year. “The year 1940 is certain to be the most important year yet, because Armageddon is very near.”

Slide 41

1941 Jesus Will Return in Months

“Receiving the gift, the marching children clasped it to them, not a toy or plaything for idle pleasure, but the Lord’s provided instrument for most effective work in the remaining months before Armageddon.”

Slide 42

1946 Armageddon is “At the Door”

“. . . the disaster of Armageddon, greater than that which befell Sodom and Gomorrah, is at the door.”

Slide 43

None of these prophecies ever came to pass. People quit jobs, avoided having children, failed to seek higher education, sold their homes and worked for free for the Watchtower believing these prophecies were true. To what end? They were deceived by a false prophecy, from a false prophet, based in a false religion.

Slide 44

- 1878- The Rapture to occur
- 1914-Armageddon coming, the world ending
- 1925-Armageddon coming, the world ending
- 1940-Armageddon coming, the world ending
- 1975-Armageddon coming, the world ending
- 5 Swings, 5 misses

Slide 45

The Bible is clear that we should not follow someone who has made a false prophecy. All of the preceding prophecies were false. This should, at a very minimum, create a high degree of skepticism about the claims of the Watchtower Society. Unfortunately JW's are seemingly immune to arguments regarding false prophecies.

Slide 46

Issues Within The Jehovah's Witnesses

Slide 47

Vaccines

Slide 48

Vaccines for smallpox were being done before the Watchtower Society was chartered. There was concern on the part of some that vaccines were a health hazard. This was becoming more of an issue as vaccines for rabies, tetanus, diphtheria and pertussis were developed.

Slide 49

As mandatory vaccinations became more common in areas of high population, there was push back. There was a lot of ignorance about medical things, and some outrageous negative claims were made in the Golden Age during the 1920s. In 1931 someone successfully linked vaccine use and the injunctions not to consume blood. Vaccines were prohibited for Jehovah's Witnesses.

Slide 50

The ban was in effect until 1952 although it was being ignored by some Witnesses by the early 1940s. During the years that the ban was in effect, smallpox, and diphtheria were still real public health issues. In addition, polio was just becoming a major threat. It is certain that the policy led to unnecessary deaths among the Witnesses.

Slide 51

The prohibition was based on Gen. 9:4; Lev.17:10, and Acts 15:28, 29, verses that appear to have little to do with vaccinations, organ transplants, or blood transfusions.

Slide 52

Organ Transplants

Slide 53

The first organ transplant was in 1869. A physician successfully performed a simple skin graft. It would be 37 years later in 1906 before medicine had advanced enough to do a corneal transplant. In 1954 the first kidney transplant was done.

Slide 54

By 1963 lungs were transplanted. In 1966 there was a successful pancreas transplant followed in 1967 by a successful liver transplant. Also in 1967 there was the first successful heart transplant. In 1968 a successful bone marrow transplant was done.

Slide 55

Transplants were becoming common, and in 1961 the Watchtower noted there was no problem. However, in 1967 organ transplants were described as cannibalistic and were prohibited. The ban was maintained until 1980.

Slide 56

During this time Jehovah's Witnesses that would have otherwise lived, died because of this policy. So for 13 years there was a ban because God did not want His people to engage in cannibalism. But in 1980 God reversed his position, going back to the original position that transplants were a matter of personal choice.

Slide 57

Also during this time period outrageous claims were made about blood transfusions and transplants. Claims that are quite embarrassing as they revealed a very real lack of understanding about the human body.

Slide 58

Blood Transfusions

Slide 59

Blood transfusions are life saving and medically necessary. When the Watchtower Society adopts a theologically inept position and bans a life saving procedure for all of its people, it is unforgivable. Some 33,000 men, women and children have died because of this tragic policy. They have feared displeasing God and losing the opportunity to have eternal life. Their faithfulness is impressive, the organizations willingness to sacrifice its members or a changing policy is evil.

Slide 60

Blood transfusion were done as early as 1900, and primitive blood banks existed in the late 1920s to the mid 1930s. The Watchtower Society praised individuals who gave blood to save lives. In 1931 an article in the Golden Age undercut the idea that a transfusion was eating blood. The article, written in opposition to vaccines, was concerned about animal blood coming into contact with humans.

Slide 61

However, in 1945 the same article that caused vaccines to be banned resurfaced. Following an evaluation, the Watchtower Society banned blood products. Now, 73 years later, whole blood is still banned.

Slide 62

That is about half the story though. Blood can be broken down into components. Gradually blood components were approved, disapproved, and approved again. Finally almost all blood components can be used, but whole blood still cannot be used. So the question must be asked, if it is okay to use the components why is blood still forbidden? Many Jehovah's Witnesses are unaware of how much of the blood can be used. People still refuse blood and die.

Slide 63

Up to 1961 taking blood was not a disfellowshipping offense, but between 1961 and 2000, it was. Currently it is not, but if the individuals are not repentant, they are considered to have dissociated themselves, which is essentially the same.

Slide 64

Disfellowshipping

Slide 65

Prior to 1952 the Watchtower Society said pagan religions and Catholics practiced disfellowshipping. However the Watchtower was becoming more and more totalitarian. They needed the tool of disfellowshipping to maintain tight control.

Slide 66

Disfellowshipping as it is currently practiced is used for many more situations that biblically indicated. It is also much harsher than the biblical version.

Slide 67

Disfellowshipping is very hard on the Jehovah's Witness. Because they are socially isolated and taught to fear the world, the idea of being put out is frightening. In addition, all of your family, all of your friends, and all of the people you routinely associate with are about to stop loving you, and they will treat you as if you no longer exist. They are forbidden to have contact with you.

Slide 68

This leads to emotional pain, loneliness, depression, and sometimes suicide. It tears apart families and is the antithesis of love.

Child Sex Abuse

Slide 70

There is an official policy that states that two witnesses are required to have a judicial hearing and punish a sin. In addition, until recently the Watchtower considered sexual child abuse a moral, not a legal issue. In short the Watchtower Society created a happy hunting ground for pedophiles.

Slide 71

To this day they refuse to change the two witness rule to allow investigation and action when a victim reports his or her abuse. So this creates a situation where the victim is forced to continue to attend services with his or her abuser.

Slide 72

Hearings have been held in several countries, and there are THOUSANDS of victims of sexual abuse. Fortunately people outside the organization are working to be sure that sexual crimes are reported and that all legal options are pursued. Several high dollar lawsuits have been successfully waged against the Watchtower.

Slide 73

Unfortunately, in every case the Watchtower has protected its interest at the expense of the victims. The situation today is better in that people are more aware of the situation, but it continues because of the Watchtowers unwillingness to clean house.

Slide 74

Dishonest Scholarship

Slide 75

The Watchtower has a well deserved reputation for intellectual dishonesty. What does this mean? It means that the Watchtower Society has been caught . . .

Slide 76

. . . using Bible versions that alter the translation to fit the Watchtower theology at the expense of accuracy and legitimate translation such as “a god” in John 1:1 and adding the word other to verses in Col. 1:16, or mistranslating an entire word or inserting the title Jehovah in the New Testament where there is NO evidence that it was ever present.

Slide 77

1. Selectively quoting authorities that are very liberal to make a point against orthodox believers when those same sources would deny every tenet of Christianity
2. Partially quoting sources to make it sound like they support the Watchtower position when the opposite is true
3. Incorrectly quoting conservative authors in such a way that the quote makes them say something that they would never say

Slide 78

Watch for ellipses. Those are little dots . . . that sometimes appear between words. Those indicate that something has been left out. A reputable scholar would use them if the content left out did not affect the meaning of the passage. The disreputable scholar leaves out information that discredits their position because its absence causes it to appear that they are correct.

Slide 79

Also watch for Scripture that is pulled out of context or that is added in a supportive fashion, but is irrelevant to the question at hand.

Be careful of bad logic, and the Watchtower misrepresenting conservative beliefs.

Slide 80

Reading or discussing Jehovah's Witness material requires paying very close attention. It is easy to be deceived.

Slide 81

Conclusion

Slide 82

The Watchtower Society and its followers are a virulent theological and sociological cult preying on individuals who are insecure, lonely or unfulfilled.

Slide 83

The group recruits individuals into the Watchtower organization and ultimately demands total obedience to its culture and teachings while discouraging independent thinking.

Slide 84

The Watchtower Society is harmful to those who participate. It takes away self-autonomy, requires the refusal of certain lifesaving medical care and in the past has forced its adherents to maintain political positions that have led to death and imprisonment.

Slide 85

More importantly, the Watchtower Society falsely claims that it is God's only organization on earth, a claim that is demonstrably false. Multiple lines of evidence lead to that conclusion.

Slide 86

There is not one shred of evidence demonstrating that they are God's organization, other than their own self-serving proclamation. Even the history of their being bestowed with this honor can be shown to be false by examining the dates used to arrive at 1914.

Slide 87

Bad Theology

The Watchtower Society has a different Jesus and a different Holy Spirit.

They have create a works based system that claims that the death of the man Jesus was adequate only to bring them to a sinless state.

Slide 88

They insist that their salvation will be the result of their work towards perfection during the millennium. Those who work diligently at serving Jehovah and being obedient to Jesus and the 144,000 will ultimately be adopted by Jehovah into eternal life on earth. They also teach that the promises of the New Testament apply to only the elect 144,000.

Damage to Members

The organization is harmful to the individual members. It does not allow any type of independent thinking. They insist that a person believe a lie rather than protest an error. People are compelled to believe things they do not understand, or even worse, believe things that they suspect might be wrong.

Slide 90

The Watchtower Society is a totalitarian organization controlling all of life. Conformity is valued over truth.

Slide 91

The organization has little concern for its own members. The policies it has enacted have caused grievous harm. The Watchtower Society is either hopelessly ignorant or deeply malevolent.

Slide 92

The current blood transfusion policies have led to the deaths of thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses, including many children. The two-witness rule has led to thousands of children being sexually molested.

Slide 93

However, the organization will not change the two Witness rule and continues to be slow to report child abuse unless compelled. The Watchtower Society has placed the interest of the organization over that of the victims.

Location: Classes to be taught at Freedom House

Class One Outline

Title: What is a Cult and how do they recruit?

Content: Chapter 1 describes Watchtower recruiting techniques. It has four sections. The first is a brief sketch of JW activity in Belize. The second and third sections describe how JWs attempt to break the pre-existing bonds that believers have with their own church and to develop new bonds with the Watchtower. The fourth section is to help people avoid the Watchtower’s web of deception.

Objectives:

1. The student will be able to identify a key component of a theological cult.
2. The student will be able to identify a key component of a sociological cult.
3. The student will be able to identify a key factor that attracts people to the Watchtower.
4. The student will recognize that the Watchtower keeps its people dependent upon itself for Bible knowledge.
5. The student will recognize that the Watchtower frequently challenges the Trinity while recruiting.

Equipment: Pre and posttest, change scale, projector, screen and computer

Methods: didactic interactive, visual PowerPoints

Content: Pages 3-24 of thesis

PPT: see appendix:

Class Three Outline

Title: Three Central Theological Points Undergirding the Watchtower

Content: Chapter 3 examines three factors that have helped to shape the Watchtower Society.

The first section examines how the early doctrine was developed, the second examines the importance place on the organization itself and the third looks at the concept of New Light.

Objectives:

1. The student will recognize that the Watchtower teaches that individuals cannot interpret the Bible.
2. The student will recognize that the Watchtower Society requires absolute obedience to its teachings.
3. The student recognize how the Watchtower Society maintains an authoritarian or totalitarian control over Jehovah's Witnesses.
4. The student will be able to recognize the concept of "new light".
5. The student will recognize that Russell's Theology was a collection of beliefs others had made popular.

Equipment: projector, computer, Screen, pre and posttest.

Content: pages 79-114 of thesis

PPT : See appendix

Class Four Outline

Title: Major Topics in Jehovah's Witness Theology

Content: Chapter 4 examines theology that varies from traditional Christianity. Seven brief sections discuss the Gospel, the 144,000 and the great multitude, the ransom doctrine, who is Jesus, salvation, the Kingdom and the nature of man.

Objectives:

1. The student will recognize what a Jehovah's Witness means when they talk about the Good News.

2. The student will recognize what the Watchtower teaches about the non-anointed members who die.
3. The student will recognize the great multitude and its destiny.
4. The student will be recognize that the benefits of the New Testament apply only to the little flock.
5. The student will recognize the biblical problems associated with the Watchtower teaching of the 144,000.

Equipment: pre and posttest, screen, projector, and computer

Evaluation Forms

Change Scale

If you were to be approached by a likable and apparently knowledgeable Jehovah’s Witness who invited you to have a Bible Study, how open would you be to investigating their views if he/she seemed to present himself/herself well?

One Hundred percent means that you would not ever consider investigating their views.

Fifty percent means that you are open to see what they have to say, you have no bias.

Zero percent means you are looking for something different and you would like to check out their beliefs to see if you could join.

At this moment, what would you rate your openness to investigating their views?
